Much more abject was the downfall of his successor, the third Napoleon, that September day in 1870, when he was compelled to resign both crown and sword. Surrounded in Sedan by an overwhelming host of the enemy, 10,000 of his men dead or taken prisoners, his army demoralized under a deluge of death from five hundred guns, he realized that the end had come. Then, with the white flag of defeat fluttering over his citadel, he wrote to the Prussian King this pathetic note: "Brother,—Not able to die at the head of my troops. I place my sword at your Majesty's feet.—Napoleon."

But France was not yet beaten. Marshall Bazaine still had a large army under his command; but he, too, was in a perilous plight, for he was shut up in Metz, by a German force as great as his own. When sortie after sortie was repulsed with heavy loss and he realized that escape was impossible, he tried to save his army by surrendering Metz. But to his overtures Bismark returned the haughty answer, "I occupy France with more than a million men, and I make no peace with a marshal. The surrender must be unconditional."

And on October 27th Bazaine capitulated, and three marshals, 600 officers, and 173,000 men laid down their arms and became prisoners of war. For Bazaine a worse fate was reserved; for he was later tried by court-martial and sentenced to degradation and exile—a sentence which was commuted to one of twenty years' imprisonment.

Economical to the Last.

There was once a Scotsman who was down in the world without hope, with only threepence in his pocket. He decided on suicide and, entering a chemist's shop, asked for threepennyworth of arsenic. "What do you want it for?" demanded the chemist. "Twopence," said the Scotsman.

The Effect.

"Mathilde, throw that poor beggar a woman.

"Ah, yes, he looks very unhappy."

"Not on that account, but the Meyers are watching us from their window opposite."

His Jobs.

"Hicks has a job I wouldn't care for —pouring mutton suet in a foundry."

"Must be hot work."

"Too hot! He perspires at every pore."

SAVED A DOUGLAS.

Sir William Ramsay's Quick Wit at the Battle of Poitiers.

In the battle of Poitiers (1356) a number of Scottish soldiers fought on the side of the French, and several of them were taken prisoners by the English, among them was Sir Archibald Douglas. Being dressed in a suit of splendid armor, the victors thought they had captured—as indeed they had—some great nobleman. Several of the English were about to strip off his armor when Sir William Ramsay of Colluthie, who was also a prisoner, happening to catch Sir Archibald's eye, gave him a meaning look.

Pretending to be very angry, he cried out: "You rascal, how is it that you are wearing your master's armor? Come here and pull off my boots!" Douglas, seemingly thoroughly cowed, went humbly forward and drew off a boot, with which Sir William began to beat him. The English onlookers at once interfered on Douglas' behalf, saying that he was a person of great rank and a lord.

"What!" shouted Ramsay. "He a lord? Why, he is a base knave and, I suppose, has slain his master. Go, you villain, and search the field for the body of my cousin, your master, and when you have found it let me know, that I may give it decent burial."

All this was acted so naturally that the English allowed Ramsay to ransom the pretended manservant for 40 shillings. The money having been paid, Sir William gave Douglas another thrashing and then bade him begone. Sir Archibald lost no time in effecting his escape, which he owed solely to the ingenuity of his friend.

JULIET'S BALCONY.

It Looks Just as It Did When Romeo Wooed the Sweet Veronese.

This was the home of the Capulets, from whom descended Juliet, for whom so many kind hearts have wept and of whom the poets have sung.

You read the words on a tablet by the side of a tall and slender gray house in a quiet street of Verona. A few steps farther on the busy life of the old city is centered in the market place and in the one or two streets that lead from it. You stand in front of the lightly built dwelling, and you look at the slim balcony of wood from which bent forward the form of the radiant girl whose undying love story has echoed down the ages. It is an autumn day, and within the rail of the narrow framework some one has placed red flowers in tall green pots. A curtain at the little window moves in the breeze, and you expect at any moment to see the dainty form of Juliet appear and to hear a rippling laugh fall from her lips.

A woman steps from the room beyond, through the open window and stands to listen. She has a child in her arms, and he claps his hands, laughing and crowing, no doubt just as the beloved Veronese did centuries ago. The mother hushes him, for she is intently listening to the market cries. In the midst of that everyday life walks the immortal Juliet.—London Telegraph.

Respect for the Sabbath.

"All over Scotland," observed a well-known golfer, "the Sabbath is respected in a most remarkable way. Golfing one day in the autumn on the St. Andrew's links, I said to my caddie:

"'Angus, man, the leaves are falling. The green is turning red and brown. Winter will soon be upon us. And do you get much caddying to do in the winter, Angus?'

"Angus frowned gloomily.

"'Na, na,' said he, blowing his nose. 'There's nae muckle caddyin' in winter. If it's no snaw it's frost, if it's no frost it's snaw; if it's neither frost nor snaw it's rain, an' if it's fine it's sure to be the Sawbath.'"

Great Woman Labor Scheme.

It is reported that the British Board of Agriculture are framing a great scheme, for the employment of female labor on the land, and an active canvass may shortly be commenced. Four hundred thousand women will be required to take the places of the male agriculturists who have joined the colors.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Attractiveness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

A SUFFERER FROM KIDNEY TROUBLE FOR TWO YEARS.

When the kidneys get ill the back gives out. But the back is not to blame. The ache comes from the kidneys, which lie under the small of the back.

Therefore, dull pain in the back, or sharp, quick twinges, are warnings of sick kidneys—warnings of kidney trouble.

Plasters and liniments will not cure the bad back, for they cannot reach the kidneys which cause it.

Doan's Kidney Pills reach the kidneys themselves. They are a special kidney and bladder medicine. They heal the diseased surface of the kidneys and bladder, and help them to act freely and naturally.

Miss Mary A. Northrop, Cole's Island, N.B., writes: "I have been a sufferer from kidney trouble for two years. I tried quite a number of remedies, but they did me no good. My mother got me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, and they did me so much good that I got the second one, and when I had taken that I was completely cured."

Doan's Kidney Pills, are the original kidney pills. See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is on every box. Price, 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

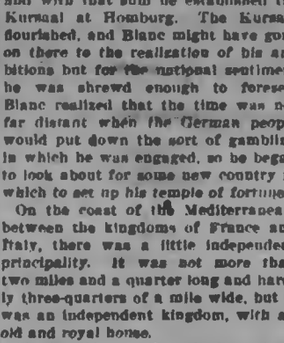
EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.



The woman who likes to have "quaintness" brought out in the trimming idea for a dress skirt will be quite won over to the model illustrated under No. 7,098. It may also be made without the ruffles, conservative in style, but with a generous sweep. It expresses the artistic in a very modest way.

This model has eight gores and may be built on a high or regulation waistline. Of course, the beauty of the skirt does not entirely depend upon the baby ruffles that are three deep in rounded or circular outline and stitched to the lower part of the side front and side back gores. There being twelve in all, the greatest amount of fulness would seem to be distributed at the sections of the skirt where they are built ups above the other.

Without the ruffles this skirt is one with lines unerring in taste, and, lacking adornment, bears the mark of satisfaction. The upper edges of the eight gores are gathered so that the garment just ripples in its fall to about ankle length.

The pattern is cut in sizes 22, 24, 26, 28 and 30 inch waist measure. To make in size 24 waist will require 3¾ yards 36 inch material. This will give a width of 2¼ yards to the lower edge.

To obtain the pattern send only [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

How You May Throw Away Your Glasses

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can dispense with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Dissolve one Bon-Opto tablet in ¼ glass of water. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefits from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and use it; you may so strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind, or nearly so, or who wear glasses might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late! Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, no better one if you can, like many others. get clear, healthy, strong magnetic eyes through the prescription here given. French Troops Have Made Further Gains in the Caillette Woods

Numerous Aerial Engagements Along the Western Front ---German Aircraft Shot Down---Enemy Onslaughts in the Lorraine District Were Repulsed---German Chancellor's Speech to the Reichstag.

ATTITUDE TOWARDS AMERICA

PARIS, April 5.—French troops have made further gains in trench fighting in the Caillette Woods, south of Douaumont, the War Office reported this afternoon. A squadron of French aeroplanes engaged in a great air raid on the stations at Nantillois and Damvillers. Fourteen shells were dropped on Nantillois and five on Damvillers Station. In fifteen other air engagements along the Verdun front, a German plane was brought down near Haut Fournaeux and another near Milly, and a third German aircraft fell within its own lines. Excepting French gains south of Douaumont and the intense bombardment of the Moulainville Chatillon, there was no important activity on the Verdun front. West of the Meuse the night was calm. Near Chatillon the Germans threw twenty-two mines against the French barriers, and all exploded without damage. In Lorraine the Germans launched several attacks against the sector between Arracourt and Saint Martin, after a violent bombardment. The onslaughts were all repulsed.

BERLIN ADMITS A FRENCH SUCCESS

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, April 5.—The French troops have re-occupied a fortified hill north-east of Haumont, on the west bank of the Meuse, the War Office admitted this afternoon. French attacks on the east bank of the Meuse, in the Caillette Wood, were repulsed.

"Artillery engagements in the Verdun and Argonne districts continue with undiminished vigor," said the official statement. "The situation generally is unchanged. On the west bank of the Meuse, the French, hindered by the Germans, again occupied the hill north-east of Haumont, east of the Meuse, on the sector of Fort Douaumont.

"On the eastern front, Russian artillery increased its fire before Narocz and Vissnieo Lakes."

GERMAN CHANCELLOR'S SPEECH

Special to The Examiner.

BERLIN, April 5.—Speaking to the crowded Reichstag galleries, Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg made to-day what was judged by his hearers to be the most comprehensive speech of the whole war. After an optimistic review of the whole situation, he said: "The spirit of union shall lead us and shall lead our children and grand-children through the struggles of their fathers towards a future of strength and liberty."

Von Bethmann Hollweg vigorously protested against reports that Germany now, or in the future, contemplates any aggressive act against any part of America. "The last offspring of the campaign of calumnies directed against us," he said, "is the report that after the end of this war we shall rush against the American Continent and shall attempt to conquer Canada as our first province. We fight for our existence and our future, for Germany, and for no foot of foreign soil. Germany's sons are bleeding and dying on the battlefield. Everybody among us knows this, and that makes our hearts and nerves strong. This moral strength strengthens our will, not only in order to weather the final storm, but also for final victory."

Germans Trying to Impress Neutrals

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 5.—On land, sea, and in the air the Germans are now striking with attacks of unparalleled fierceness, presumably to offset in the minds of neutrals and their own people, the results of the Paris conference of the Allies.

Four Zeppelin attacks in as many days, torpedoings averaging four daily, and mighty hammerings at the gates of Verdun, bear evidence that the Kaiser has ordered a great demonstration of his military and naval strength. The three phases of the Teutonic renewed offensive opened simultaneously with the closing of the Allied ring of steel around the Central Empires.

The repulse of every German attack in the Verdun region further confirms the belief here in the impregnability of the French defences north-east of Verdun.

The next great German blow is expected to fall against Bethincourt and the positions north-west of Verdun.

British Lines Are Extended Says Foe

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, April 5.—Hard pressed by the Germans at Verdun, France has asked Britain to extend the British lines from the River Somme to the bend of the French line at Soissons, according to information received here to-day. By this shift 150,000 French troops would be released for action on the Verun front.

The Italian War Minister Resigns

Special to The Examiner:

ROME, April 5.—Minister of War General Zupelli and Under Secretary for War General Elia have resigned, it was officially announced to-day.

General Morone has become Minister of War and General Alfieri will succeed General Elia.

Reports Big Contracts Have Been Cancelled

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 5.—A New York report to-day declares that the Imperial Munitions Commission has cancelled twenty-five millions of munition contracts in the United States because of irregularities, which would have netted tremendous "rake offs" for certain agents. Asked about it this morning, Mr. J. W. Flavelle, chairman of the Commission, would not confirm the report. It is thought here that Col. Wesley Allison will meet Sir Sam Hughes in New York on returning from England, and that they will reach Ottawa together in time for the opening of the enquiry.

NO OPPOSITION TO PROHIBITION ACT YESTERDAY

Ontario Temperance Act Passed Second Reading Without a Division—Fine Speeches Made By the Leaders

WAS A NOTABLE DAY

At 11 o'clock last night after a debate that had been in progress for nearly six hours the Ontario Temperance Act, the first direct prohibitory legislation this province has ever had passed the crucial stage in the Legislature, and is now ready for consideration of its details in committee. Second reading was given the bill without a division of the House, and without even a suggestion of opposition from any source. There were in the House at the time several members who had earlier in the session declared that they would oppose the bill, but in the face of the general approval, and in response to the moving appeal that Hon. W. H. Hearst made for unity of action, and for adoption of the bill without a division, not one of them raised his voice against the measure.

The adoption of the motion for second reading was greeted with prolonged applause, in which both sides view with one another.

It was a notable day for the temperance cause in Ontario, and when Hon. Mr. Hanna rose to move the second reading and fire the opening gun of the debate the galleries of the Legislative Chamber were crowded with interested spectators. They were not disappointed, for the afternoon discussion was made up of vigorous speeches by both Hon. W. H. Hearst and N. W. Rowell, K.C., in addition to Mr. Hanna. The effort of the Prime Minister was a splendid one, powerful and sustained. He spoke for over an hour and a half without a sign of weakening, without a single break to remind the House of the fact that not two months ago he was on the sick list, and not expected to stand the strain of a hard session.

The Government leader based his demand for support upon patriotic grounds, upon the urgent necessity for doing everything that would conserve the national resources and strengthen the fighting forces of the Empire in the great war. He declared frankly that but for the war the Prohibition Bill would not now be before the Legislature.

Mr. Hearst paid heed to the protests from within the Conservative party, and in referring to statement made to him that his course meant his political downfall he declared his readiness to accept whatever came to him, secure in the knowledge that he had done his full duty as he saw it in a time of crisis. He was confident, however, that the people of the province when the proper time came would declare that the Government had taken the right and patriotic course.

The Liberal leader vied with Mr. Hearst in frankness. He endorsed the Government's proposal fully, and went out of his way to pay a tribute to the work of the Ontario License Board and to admit that it had done better than he had expected.

There was no definite intimation from the Government with respect to sections of the bill left undecided. The Prime Minister stated, however, that the Government expected to bring in legislation to deal with the problem of providing hotel accommodation for the travelling public.

It will be the endeavour of Col. Both men are speakers who will be well worth hearing and a big crowd should attend to-morrow night's gathering. A good musical programme will also be given.

The Toronto Sportsmen's Battalion certainly lives up to its name. At last night's smoker, Corp. Billy Breen announced that there are 105 Ontario, Canadian, International and world's champions in the ranks of the Battalion.

There was no appeal made for recruits at last night's smoker although probably there were as many eligible men on hand as have been at any of the recruiting meetings. However the appearance of so many well known athletes in khaki was as an effective appeal as could have been made.

The band of the 93rd Battalion is on three days leave, commencing this morning. The band made a big hit with the visiting sportsmen last night. "I wish we had that band with the 180th" remarked one of the sports men's Battalion to the Examiner.

REGARDING THE COAL SITUATION

Some concern has been expressed by consumers of hard coal regarding the prospects for spring and the probable effect on prices and production the war is likely to have this year. A very clear and concise statement from the firm of Robert Hicks & Co., Limited, of this city, appears in to-day's issue, which affords some relief from the apprehensions that have arisen during the past few months. This firm has stated the situation so succinctly that no immediate alarm need be felt, as regards hard coal. It simply resolves itself into a matter for each individual to decide for himself as to the war-time economy of laying in next winter's supply of coal now, or later on. No fixed prices for Spring buying are quoted, and for the present, at least, winter prices remain unchanged, as there is no promise of the usual reduction of prices in the Spring. If consumers were as conversant with the coal barometer as the coal barons are, they might be better able to guage the future. But at any rate this announcement of Messrs Robert Hicks & Co. will serve a good purpose. A representative of this firm recently spent a week in Buffalo, looking over the ground and gleaned all the information available on the subject, so as to give the public the benefit of his impressions.

On the principle of "Safety First," buying and paying for one's winter supply of coal in the Spring practically settles the problem for those who are fortunate enough to be able to provide ahead. And for that reason it would be lifting the lid a little higher to know what the Spring prices of coal are likely to be.

Life-Long Conservative Breaks From His Party Allegiance and Votes for Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Resolution in the House

GIVES HIS REASONS

OTTAWA, April 4.—The Hon. Andrew Broder, Conservative member for Dundas, a life-long friend of the late Sir James Whitney, and known in Parliament for twenty years as one of the most honourable and upright of the people's representatives, felt constrained to break from his party allegiance by speaking and voting in support of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's motion for a wide-open Parliamentary inquiry into the operations of the Shell committee. In the House of Commons to-night he said:

"My name has been made a subject of controversy. I do not wish any great publicity, but I desire to say that I never gave any authority for an interview, nor any statement to anybody, to be made public. While I am on my feet I wish to state how I intend to vote, for I do not wish to give a silent vote on this occasion. A good deal has been said of the wisdom or unwisdom of investigating the Shell Committee's business. The argument largely used is that the money spent was British money. Now, I look upon this war as a partnership between Great Britain and her colonies, and I think we are just as much interested in the outlay of British money as we are of our own.

"I do not think the people of this country will be satisfied unless they feel assurance that there is to be a pretty thorough investigation. I am glad to see the Right Hon. leader of the Government (Sir Robert Borden) go as far as he has gone; but we wish he would go farther. I do not think that anything short of the fullest investigation will satisfy the public feeling of this country to-day.

THE GRAFTER IN THE SHADOW.

"I do not think that grafters should be allowed to hide in the shadow of this great war, to plot against the interests of the country, and to feed on her revenues. I think the people of Canada are alive to the situation; and, while we think it is not wise to say too much or criticize too much during the war, we have but to look across the water to see that public opinion, that is always acute and sensitive in Great Britain, was so aroused that the Prime Minister of that country was obliged to cross the floor of the House and change the personnel of his Government.

"These are things that the people notice. While I have no fault to find with the fact that the Judges are to be appointed, and while I am satisfied that they are as competent, as thorough, and better judges of an investigation than any committee that this House could appoint, yet the people cannot distinguish between these fine technicalities.

A VOTE FOR FULL INQUIRY.

"I have no fault to find with the fact that the Judges are appointed, and those that have been appointed have such a standing in the country that the people will be satisfied with their work. But I wish to say further, while I am on my feet, that the people of this country, who are working night and day, who are subscribing money to help the army, and are making willing sacrifices, feel, and I am sure this House feels, that the money for this war should be properly spent. I intend to vote for the motion of the Right Hon. gentleman who leads the Opposition."

Run of Syrup Will Be Light

Old-timers on the market are predicting a short run of maple syrup this year. The old timers always claimed that unless there was plenty of snow around the roots of the maple trees there would be little sugar. Their successors of the present generation are repeating their prognostications.

To-day might be considered an ideal sap to-day. It froze during the night the nightly freezing is an essential for proper runs, it is claimed. However, the absence of snow and the fact that the maple may be expected to bud at any time now, brings forth the prediction that the season will be an exceptionally short one.

Majority of 38 Against Sir W Laurier's Resolution, Four porters of the Government ever Voting With the Oppo

OTTAWA, April 4.—By a vo 82 to 44, a Government majorit 38, reduced by the expression of est conviction on the part of fou tionary supporters of the Govern Sir Wilfrid Laurier's motion for and free Parliament investigatio to the whole operations of the Committee was turned down in liament to-night. The four who with the Liberals were: Hon. A Broder (Dundas) and Messrs. T Maclean (South York), E. Lam (Niveles) and A. A. Lanctot (L ka).

The decision, as Sir Wilfrid rier put it, is to let in some f fight on one spot and keep the r darkness.

Tense and crowded galleries w ssed a dramatic scene. Two of th erans of Parliament rose at the moments. Sir Wilfrid Laurier gave to Hon. Andrew Broder. The N of the Conservative party in House, "honest Andrew" they him, broke from the political a ence of a lifetime because "I mu straight to the end." Sir W followed in a message which wil main historic. "Sinister advento he declared "have been enjoying on the treasury of our people and blood of our soldiers. ONE MORE SPECIFIC CHAR

Both Sir Wilfrid and Mr. E. Macdonald (Pictou) convinc proved the righteousness and the ic of the demand for sweeping untrammeled investigation. The N Scotian added one more specific sensational charge to the staggering list of disclosures. He told the stor how Honorary Colonel J. Wesley lison had tried to induce a respon contractor who offered to make f at cost plus five per cent. commis to add a further amount of 75 c for fuse to his price. This extra p was to be divided in four parts, for Allison, one for the contrac and two for "parties unnamed." representatives of the Shell Commi General Bertram and Col Carn turned down the contractor's o turned down responsible offers at er prices from Canadians, and d instead with Yoakum, Allison their United States associates, No fence against the Kyte charges was fered from the Government side the House. SITTING ON THE LID.

The Borden Government has decided to keep on the lid, keep the country in the dark in regard to the charged improperties in the expenditure by the Shell Committee of some 22 million dollars of money appropriated for war purposes. Parliament at the dictation of the government has rejected Sir Wilfrid Laurier's motion for full and free Parliamentary investigation into the whole operations of the Shell committee. The government seems to have two rules to apply to its responsibility in regard to investigation into alleged irregularities. In a case involving charges of stealings and graft to the amount of millions, it absolutely refuses full investigation after months of public urging. But in case of a petty accusation privately made, by a discharged employee in regard to the comparatively trifling matter of a clothing contract, immediate investigation is ordered, and held. Why the difference?

A GOOD MOVE.

Two reports were presented by Inspector Mowat at the Board of Education meeting last night, which are a step and more than that—a stride—in the right direction. They are the first of the kind and indicate a distinct progress in informing the public upon educational matters during the year. They are practical concessions of the right of the taxpayers to as full information as possible as to the result values they receive for the expenditure of the large sums paid in the form of taxes for school purposes. Whoever conceived the idea which Inspector Mowat has comprehensively carried out, deserves credit. The report referring to the School Nurse is particularly timely and interesting, and shows how intimately the work of this kind is related to the most important factor of school administration—the health—and the life—of pupils directly, and indirectly; with their capacity for study and assimilation of knowledge. It should be read carefully by the Aldermar who uttered the heresy that the Health Association was "a fad of the doctors."

Both reports illustrate the soundness of the principle contended for by the Examiner, that the people deserve more information at the hands of both the City Council and the Board of Education. There are no official reports of the proceedings of either; the public have to depend upon the detached and fragmentary reports given by the newspapers. These cannot obviously contain details of many important undertakings and matters, which the people have a right to get. For instance the people have no official information of the amount and conditions of our debenture responsibilities; they do not know where the outfall sewer business is at; they do not know in what state or stage our Hydro-Electric enterprise is; and there are many other things that their relation to the people demand should be put in possession of the people, by those having responsible charge of the associated responsibility. We can speak for the newspapers as to their willingness to give publicity to such information, whether furnished by the Council or the Board of Education. Our rulers should take the people into their confidence in regard to civic and educational matters alike. Such a course would be in the best interests of both our representatives and their masters—the ratepayers. Aside from reasons of business prudence, any concealment of the true state of things, any implied concealment of facts, whether in civic or educational or shell committee matters, argues something wrong, or at least, gives ground for suspicion.

THEY WILL BE DUMB.

While Canadian soldiers have done, and are doing, their part splendidly on the battle lines; while the people of Canada of both parties and all racial origins have nobly done their part in helping on the war, it is a notable thing that many of the Canadian-born have not lived up to their opportunity of uplifting the name of Canada in this war. Thousands and tens of thousands of home-born Canadians are, and have been, merely idle onlookers, while their fellow Canadians have borne the brunt of the fighting and sacrifice. There are tens of thousands who have neither joined the fighting ranks nor the ranks of helpers to the fighting Canadians. They have neither enlisted nor borne any active share in patriotic work in Red Cross work, or the other agencies of aid to our forces in the field. It is estimated that in the ranks of enlisted men through out Canada only between forty and fifty per cent. are Canadian-born. If this is the case, it is not a fair and honorable or worthy proportion. Canada gets the glory of the deeds of Canada's armies in action, when, as a matter of fact, according to figures, Canada only deserves half or less than half, of the credit. But as a matter of fact, perhaps Canada merits a greater share of credit. The foreign-born, who have enlisted in Canada, are Canadians; they have lived a longer or shorter period in Canada, and have become Canadianized; have caught the Canadian spirit and, therefore, in this regard, and in the regard of willingness, entitled to rank as Canadians, and not as "rank" Canadians, as many of the born-Canadians have chosen to rank themselves. The "rank" Canadian is not the Canadian in the ranks.

We see about us every day living evidences of Canadians, of military age, perfectly fit, physically and otherwise, refusing to enlist, as is their bounden duty. If every eligible Canadian would pluck up the courage to do his duty, the half-million of men the Government has pledged to the Empire could be enrolled in a month. Shame, if not a sense of duty, should prompt these laggards to enlist; especially when we have the example of Baron Shaughnessy. He was born in the United States but he has shown himself a better Canadian than tens of thousands of Canadians "native and to the manner born." He gave his son to the war, a son that has fought gallantly, and died gloriously in the Canadian ranks. We look to the Canadian born to heed the lesson and come to the front, and go to the front. If they do not, when this war is over, and the victory won by the help of Canada, they will be ostracised, even in their own consciences. They will have had no share in the triumphs that keeps them and theirs, and their homes, and liberty secure. They can't tell their children of the glorious share they had in the glorious result. They can only hedge and dodge as they are doing now, and practically confess to their children that while their neighbours, their friends, and their chums went to the war and fought and bled, and made sacrifices for the sake of the home land and home happiness for all of the home land, they stood as mere onlookers, with hands in their pockets, seeing others bear a burden they refused to lighten by the help of a finger's strength. When we who have helped in some way, in the only way we could do, about over the victory, they will be dumb.

THE SCOURGE OF CARELESSNESS

It is a matter of observation, and o. fact, if not of specific record, that nine tenths of the accidents that "happen" every day are not accidents; they are the results of carelessness of the victims or others. A carpenter puts up a scaffolding carelessly. It falls, he falls and breaks his thigh or other bones and we call it an accident, when in effect it is the result of his own action, and so on through all the daily round of accidents. If we trace all the "accidents" that happen by the million every day we should find that they are nearly all due to carelessness of the victims or others. The avoidance of carelessness—"Safety First"—has become a motto that has been adopted with abundant reasons by railways and factory managers. Mr. A. McNabb, Grand Trunk station agent, is distributin cards in the interest of the "Safety First" movement. The contents of these cards should be hung in every home and they or their equivalent should be committed to memory by every school child, and rehearsed every week in every school room. We have many in our hospitals and homes, who are to-day suffering pain, expense and dislocation of home routine, by neglect of precaution, by carlessness, which is the source of nine-tenths of the accidents. The contents of this card sets forth the achievements and quality and power for evil of carelessness, and "Carelessness" personified answers the question, "Who Am I?" in a startling and thought provoking way —of so great importance that no excuse is needed for reproducing, as below:

WHO AM I?

I am more powerful than the combined armies of the world.

I have destroyed more men than all the wars of the world.

I am more deadly than bullets, and I have wrecked more homes than the mightiest of siege guns.

I steal on this continent alone over $300,000,000 each year.

I spare no one, and find my victims among the rich and poor alike, the young and the old, the strong and the weak; widows and orphans know me.

I loom up to such proportions that I cast my shadow over every field of labour, from the turning of the grindstone to the moving of every train.

I massacre thousands upon thousands of wage-earners in a year.

I lurk in unseen places and do most of my work silently. You are warned against me, but you heed not.

I am relentless. I am everywhere; in the home, on the street, in the factory, at railroad crossings, and on the sea.

I bring sickness, degradation, and death, and yet few seek to avoid me.

I destroy, crush or maim; I give nothing, but take all.

I am your worst enemy.

I AM CARELESSNESS.

Remember, "Safety First."

In a costly watch that has been made for exhibition purposes there is a wheel that makes a revolution but once in four years, operating a dial that shows the years, months and days.

SHELL COMMITTEE HAD NO FAITH IN CANADIAN SKILL AND ENTERPRISE

A few months after the war began the officials of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association received such conclusive evidence of the manipulation of contracts for war supplies that they addressed a remonstrance to Sir Robert Borden urging that middlemen be no longer permitted to interpose themselves between the Government and the manufacturers whose goods were required for war purposes. The remonstrance was not received by the Premier with very good grace, and it was months afterward before any effective steps were taken to eliminate the rank favouritism which at that time was a marked feature of the Stores Branch of the Militia Department.

Much injustice was done to Canadian business men by this practice, but the operations of the Shell Committee appointed by the Borden Government to handle orders for $800,000,000 worth of projectiles speedily became far more notirious. The first orders given out by the committee were placed at prices which enabled the fortunate persons to whom they were given to become wealthy in a few months. Several members of the committee were either directly connected with concerns to which orders were given at extravagant prices or had relatives who participated in the bounty of the committee. Criticism was met by the statement that the British Government must have shells, and that what seemed a high price was paid to insure delivery at the earliest possible moment.

It was at this stage in its operations that the Shell Committee awarded the notorious fuse contracts. There never has been a satisfactory explanation of why the contracts were placed in the United States. General Bertram was urged to give Canadian manufacturers an opportunity to make fuses, but refused to do so. Later he yielded to pressure, and a single factory in Toronto is now turning out contract fuses at the rate of thirty thousand a week. When he refused to let Canadians show their skill in fuse-making General Bertram turned to the United States and let contracts there for over $22,000,000 worth of fuses to two mushroom concerns incorporated a few weeks before the date of the contracts. The total paid-up capital of these two concerns at that time was four thousand dollars. They had no factories, or plants, or accumulated raw material, or staffs of workmen. They were incorporated middlemen whose business was not to make fuses, but to obtain a gigantic rake-off and pass the bulk of the work on, to be done by legitimate concerns at a lower price than that allowed in the contract.

The charge now to be investigated is that General Bertram and General Hughes awarded this amazing contract because Col. J. Wesley Allison, the confidential friend of the Minister, stood behind the two mushroom companies and was secretly taking toll. No one has charged that either General Bertram or General Hughes shared in the rake-off Allison is believed to have secured or to have been promised in connection with the fuse contracts. The Minister of Militia and General Bertram should be placed in the witness box and required to state on oath that no financial advantage from these contracts has accrued to them or will in the future be obtained by them.

The unforgivable offence is the refusal of these two Canadians to establish a fuse industry in Canada at a time when the fate of the Allied nations turned on the prompt production of completed projectiles. They must explain the handing over of vast sums as advances to Americans without factories, plants, or workmen for the production of munitions which, experience has shown, could have been turned out far more quickly and satisfactorily in Canada. Granted that General Hughes and General Bertram are shown to have been the honest dupes of Col. Allison. How can Sir Robert Borden retain at the head of the War Department of Canada a man whose friendships lead him to play the fool in a matter of life and death? Graft-infested Russia would not retain in her service a Minister who had been so hoodwinked—to put the matter in its most favourable light—as Sir Sam Hughes was in the fuse contracts. Why should Canada? The manufacturers who lost twenty million dollars' worth of orders through the folly of General Bertram and General Hughes should put that question up to Sir Robert Borden. And they should do it now.—The Globe.

As a Pick-me-up After Grip

To Restore Health, Vigor, Energy, There is Nothing to Compare to

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

The grip epidemic has assumed huge proportions until there is scarcely a home but shelters one or more victims of this enervating disease. Urged on by sudden changes of temperature, this dreaded scourge sweeps over the country like a forest fire before the western winds.

In offices, stores and factories the forces are greatly reduced because so many are away with grip, while many who stick to their posts do so with the greatest discomfort, because of the pains and aches and the great weakness associated with this disease.

It only takes a few hours of this debilitating ailment to bring even the strongest to their beds and the process of recovery is often most tedious.

Just at this point Dr. Chase's Nerve Food does wonders to hasten the return of health, strength and vitality. By forming new, rich blood it builds up the system as nothing else can. Here is a case to illustrate this point:

Miss Amy C. Davis, 301 Perth Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "After a severe attack of quinsy and grip, my nervous system seemed to be completely run down. I had taken a good tonic, prescribed by my doctor, but still felt very nervous; would start up at the least sound, and was very irritable. A friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and, after taking two boxes, I felt so much improved that I continued to take four more, which completely restored my health. I cannot say too much for this great Nerve Food, and have recommended it to all my friends."

HOW TO AVOID GRIP

Rich, red blood is the greatest of germicides, and good vitality the strongest defence against disease. Keep the bodily vigor at high-water mark by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and you need have no fear of grip or other contagious diseases. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

It is the older people who suffer most from grip. Finding them in a more or less weakened condition, grip breaks down their power of resistance and prepares the way for pneumonia, kidney troubles, or heart failure.

After every epidemic of grip the grim reaper makes a regular harvest, through the medium of these ailments. There is only one way to avoid such results, and that is by the regular use of such restorative treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great food cure has proven a wonderful blessing to people in advanced years and all whose systems have become run down.

You need not linger in weakness if you will but put this treatment to the test. By supplying the ingredients required by nature, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food hastens the process of upbuilding and you can depend on the results proving of lasting benefit.

Miss E. J. Buswell, Centralia, Ont., writes: "Last Winter my mother contracted a bad cold. She was bothered with shortness of breath, wheezing, fevered and too sore to cough. Our doctor prescribed treatment which brought relief from these symptoms, but when she got up she was tired, always tired and weak. I got her three boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and she soon improved. Her eyes became clear and bright, the ashen hue left the face and she began once more to take up the reins and look after the household duties."

A DESERT ENIGMA

Mystery of a Vanished Party of Australian Explorers.

The Leichhardt Expedition Disappeared as Though It Had Been Swallowed Up by the Earth, Which May Indeed Have Been Its Fearful Fate.

There have been recorded many strange tragedies of exploration in lone and distant lands, but no one event of the kind has ever so stirred men's minds as did the total disappearance of the well found and splendidly equipped expedition which Dr. Ludwig Leichhardt, the Franklin of Australia, led into the central deserts of Australia in 1848.

Leichhardt's design was to march right across the continent from the east coast to the west, and as he had already led a successful expedition nearly 3,000 miles through a previously unknown part of Australia, it was generally thought that he would be able to accomplish the task.

Still, there were some who doubted and prophesied disaster, and more than one wealthy friend of the doctor's refused to subscribe toward the expedition on the ground that they were not going to help him to commit suicide.

The members of the expedition numbered six whites and two blacks, an unusually large number for an exploring expedition of this nature, and besides being amply provided with flour, biscuit, tea, sugar and so on, they drove along with them fifty bullocks and 270 goats. They also had spare horses and mules in abundance.

At that time the most westerly station in southern Queensland was occupied by a squatter named McPherson, who dwelt on Cogoon creek. From there Leichhardt wrote a brief letter as he was about to start into the unknown land beyond.

That was the last ever heard of him or of any of his companions, and this notwithstanding the fact that expedition after expedition was afterward sent out in search of them.

As completely as though they had been swallowed up by the earth, they vanished.

This is the most puzzling part of the mystery—its completeness. Had they been killed by the natives, as was at first wrongly reported, some relics of the explorers would long since have been recovered from them. In some shape the iron work of the implements and arms they had with them would have survived.

And what of the stock? Some of the goats, at all events, must have been left alive, one would have imagined, for these are notoriously hardy animals, able to pick up a living almost anywhere. Yet none of these, nor any of the horses, mules or bullocks were ever traced.

The probability is that the ill fated expedition struck one of those waterless patches of country common in parts of Australia, into which the blacks never venture. It is not difficult in this case to prophesy what would have been their fate.

Their reserve barrels once emptied of their precious contents, the little water carried by the men in their canteens would not last more than a day or so. In the shadeless bush, in that terrific heat, death comes swiftly under such circumstances. About forty-eight hours is the limit of human endurance. Usually half that time suffices.

The explorers, we may be sure, would struggle on to the last, however, husbanding their water to the uttermost drop. The animals would be the first to go, and the desperate expedient of drinking their blood would be resorted to.

Hotter and hotter grows the air as the doomed men stagger further and further into the rainless desert.

Some lose their reason; all lose hope. Then comes the end. They separate and struggle away in ones and twos, and fall and die.

Day after day the terrible and pitiless sun looks down upon them lying there and sees them dry and shrivel into mummies.

And still no rain falls.

But one day, it may be years afterward, there arises a sandstorm of exceptional violence. The wind blows with all the strength and fury of an arctic blizzard, but driving before it sand, not snow.

When it ceases the desert is there as before; the same, yet different. Mountains of sand exist where before were valleys.

The mummied have vanished from human ken forever.—Pearson's Weekly

POWER OF THE SUN.

If Man Could Only Utilize It in a Perfect Heat Engine.

The heat of the sun that would be received on one square acre of the earth's surface at right angles to the rays of the sun, if the sky was clear and all other conditions favorable, would, if man could utilize all in a perfect heat engine, exert the power of 12,000 horses. But this figure is not of mathematical accuracy owing to the discrepancy of results among different researchers in many parts of the world, on plains at sea level, higher, and on tops of the highest mountains to which scientific instruments could be carried.

And this great force has been at work during millions of years in forming the world for the abode of coming man. Winds, tides, rains, chemical activity, coal, wood, oil—these and more are all due to this vast power of the sun.

A "horsepower" (how much longer will this word be used, when kilowatt is so much better?) is a force that can lift a weight of 33,000 pounds through a height of one foot in one minute. Thus the solar power reaching the deck of a slow going steamer, if all made available by the genius of man, could run the engines at a reasonable and comparatively safe rate.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

A Mere Mushroom.

Sir Watkin Williams-Wynn, talking to a friend about the antiquity of his family, was told roughly that he was "a mere mushroom."

"How is that?" he asked, indignantly.

"Why," said the other, "when I was in Wales a pedigree of a particular family was shown to me which filled more than five large parchment skins, and near the middle of it was a note in the margin: 'About this time the world was created.'"

BULLS IN PARLIAMENT.

The Welcome Sound That Cheered Lord Balfour of Burleigh.

It would be hard to say which of England's two houses of legislature "takes the cake" for committing howlers, and still more difficult to pick out the member who has taken pride of place in this respect during recent years. But perhaps for simple effectiveness Lord Balfour of Burleigh would be hard to beat when he said, "The noble lord shakes his head, and I am glad to hear it!"

Another noble lord during a debate on Indian affairs exclaimed: "Talk of this as a loan to India! It is a flea bite in the ocean!" Nevertheless it stands to reason that the lower house is more prolific in quantity, if not in quality, in its stock of howlers than the upper, seeing that it has so many more opportunities.

Captain Craig, the fiery Ulsterman, cooked the following oratorical stew: "The naked sword is drawn for the fight, and never again will the black smoke of the Nationalists' tar barrels drift on the home rule wind to darken the hearts of Englishmen." If anything could kill home rule one would think that would.

Sir W. Hart Dyke was criticising the standing order forbidding peers from speaking during general elections. Some one had quoted Lord Halsbury as doing so, and Sir William solemnly said, "I must admit that the honorable gentleman has gone to the top of the tree and caught a very large fish" —London Tit-Bits.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

TO PROVIDE PLAYGROUNDS FROM PRIVATE SUBSCRIPTIONS

Representatives of Women's Council Request Support of Board of Education—No Public Funds Available This Year

The ladies who have pioneered the idea of organized playgrounds in Peterborough, began their 1916 campaign last night, when Mrs. A. Mowat and Mrs. (Dr.) Neal asked the Board of Education for their support in re-opening the Central School playgrounds, and also for the provision of similar conveniences at King Edward school for the children in the South End. They represented the Council of Women, who were largely instrumental in securing the Central school playgrounds last year. Both ladies dealt at length with the work accomplished. Two superintendents were engaged, a lady at $50 a month and a gentleman at $75 a month. The grounds were supervised during July and August at a cost of $250. The Women's Council raised money by various means, including $150 in donations from citizens in sympathy with the work. This year the residents in the King Edward School localities are anxious to have playgrounds. Mrs. Mowat pointed out that many boys have been left temporarily fatherless, and the best way to back up their fathers on the firing line is to look after the children. The responsibility for their care falls upon the mothers, who are not always wise. The children can be greatly helped by a playgrounds. Mrs. Mowat quoted a summary, showing the inadequate use of school grounds during the year. During the summer months the children follow their own free will. The streets are their playgrounds.

Mrs. Neal spoke particularly of the public meeting on Thursday night, when it is proposed to form a Playgrounds Association. The Women's Council simply asked the Board this year to lend their support in this movement. Ultimately, she said, Peterborough would adopt the systems employed in the United States, with playgrounds a municipal work, provided out of the public funds.

Mr. Ackerman assured the ladies that the Board was in sympathy with the Playgrounds movement.

Mr. Crane—"The best thing we can do is that all of us attend the meeting on Thursday night."

Mr. Eastwood stated that the Board appreciated the ladies' work, and desired to further it. This year, however, there has to be more personal support. The Board of Education had been asked to reduce salaries, an indication that it had no surplus to expend on a work as worthy as playgrounds. Hence, for the present personal assistance must be depended upon, although Mr. Eastwood felt that the playgrounds would finally be publicly supported out of the general funds of the city.

It is hoped that there will be a large attendance at Thursday night's meeting in the Council Chamber.

Mr. Hill moved, seconded by Col. Miller, that the Property Committee be asked to cooperate as much as possible with the Women's Council

NOW WHAT DID MR. CRANE MEAN?

His Interjection Into a Discussion About Attending a Convention in Toronto Amused Some of the School Trustees.

The Ontario Educational Association meets in Toronto April 24 to 27 and the programme includes the name of Mr. Richard Lees, I.P.S., for a paper on "The Consolidation of Public Schools." At the Board of Education meeting, last night, Mr Hill moved, seconded by Mr. Eastwood, that the Chairman and as many of the members as possible attend this Convention.—Carried.

They both enlarged upon the advantages offered at the meetings, especially to the "freshmen" members.

"An eminent jurist has said that there is no benefit to be gained at these conventions; in fact, he said the benefits were nil."

Some members chuckled. "What's that" queried Mr. Eastwood, who said he did not hear the whole statement. But Mr. Crane rather cryptically replied: "I have said what I have said."

The expenses occasioned will, of course, be paid by the Board.

Apart from Mr. Crane's reminder Mr. Hill said that the money, in the past, had been well spent. The Board had secured sound very beneficial ideas at these conventions.

Mr. Eastwood illustrated the importance of a visit to the Technical School in Toronto as simply one item of the trip. Technical education should be of the most vital importance to manufacturers and merchants if this country is to be prepared for the opportunities growing out of the readjustment of conditions after the war. The members would be able to appreciate local needs when they see the facilities for technical training that the big Toronto School affords.

To Count School Children Below Physical Average

At Dr. Neal's request, Miss E. P Kennedy, Public School nurse, will be asked to acquaint the Board of Education with the number of pupils who are physically unfit to attend school, and why they are unfit. He stated that last year Miss Kennedy had told him she believed the number at that time to be about forty. When the Health Association had a camp for children in 1914, before the war, there were 33 children cared for, most of whom were not fit to attend school all day. There were probably others, for the Association was unable to accommodate all those who were offered by parents. Dr. Neal learned not long ago of one boy at school, 12 years old, who weighed only 50 pounds. Under the present conditions no provision is made for children who may not be fully nourished or who for other reasons should receive special attention and care.

Mr. Hill—"What could be done for them?"

Dr. Neal—"It might be arranged for them to attend only half days."

If the number of such children is large, they will likely present another problem for the Board.

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Hughson Johnstone, painter and decorator, 510 College Street, will be answered—on Wednesdays—questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of stringency and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating, may be sent to The Examiner, and will receive attention in due course.

A.B.C., Peterborough, Ont.: Please tell me what will take an ink stain off my kitchen table top on which I was unfortunate enough to spill a bottle of ink. The table top is not polished, just the natural wood.

Ans.: Scrub out all the ink you can, then pour a little water on the spot and sprinkle some dry chloride of lime into the water. Allow this to stand an hour or so when the spot should disappear. If not repeat the application.

Bud McD., Rubidge street, city: Through the medium of your "Arts and Crafts" column, of which I am a reader, I would like some sort of a suggestion for painting burlap. I am tired of the present colour and would like some new idea if possible. The wood work of my hall is golden oak. The paper on the wall is a sort of tan colour, while the ceiling is cream.

Ans.: I don't know that I can give you a "new idea." But I can offer a suggestion that is as old as the hills, yet suitable for your hallway, and gives a rich effect. Paint your burlap a cream, I mean sufficient coats to make a good solid cream colour. Then make a stain of equal parts of raw sienna, and Vandyke brown, thinned with boiled linseed oil and turpentine equal parts, coat over a portion of your burlap with this, and with a ball of cotton batting over which you draw cheese cloth to form a ball or bag. With this pounce or pat the burlap. If done carefully you will be pleased with the result. Of course, you can alter the tone by varying the proportions of the pigments.

Novice, Peterborough, Ont.: Will you please tell me how to hang Japanese leather on a new wall, and is there a special way to make the paste?

Ans.: Time and again we have stated that this column is conducted for the benefit of those wishing to do their own work during these war times. (Read the heading at the top of this column.) Therefore it would not be fair to the tradesmen of the city to answer the question of other tradesmen in this column. As the above question is asked by a paperhanger he should be able to supply his own answer.

West Ender, City: What will remove paint a week old from a cloth dress?

Ans.: I know of nothing better than chloroform. Apply a little to the spot, then with a clean nail brush or tooth brush, rub briskly with the grain of the goods.

J.R.B., Peterborough, Ont.: As a reader of your "Arts and Crafts" column I wish to ask you a question. What kind of a paint is used to paint on silk and how is the silk prepared?

Ans.: Simply stretch the silk on a light frame and wash it well with alumn water, let this dry thoroughly and apply a wash of isinglass dissolved in water. About a half teaspoonful to a quart of water). When this is dry the silk is ready for paint, either oil or water colour.

L. E. W., Peterborough, Ont.: I want to enamel my bicycle this spring. I want you to explain.

(1) How to prepare the frame for the enamel?

(2) How to apply enamel and finish? Kindly give me the name of some good black enamel.

Ans. (1) A very great deal depends upon the present condition of your bicycle frame. In any case make it smooth first. Then paint it the desired colour using flat paint. It may require more than one coat.

(2) There are many methods of applying enamel. Your best plan would be to get a good bicycle enamel at the hardware and follow directions closely. I imagine you mean by "finish" the striping and stencil ornaments. If so you had better let a striper do your job, as it requires expert manipulation.

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic" is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quick! stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barber's itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic, it prevents blood poisoning.

INSPECTOR'S REPORT HOUSEHOLD SCIENCE

Inspector A. H. Leake's report on the Household Science classes, Miss Edna Ferguson, teacher, was read at the Board of Education meeting last night. He suggested another centre for this work as only the senior fourth classes of the Public School are taking it.

The question of needlework for lower grades should be considered by the Board. Form II. pupils of the Collegiate Institute should not be allowed to take the subject. Inspector Leake also wrote that punctuality should be insisted upon. An accurate account of the amount and cost of supplies used should be kept by the teacher; sewing should be taken in the lower grades. The report was referred to the Supervision Committee to consider the grading of Fair in regard to Teacher's and Pupil's work.

Evangelist Sharpe At the Tabernacle

Evangelist G. M. Sharpe addressed his audience at the Tabernacle, last night, on the subject of the faultless Christ, chosing as his text the words of Pilate to the Jews: "I find no fault in Him." Jno. 19:4.

Pilate could not find a fault in Jesus Christ, and I defy you to find a spot in Him. Pilate's was a queer justice. Although he confessed he could find no fault in Christ, yet he turned Him over to the Jews, to be crucified.

But this is also true of many people in Peterborough to-day. He's on your hands just as He was on Pilate's hands. You can find no fault in Him. Then why don't you accept Him instead of rejecting Him. When you, my brother, stand at the judgment bar of God what will you say? Will you find any fault in Him?

You tell me Jesus Christ is not divine. Answer me this question: Why can't great scholars of the world speak words like Jesus said to them? Why haven't we other writers that can say things as He did? Why can't men write books like the Bible? Ah, my brother, you can't outshine the sun; neither can you outshine the Sun of Righteousness.

Can you find any fault with the way Christ lived? No, not one. He was clean; He was spotless. Yet He could reach down into sin and lift up the vilest without a single stain to His own glorious character.

"Jesus Christ is for everything good and sweet and pure; but He is also against everything unholy. Are you in favour of honesty? So is Jesus. Are you against crookedness and fraud? So is Jesus.

What do you think of His thoughtful love on the cross? Jesus Christ, in all the agony of the cross, was thinking of the welfare of his mother.

Mr. Sharpe will speak each night this week, except Saturday, at 8 o'clock. All are welcome.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

The Y.M.C.A. circus, for which the boys have been training for some time will be held on Thursday and Friday evenings of this week and promises to be a great success. The reserve seat plan is now open at the Y.M.C.A. office and if those people holding reserved seat tickets will present them at the Y.M.C.A. seats will be reserved for them for either Thursday or Friday evening.

One number not on the regular circus bill is that of athletic posing, which is in itself a great treat. There will be clowns with out number and their funny antics will cause even the most serious minded to smile and be happy. Should they not suffice then Charlie Chaplin and Father and Maggie who have kindly consented to be present will present their act. The rest of the programme is both varied and interesting, consisting of marching, parallel bar work, pyramid building, tumbling by riff and raff, illuminated club drill, sailors' hornpipe, etc.

"Joffre," the famous intelligent elephant captured in the Cameroons by the British Expeditionary Force, has been brought to Peterborough and will be seen at both performances and in the street parade. He is indeed a wonderful animal, being very highly educated. The "Mammothramaphone" and the famous "Look Em" Telescope will be seen and heard for the first time in Peterborough this week and promises to be one of the greatest features ever witnessed.

No circus would be complete without a band so the Y.M.C.A. has secured Prof. McNeely's artists to do their worst. If reports which have preceded them are any indication of what may be expected then a terrible time will ensue.

No Conveniences At City Hall For The School Board

Since there is no available vault accommodation in the city hall for the Board of Education's books and documents the Board decided, last night, not to move this spring. The pile of books and papers that Secretary Harry Thompson builds up around him at the Chairman's right hand, constitutes the inores and penates of the Board, and there could be no thought of enshrining them in the sanctuary of the Philistines. The fact, as Mr. Crane cited it, is simply that the city hall does not offer the necessary conveniences, and the Board decided to remain where they are for this year. He made a motion to this effect and Mr. Eastwood, who seconded it, added that at the end of the year the question be re-opened to consider a Board room in one of the school buildings.

Announcement From Robert Hicks Co., Ltd. Coal Dealers

A NUMBER of Our Customers have asked at our Office and on the Telephone regarding the advisability of putting in their usual supply of Hard Coal at the present prices. For them and the Public generally, we gladly give such information as we have at hand, in as concise form as possible. In doing so we wish to say, that at the present time the Hard Coal situation is not alarming.

1. The Miners Wage Agreement terminated on April 1st.

2. At the present time a Committee of the mine workers and a committee of the operators are negotiating a wage scale, and an agreement has been entered into whereby mine operations will be continued for the month of April, or until an agreement has been arrived at, or until it has been decided an agreement cannot be arrived at.

3. It is generally conceded, owing to the labor conditions in United States, that an advance in wages is inevitable. The question is as to the extent of the advance in wages to be made.

4. Of all Hard Coal mined about 65% only is for domestic use. The balance, about 35%, is buckwheat, rice and barley sizes, which is used exclusively for steam purposes, and is in direct competition with soft coal, so that almost all of the increased cost of mining will be borne by 65% of the output, which is domestic size.

5. Up to the present time, there has been no notification by the Coal Companies of the usual reduction of 50 Cents per ton for Spring prices.

REMEMBER—We do not advise you to buy Coal now—we simply lay before you the present conditions, knowing that in the past each adjustment of the miners wage agreement has increased the wholesale price of Hard Coal.

REMEMBER—We do advise you that WE are buying Coal now, and that should you decide to fill your bins we solicit your order.

REMEMBER—That by placing your order with us, you will be supplied with the Delaware Lackawanna and Western Coal Coy's Scranton Coal Screened by the Only Modern Screening System in the City.

REMEMBER—The Coal—The Delaware Lackawanna and Western Coal Company's Scranton Coal. Other Dealer's adverti s Scranton and Lackawanna Coal, Etc. We regard these imitations as the most sincere form of flattery.

Duties of Peterborough's Public School Nurse

Interesting Resume of Miss Kennedy's Numerous Activities Presented to the Board of Education by Mr. John Crane as Prepared by School Inspector Mowat—The Examination Each Child Undergose

The following letter from Mr. A. Mowat, P.S.I., to Mr. John Crane chairman of the Supervision committee of the Board of Education, and read by Mr. Crane last night explains the duties of Miss Kennedy, Public school nurse:

I wish to report on the duties and work of the school nurse in the hope that the Board may see its way clear to further the work and render it still more effective.

Miss Kennedy, in carrying on her work in the schools, is complying with the regulations of the Education Department as far as local conditions will permit.

She visits the schools in rotation one each morning, and after attending to any special cases, she inspects the pupils of as many rooms as her time will permit.

She spends each forenoon in the school and in the afternoon visits the homes of children who are ill.

The inspection of the pupils is made in the cloak-rooms where possible, and where not possible in some part of the school building where no pupils are present.

An examination is made of each child as soon as practicable after his admission to the school. This examination consists of an inspection of the scalp, skin of the face, neck and hands; the mouth, throat and teeth, and simple tests for sight and hearing.

A record book is kept for the pupils of each school.

Where the nurse deems it necessary, the parent is notified of the physical condition of his child and requested to have the case attended to.

In the case of an epidemic in the school, the nurse gives practically her whole time to it in order to prevent its spread.

The nurse carries out the instructions of the M.O.H. where diseases break out that require swabs to be taken and forwarded to Toronto.

Regular physical examinations showing the height, weight, etc., of each child, are made in some cities, but we have no means of carrying this out in Peterborough

When visiting homes the nurse gives practical advice on sanitation, ventilation, food, etc., where such advice is deemed necessary.

Need Dentist and Doctor.

Two very great needs in carrying on the work of medical inspection in our schools are:

A dental department where the poor children might receive attention.

A doctor to attend to those children whose parents cannot or will not engage a doctor of their own.

Much greater interest than was evident a few years ago, is being shown in the physical welfare of our school children. This interest, it appears to me, can be traced to the effect of new school buildings with their present surrounding, to the influence of the Mothers' Clubs, and to the work of the teachers and particularly of the school nurse, and the work of other nurses. It is a work that deserves the support and encouragement of the Board.

Mr. Crane supplemented this letter by stating that the Dental Association intends to hold a meeting when the school needs will be considered, and the dentists hope to devise a scheme by which they will be able to help the Board

Dr. Neal Points Out Needed Changes For South Central

Board of Education Will Examine the South Ward School—Suggestion That Even New Building May Be Necessary.

FIVE HUNGRY FURNACES

The Board of Education appears to be confronted with a considerable problem in the condition of the South Central School. At last night's meeting it was practically asserted that in the interests of the pupils and teachers and from the standpoint of economy an entirely new building is almost a necessity. After listening to certain comments regarding it, Mr. W. H. Hill remarked that it was something like the jack-knife which would be a good knife if it had o new handle not to mention a new blade. Dr. Neal said he visited it a number of times. The furnaces were in poor shape. Gas came up from them into the rooms causing sore throats. Dr. Neal mentioned several cases of this affection which he attributed to the gas. Coal dust also carried up into the rooms and could be observed as a thin covering on the desks in the morning. The halls were not heated; the yards too small and in some rooms the light was so poor the teacher had to ask the children to move to other seats in order to use the blackboard. To properly improve the school Dr. Neal believed would require a large expenditure. But something would have to be done to protect the health of the children. The changing of the heating system would not alone suffice.

Mr. Hill said that the five furnaces which heat the school are simply eating up coal. He corroborated Dr. Neal's statement regarding coal dust in the rooms.

The Property Committee's report as presented by Mr. Denne requested that the chairman of the Board call a special meeting of the members to visit the South Central School in the near future in order that each member would be familiar with the existing conditions.

Mr. Crane—There is no difference of opinion. Is the Property Committee prepared to recommend a new school?

Mr. Dunne—We have made our report and we want all the members to meet down there.

Mr. Hill—We should never have five furnaces there.

Mr. Denne stated that the Property Committee did not want to take any blame or rather the entire responsibility in deciding what should be done.

Mr. Crane—You won't be alarmed You want us to go down there and rub our faces on the desk tops? We know all about it.

Dr. Burnham moved, seconded by Mr. Crane that the Chairman arrange for a meeting at his convenience Mr. Mowat said it could be held some afternoon at 3:30 when the children would be allowed to go home early in order that the Board could make a thorough examination of the premises.

NO SALARY CUT BY THE SCHOOL BOARD

Because of Contracts With Teachers —Staff Would Be Disorganized

The Board of Education was unable to comply with the Council's request that the salaries of teachers and other employees of the Board be reduced ten per cent., and the communication from City Clerk Armstrong was forthwith received. On motion of Mr. Crane seconded by Mr. Hill, Mr. Crane stated that the Board has a contract with each teacher and the suggested cut if applied would simply mean the breaking of that contract to which the teacher and Board were equal partners. It could not be put into force before September and would apply to only four months of the year. The staff would be utterly disorganized, teachers would be looking for new positions and the Board would have to fill the vacancies.

Mr. Hill remarked that Peterborough Public School and Collegiate Institute staff had been twenty-five years in building up and was one of the best in the province. The suggested salary reduction could wreck it in six months. "I, for one, will have no hand in it," concluded Mr. Hill.

Mr. Ackerman—This is no time to reduce salaries in view of the increasing cost of living.

EXTEND QUEEN MARY SCHOOL BOUNDARY TO SHERBROOKE AND PARK STREETS AT MIDSUMMER

In a Comprehensive Review of Peterborough's Public Schools, Inspector Mowat Makes This Suggestion to Relieve Over-crowding at South Central School—Great Increase in Attendance.

WELL PROVIDED WITH TEACHERS

Mr. A. Mowat, P.S.I., presented to the Board of Education last night a detailed statement of very interesting points arising out of the Public school reports for 1915. It was read by Mr. John Crane to whose committee it was of immediate concern. It should also attract every citizen and especially the parents of school children.

Attendance of Pupils—

The increase in the number of pupils for 1915 was not great. The enrolled attendance of all P. S. pupils for 1914 was 2980, while for 1915 it was 3008.

The increase in the average attendance was considerable. For 1914 the average attendance was 2077, while for 1915 it was 2256.

This increase was due to the general good health of the pupils and to the absence of any serious epidemics during 1915. The lowest per centage of attendance in any month during the year was 89 p.c. and the highest was 93 p.c.

The chief increase in attendance of pupils was at the South Central school at which there were 512 pupils enrolled during the year.

The attendance at the King Edward school was relieved by having the county pupils withdraw at midsummer. The attendance in December was about 490 pupils for the twelve rooms.

THE STAFF

The Public school staff, including Kindergarten and special teachers now number 69. This does not include the two men off on leave of absence.

It is becoming increasingly difficult for one teacher to do the supply work for all the teachers, who are occasionally off duty on account of illness. So far no class has had to be dismissed for lack of a teacher, as extra supply teachers have been available when needed.

The six schools are now each covering the complete course of study. In each school there is an entrance class, and only occasionally have pupils to be changed from one school to another for lack of room.

The Queen Mary school is the only one without a Kindergarten class. I hope to see a Kindergarten primary class started in this school in the near future.

The staff are all duly qualified and experienced teachers. Their qualifications are as follows:

Number holding 1st class certificates	10
Number holding 2nd class certificates	48
Number holding Kindergarten directors certificates	4
Number holding Kindergarten primary certificates	2
One each in Art, Music, Household Science, Manual Training, School Nurse	5
A total of	69

PROGRESS OF CLASSES.

The progress of the classes throughout the year has, generally, been satisfactory. One hundred and thirty-four pupils passed the Entrance examination last June under the new regulations and their work in the Collegiate Institute will determine the success or failure of the method of promotion.

The number passing the entrance examination is deserving of more than passing notice. It means that over 4 p.c. of the enrolled attendance, and over 6 p.c. of the average attendance of the Public schools passed in one year. The Public school course, including the Kindergarten course, is one of nine years, so that upwards of 40 p.c. of our Public school pupils passed the Entrance.

Making all possible allowance for those who do not go on to High schools, there must remain from 25 p.c. to 30 p.c. who do, and yet one hears that 25 p.c. of the Public school pupils never get beyond the Public schools.

SPECIAL SUBJECTS.

The progress in Art, Music, Household Science and Manual Training has been steady and satisfactory. I have to remind your committee again that none of the pupils of the King Edward or South Central schools are receiving any training in Household Science or Manual Training.

It is to be hoped that conditions may soon be such that another centre may be opened for the benefit of these pupils. From my own observation, I am of the opinion that these young pupils benefit more from these studies than do many of the adults who are given evening classes.

HEALTH OF PUPILS.

The freedom of our schools from serious epidemics, has already been noted. The work of the school nurse, Miss Kennedy, has had much to do with this satisfactory state of affairs

Physical Training of Pupils—

All of the schools have good playgrounds with the exception of the South Central.

The outdoor games have been fairly well supervised in all the schools.

Physical exercises in the class rooms are being given systematically and our grant in 1915 from the Strathcona Trust Fund was 110.96. This has to be expended in anything that will further physical training.

SUPPLEMENTARY READING.

The regulations of the Education Department aim at having each pupil in the public schools of the Province read three books during each school year, under the teacher's direction.

The object is to have each child form the habit of reading before leaving the Public school, so that his education may go on throughout life.

These books are specified and are to be provided in sets for each form. They are not included in the regular supplies and are to be provided by the Board of Education and to be kept in the School Library.

One series that has recently been authorised by the Education Department is a set of four books—one for each form—called "The Golden Rule" book, and is designed for the teaching of morals.

The fourth form of our schools is well supplied with these supplementary readers, but forms 1, 2 and 3 are very inadequately supplied and the need for them is very great.

The cost would be too great to supply all the grades in one year, but the importance of the matter is such that I think the Board should make a small annual grant for a few years until the schools have the necessary supply of these books.

There are cupboards for supplies and supplementary readers in each class room of our schools, except in the Central and South Central schools.

A cheap cupboard should be placed in each room of these schools, to keep clean and preserve the books and supplies.

Plain pine cupboards were built in the Queen Alexandria and King Edward schools at a very moderate cost. I hope that some recommendation on this matter may be made so that the work could be done during the midsummer holidays.

Accommodation—

The population of the city continues to shift southwards. The twelve rooms of the King Edward school are now occupied.

The most densely populated part of the city is that surrounding the South Central school. This school is over crowded and at mid-summer the Queen Mary school district will have to be extended to relieve the South Central school. There are two unoccupied class rooms in the Queen Mary school, and if all pupils west of Park and south as far as Sherbrooke street were sent to the Queen Mary the walk would not be too great for them.

The conditions of the South Central school building has occupied the attention of the Board for some time. I do not think it is either unsafe or unsanitary, but I do think it needs a new heating plant and the boys should have a play-room in the basement.

It is the only Public school building in the city that is heated by hot air and the furnaces have been in use for upwards of thirty years and are worn out.

The building is composed of three parts erected at different times and there is no basement under the central part.

When a new heating plant is installed, it may be found possible to have basement rooms under the whole building. This would give room for a boys' play-room and also space for a Household Science room and a Manual Training room.

The lavatories would have to be modernized at the same time.

This is the chief matter of improvement in accommodation that the Board will have to deal with during the current year. I hope that the matter may receive careful attention from the Board. I remain,

Yours respectfully,
A. MOWAT, I.P.S.

An Inside Bath Makes You Look and Feel Fresh

Says a glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast keeps illness away.

This excellent, common-sense health measure being adopted by millions.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshen the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion acid stomach; others who are subject to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of splendid results, both in regard to health and appearance.

AUBURN MILLS MADE SATISFACTORY CLOTH

Investigation Shows the Use of Wool Stock Without Detriment to Product

OTTAWA, April 4. —A discussion which almost developed into a debate concerning the difference between shoddy and wool stock was a feature of this morning's hearing of the Davidson War Contracts Commission inquiry into charges against the Auburn Woollen Mills Company, Limited, of Peterborough, of employing "shoddy" in the manufacture of khaki cloth for the Militia Department. What some witnesses called "shoddy" others termed "wool stock."

The President of the company, Jas. McKendry, denied the use of what is commonly known as "shoddy," but admitted that at least 40 per cent. "wool stock" had entered into the manufacture of khaki cloth which his company had supplied to the Militia Department since the war commenced.

Two representatives of the Militia Department, Chas. Burns, Assistant Director of Contracts, and Charles Ferrell, an inspector of cloth, both stated they had been aware of the presence of a certain percentage of waste, or "shoddy," in the cloth supplied the department by the Auburn Mills. But the cloth had always proved satisfactory.

Mr. R. Watson, Inspector of Cloth in the Supplies Branch of the Mounted Police, examined several samples of cloth from the Auburn Mills and stated he had detected certain percentages of "shoddy" in the material, but he found the "shoddy" to be good quality.

Various definitions of shoddy were supplied the Commission. Mr. Watson told the court that short wool off the necks and bellies of the sheep was usually called "shoddy," because it does not make as good material as the lon wool of other parts of the animal. He added, however, that short wool might be used and still produce good cloth. "Old rags chopped up" was another definition of "shoddy" supplied by Mr. Watson. "New rags chopped up" were what he called wool stock."

Charles Burns was called and asked if any cloth from the Auburn Mills had ever been rejected by his department, and replied that out of 225,966 yards about 1,000 yards had been rejected. The rest had been found satisfatcory.

The case was adjourned till Thursday morning, when the Commission will sit in Peterborough.

An Easy Way to Increase Weight

Good Advice For Thin Folks

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on drugging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods, rubbing on useless "flesh creams," or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

There is a preparation known to reliable druggists almost everywhere which seemingly embodies the missing elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This modern treatment is called Sargol and has been termed the greatest of flesh builders. Sargol aims through regenerative, re-constructive powers to coax the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of your food and pass them into the blood where they are carried to the starved, broken-down cells and tissues of your body. You can readily picture what result this amazing transformation should produce as with increased weight the cheeks fill out, hollows about the neck, shoulders and bust disappear and from 10 to 20 pounds of solid, healthy flesh is added to the body. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. All leading druggists of this vicinity have it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied as per the guarantee found in every package.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00 money order or registered letter to the National Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you post paid.

NOTE—Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported, care should be taken about using it unless a gain of weight is desired.

SLEPT ON MARCH.

Strange Sidelight Thrown on Famous Retreat From Mons.

A wonderful new sidelight is thrown on the glorious retreat of the British and the French from Mons to the Marne by Dr. George W. Crile, a distinguished doctor.

In a recently-published book he tells how the French and our original expeditionary force marched 150 miles in nine days and nights often fast asleep, continually fighting desperate rear-guard actions against seemingly overwhelming hordes of Germans.

"Only rarely were sufficiently long halts made for the men to snatch a few moments of rest," writes Dr. Crile. "Food and water were scarce, and were irregularly supplied.

"The point of paramount interest in that retreat is in the sleep phenomena experienced by these men."

"It has been shown that animals subjected to the most favorable conditions, kept from exertion or worry, supplied with plenty of food, and in good hygienic surroundings, do not survive longer than from five to eight days without sleep.

"In this retreat from Mons to the Marne we have an extraordinary human experiment, in which several hundred thousand men obtained little sleep during nine days, and in addition, made forced marches and fought one of the greatest battles in history.

"How did these men survive nine days apparently without opportunity to sleep? They did an extraordinary thing—they slept while they marched. Sheer fatigue slowed down their pace to a rate that would permit them to sleep while walking.

"The unvaried testimony of the soldiers was that everyone at times slept on the march. They passed through villages asleep. When sleep deepened and they began to reel they were wakend by thir comrades.

"They slept in water, on stones, in brush, or in the middle of the road as if they had suddenly fallen in death. No man was safe who fell out of the ranks, for no matter on what pretext he fell out, sleep conquered him, and asleep many were captured. That the artillery men slept on horseback was evidenced by the fact that every man lost his cap.

"The complete exhaustion of the men is vividly told by Dr. Gros, of the American Ambulance, who, with others, went to the battlefield of the Marne to collect the wounded. When the ambulances arrived at Meaux at midnight they found the town in utter darkness. At last they succeeded in awaking the Mayor.

"'Can you tell in what village we shall find the wounded? We were told there were many here.'

"'My village is full of wounded. I will show you,' the mayor replied.

"They threaded their way through dark streets to a dilapidated school building. Not a sound! There was the stillness of death. They rapped louder; there was no response.

"Pushing open the door they found the building packed with wounded—more than 500. Some were dying; everyone was in a deep sleep. Bleeding, yet asleep; legs shattered, yet asleep. Not a groan, not a motion, not a complaint—only sleep.

"Surgical aid, the prospect of being taken to a good hospital, the thought of food and drink, of being removed from the range of the enemy's guns, awakened no interest. They had reached the stage of unconditional exhaustion, and desired only to be left alone. They slept on while their wounds were being dressed.

"After deep sleep for two or three days during which they wanted neither food nor drink, they began to be conscious of their surroundings; they asked questions, they experienced pain, they had discomforts and wants—they had returned from the abysmal oblivion of sleep."

MILITARY NEWS

was fought last April there has come back to us different reports as to individual bravery displayed by the boys of the Eighth Battalion Canadians. It is now an established fact that it was at one end of the Eighth Battalion's line that the break in the trench lines occurred, the adjoining battalion retiring while the gallant Eighth held their line intact. It is not, however, generally known that the reason the Eighth boys held their place was due to the determination and bravery of one of the N. C. O.'s in the wing platoon, who rallied the boys when they were about to break away, and kept them up to their places, thus preventing what would surely have been a disaster in very truth. Corporal Herbert Statham afterwards died a hero's death as nearly as we can find out the facts, but his memory will be cherished in Fort Frances by all who take pride in the heroic deeds of our noble self-sacrificing boys.

ALL ARE WELL.

A member of the Examiner staff has received a letter from Lieut (Dr.) Frederick of Peterborough, who is now with No. 1 Canadian Stationary Hospital, with the Mediterranean Expeditionary Force. Lieut. Frederick, who during a portion of the Dardanelles operations was stationed on the island of Lemnos, writes as follows, on March 3

Arrived Salonika (Greece) safe and well. Weather delightful. Have just had a fine month in Egypt. Kind regards to all the boys. No. 3 Canadian Stationary Hospital, with Mrs. Douglas of Peterborough on the staff, has taken over the hospital at Mena House, at the foot of the pyramids, in Cairo. All members from Peterborough in the various units are well.

The following extracts from advance copies of general orders are published for the information of all concerned

"The Counties of Northumberland Durham, Victoria, Peterborough, Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox, Addington, Frontenac, Haliburton, Carleton, Dundas, Glengarry, Renfrew, Russell, Stormont, Grenville, Lanark, Leeds, Prescott, the district of Nipissing south of the Mattawa river (exclusive of the townships of Ferris and Bonfield) in the Province of Ontario and the counties of Wright, Labelle and Pontiac in the Province of Quebec, are formed into an Eastern Ontario Military District to be known as Military District No 3, with headquarters at Kingston, Ont."

Lieut. Hoar of Bowmanville, an officer of the 136th Battalion, Port Hope, is a visitor in Peterborough to-day.

Members of the 93rd Battalion Brass Band are requested to meet at the Armouries to-morrow (Thursday) evening, at 7.45 o'clock.

A football match was played between the Bandsmen and C Company, and after a good game, C Company put the Band to sleep to the tune of 8 goals to 1. There is no doubt the Bandsmen are experts with their fingers on the musical instruments, but they will have to get a little more practice with their toes on the pig-skin before they will be up to International form.

The Kingston Standard says: Barriefield camp is now assured of at least 7,000 men, and before the camp opens it may be assured of another two or three thousand. The largest number the camp had at one time last summer was 6,000 men, and this number was only for a short time. During the greater part of the camp there were from 3,000 to 4,000 men under canvas. With a camp that will open with 7,000 men it means that Barriefield camp will be a bigger and more important military centre than ever.

The Examiner has received the following letter from "Somewhere in France":

Dear Sirs,—Just a few lines in remembrance of the 8th C.M.R. now in France. It is just about a year ago since we left the old town, but we will never forget the send off we got.

I guess you have all heard that we are all drafted into other regiments, but there is still a few of us left together.

We have been getting quite a Canadian winter here, but our feet did not suffer any, as we just received the socks which Mrs. Shaw sent us. All the boys send many thanks to her and all the ladies of the Kitchener Club. We have seen quite a lot of trench life and old war relics. We have also a few souvenirs which we will send the first opportunity we get.

Glad to hear that Peterborough is doing so well in recruiting. I guess we won't let the old flag fall. Most of the people will be surprised when they hear that Pte. E. Hargrove and Pte. C. Bouskill, both of Peterborough, were married while on pass to London. It seems that the Canadians in England are not forgetting that this is Leap Year, but don't let this worry the young girls, as I think there are one or two think of the girl they left behind.

Trusting you will allow me a small space in your paper for these few lines, I remain,

Yours sincerely,
Pte. I. Brady,
One of the 8th C.M.R.

Kidney Trouble?

The waste material which the Kidneys are intended to remove from the blood, if allowed to accumulate in the system, poison the blood and thus produce deleterious effects.

If from over-work, exposure to cold, or some local injury, the kidneys become congested or inflamed and cannot perform their functions, the system becomes filled with uric poisons.

Whenever a dull, heavy pain is felt over the region of the kidneys for any length of time, accompanied by a sallow complexion, loss of appetite, decrease of weight, and a puffy condition under the eyes and in the ankles, a chronic inflammation of the kidneys must be suspected, and if not relieved promptly chronic Bright's Disease will certainly develop.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, sold everywhere at 25c and 60c which is a Diuretic as well as an Aperient, will carry out of the system the poisonous material which the kidneys cannot get rid of, and will relieve the congestion of the kidneys.

Sold by E. L. Payne and McDermid & Jury.

SPORTSMEN'S PATRIOTIC ASSOCIATION SMOKER WAS A DECIDED SUCCESS

Splendid Boxing Bouts and Musical Programme Entertained a Big Crowd at the Armouries Last Night—180th Men Featured.

CHAMPS WERE HERE

The local branch of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association scored a triumph in its first undertaking, the smoker in the armouries last night under the auspices of the Association proving a great success. The parent body of the Sportsmen, as represented by its originators, Lt.-Col. Greer and Capt. Tom Flanagan of the 180th Battalion, made a splendid evening's sport possible by attending themselves and bringing with them some of the galaxy of boxing stars who now wear the khaki in the Sportsmen's Battalion. The Toronto sportsmen put on four bouts, while exhibitions by members of the 93rd battalion, vocal and instrumental numbers and some splendid music by the fine band of the 93rd combined to make the event one of the most enjoyable of its kind ever held here. There was a good crowd present, the citizens turning out splendidly, while the 93rd Battalion men were all on hand. A number of ladies occupied seats in the gallery and seemed to immensely enjoy the programme.

Lt.-Col. R. H. Greer, commanding officer of the 180th Battalion, and president of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association, delivered a most interesting address during the evening. Lt.-Col. Greer, who was enthusiastically received, explained the objects of the Association and urged the support of the citizens of Peterborough for the local branch. He pointed out that the Association had been formed for the purpose of looking after the amusements of the men in khaki and had succeeded splendidly. Through the co-operation of sporting organizations generally the Association in Toronto had raised $30,000, which was being extended for the boys in uniform. The troops at Niagara camp last year had been supplied with baseball sets, cricket sets, footballs, rugby balls, and equipment for every possible sport. It was the idea of the Association that a man was a better soldier who gets lots of outdoor sports that sent him to bed tired and kept him away from "devilment." Speaking of the local branch Lt.-Col. Greer said that the parent battalion was proud to accept it as one of the family. The speaker urged upon the people of Peterborough to do their best to see that the soldier boys were entertained. The Sportsmen's Patriotic Association provided the way and Lt.-Col. Greer asked for support for the Peterborough branch. "The child is on your doorstep. Take it in and bring it up," he concluded amid great applause.

Capt. Tom Flanagan, who was associated with Lt.-Col. Greer in the formation of the Sportsmen's Association, as well as in the organization of the Sportsmen's Battalion, acted as referee during several of the bouts and was given a warm reception when he climbed into the ring.

Corp. Billy Breen of the 180th, better known as the coach of the Peterborough Electric hockey team this season, and as trainer of the local teams in years gone by, was the announcer for the evening and made a good job of it. Corp. Tommy Daly, the well known trainer, also a member of the Sportsmen, was another prominent figure around the ring.

It was a splendid collection of boxing talent that the Sportsmen sent here and their bouts were all interesting. The feature of the evening was the clash between Bugler Russell of the 180th, the present 115 pound weight champion, and Bugler Pee-Wee Adams, also of the Sportsmen, who held the title in 1914 and 1915 and is now in the professional class. The two boys gave a beautiful exhibition of fast, hard boxing, mixing it freely but with honours about even. They were enthusiastically applauded as they left the ring.

Pte. Danny Johnston and Pte. Ted Picton, both of the Sportsmen and both former Canadian welter-weight champions, also put on a nice bout. Johnston is very clever, but Picton is a rugged, hard-hitting mit artist, and the bout was very even.

Two fly-weight boxers, Bugler Golbourn, weighing 92 pounds, and Bugler Peake, just one pound over the century mark, staged a lightning bout. The two little Sportsmen buglers went after each other in great style and Referee Chris Graham had a hard time pulling them apart.

The bout between Pte. Donovan and Pte. Christie, lightweight champions, only went one round. Pte. Donovan, who is threatened with an attack of appendicitis, but who came to Peterborough in spit of that fact and gamely tried to keep his engagement, was unable to continue after the first round. With both men in shape this would have been a cracker-jack bout.

The 93rd Bouts.

A number of bouts between members of the 93rd, while lacking the science shown by the Sportsmen's stars, were, nevertheless, interesting. The best of the clashes between the local men was the bout between Sergt. Jay and Pte. Geo. Lilly. The latter is a veteran but has plenty of speed and a good punch left. The two mixed it up and the crowd enjoyed the go. Pte. Rumary and Pte. Rootes also provided a good bout, with honours about even. Pte. Markwick and Pte. Smethurst had a lively clash, both showing promise, while Pte. Emery and Pte. King made up in energy what they lacked in science. There were two wrestling bouts on the card, Pte. Moodie throwing Pte. Guest and the latter taking a fall from Pte. J. Bradley.

Other Features.

Pte. Goolah of the 180th Battalion, made a big hit with his vocal numbers. He has a magnificent voice and knows how to use it. His first number, "She's a Daughter of Mother Machree," was enthusiastically received, and his encore number, "Save Your Kisses 'Til the Boys Come Home," was equally successful, a second encore being demanded.

Bugler Russell of the Sportsmen, demonstrated that he could do other things besides box by contributing a concertina solo that was cleverly played and warmly applauded. He replied with a number of patriotic airs, including "Keep the Home Fires Burning" and "Good Luck to the Boys of the Allies" that set everybody singing.

Corp. Breen, in addition to his work as announcer, added to the enjoyment of the evening with a couple of amusing recitations given in his inimitable style, convulsing the crowd.

The 93rd Band, under the direction of Bandmaster Hughes, assisted in the success by a well chosen and well-played programme of lively airs playing a couple of patrols and the descriptive number, "A Motor Ride."

Ex-Mayor Buller was chairman of the evening and at the beginning of the programme welcomed the Sportsmen's representatives representatives to Peterborough. Later on in the evening Major Watt expressed the hearty thanks of the 93rd Battalion to Lt.-Col. Greer, Capt. Flanagan and the members of the 180th Battalion for their kindness in coming to Peterborough and helping the Battalion and the Association.

Mr. Chris. Graham refereed nearly all the bouts and gave every satisfaction. No decisions were given in any case, the bouts being purely exhibitions. The bouts were all three-round affairs.

Following was the programme:

Boxing—
Pte. Smethurst, 93rd, vs. Pte. Markwick, 93rd.
Fly-weights—
Bugler Goldbourne, 180th, vs. Bugler Peake, 180th.
Address—Lt.-Col. Greer, 180th.

Wrestling—Pte. H. Guest, 93rd, vs. Pte. M. S. Moodie, 93rd. The latter won.
Boxing—115 pounds—Bugler Adams 180th, vs. Bugler Russell, 180th.
Boxing—Sergt. Jay, 93rd, vs. Pte. Geo. Lilly, 93rd.
Boxing—Pte. Joe Donovan, 180th, vs. Pte. Chas. Christie, 180th.

Boxing—Pte. Emery, 93rd, vs. Pte. King, 93rd.

The officials were were ex-Mayor Buller, chairman, Capt. Tom. Flanagan and Mr. C. G. Graham, referee. Lieut. Gillham, timer, and Corp. Breen announcer.

SPORTING COMMENT

"Big Bill" Hinchman, who pulled a come-back last autumn and celebrated by hitting .307 for the Pirates, was born in Philadelphia twenty-nine years ago to-day, April 4, 1887. Bill's 1915 come-back was his fourth trip to the majors. He started his career with Ilion, in the New York State circuit, in 1903, and after a couple of seasons there was given a Cincinnati uniform. He didn't last very long with the Reds, and finished the 1906 season in Williamsport. In 1908 he was recalled by Cincinnati, but was soon swapped to Boston, which released him to the Columbus A. A. team. Bill batted .314 for Columbus in 1905, and at the end of the season he was sold to Cleveland. On the third appearance in the big show Hinchman got away with it, and for three seasons he was a regular outfielder of the Naps.

Hinchman's memory isn't treasured very highly by the Cleveland fans, for it was a bone of his that cost the Naps the pennant in 1908. In that year the club, led by Field Marshal Napoleon came within an ace of grabbing the flag, and many of the fans blame Big Bill for the failure. On the final day of the 1908 season the Naps had two games on with the St Louis Browns. To win both of them meant that a gonfalon would wave from the Cleveland flagstaff. The Naps took one of the necessary pastimes, but lost t'other. There was a runner on third when Bill marched to bat. He touched the pill for a grounder over second. Hinchman was apparently so sure that it was a safe hit that he took his time in ambling to first, while the man on third was scooting for the plate. Ol' Bobby Wallace was on the job, however, and he made a wonderful atop of the ball and heaved it to first in time to get Bill by the fraction of a second. That war the third out, so the man who had crossed the plate didn't count, and the lost run cost the Naps the game and the flag. Of course many of the fans wanted to slay Umpire Egan for deciding against Hinchman, but others insisted—and will continue to do so to their dying day—that if Bill had travelled at top speed he would have been safe by a wide margin. So it was that the only American League flag that Cleveland almost had went glimmering.

Hinchman was sent back to Columbus in 1910, and remained there five seasons, acting as manager the last two seasons. In 1914 Bill seemed to enter on a new lease of life, and led the American Association in batting with an average of .365. That naturally led attention to Bill, and he was offered a berth with the Pirates last year. In the National League he hung up a swatting average of .307, being tied for third place in the standing of Tener circuit batsmen.

"Silent John" is 33.

"Silent John" Hummell, the veteran utility man who was released by Brooklyn early this year, will pass his thirty-third milestone to-day. Although dismissed by the Dodgers, Hummell is not minus an occupation for 1916, for he has had numerous offers. John was born in Bloomsburg, Pa., and gained his minor league experience with Wilmington, Del., and Holyoke, Mass. He joined the Brooklyn club in 1905 and since then he has played every infield and outfield position. "Silent John" was mighty near an ideal utility man, and he could do everything well except pitch. He was at his best, perhaps, when covering first base, and he was always a good, consistent batter. His quiet, unemotional, impassive temperament, which won for him the sobriquet of "Silent John," made him seem to be lacking in "pep" and aggressiveness, but he won the respect, if not the admiration, of all the fans and players.

WHAT EX-CANADIAN LEAGUERS DID IN LAST YEAR'S CAMPAIGN

The baseball guides just issued give statistics of former Canadian league players who performed in the major leagues or other circuits last season. The only Hamilton player that figured in the big show was Ray Keating, who was injured early in the season, and who figured in but eleven games. He fielded .969 hit for an average of .153 and won three games and lost six.

Ottawa fans are always interested in the doings of Artie Schwind, who shortstopped for Shaughnessy in 1912 and was drafted by the Boston Braves. He was farmed to Texas, where he has been ever since. Last year with Beaumont he took part in 106 games, scored 39 runs, stole 22 bases, and hit at a .256 clip. He ranked third among the shortstops of the Texas league.

Erwin Rentrer was also in the Texas league, pitching for Dallas. He won four, lost eight and tied one. He was used mostly as a relief pitcher.

Jack Mitchell, who played short for Ottawa in 1914, and was drafted by Indianapolis, played with Memphis in the Southern league last year. He took part in 117 games and only hit .214. The Indianapolis club offered him for sale to Ottawa this year.

Earle Neale, formerly of London, played the outfield for Wheeling last year and led the Central league hitters with .351. He was drafted by Cincinnati and is now south with the Reds.

Bobby Heck, the former London spitballer, who used to set the fans on edge when the umps announced the batters as "Rogers for Ottawa, Heck for London," twirled fine ball for the Erie club in the Central last year, winning 13 and losing 11. He got off to a bad start by losing six of his first seven games. Louis Schettler, the former Peterboro' pitcher, was the iron man of the Central, winning 24 and losing 19. He had a better record than Art Nehf of Terre Haute, who was sold to the Boston Braves, and set the National league on fire the last month of the 1915 season.

Petie Behan, the steel-armed short stop with Erie two year ago, started out with that club in the Central last season and finished with Wellaville in the Inter-State. He hit for .279 and led all the shortstops of the league in fielding.

Fred Ostermayer, whom Shag brought up from Fort Wayne in 1913, together with Joe Lill, won eight and lost five games from Durham in the Carolina association. In the beer-drinking league, Fred never lost a game.

Old Joe McManus, who won a million game from Ottawa in 1912, and started 1913 with Cincinnati, and finished in a Class D league, won 9 and lost 4 for Norfolk in the Virginia league in 1915. In fifteen games he only walked 27 men and hit two. The old boy was always a bear for control.

Merlin Kopp, the St. Thomas flash, who was sold to the Washington Americans toward the close of the Canadian league season, took part in 16 games in Ban Johnson's circuit, hitting .220. He only stole one base, however, against 44 in the Canadian league, so the inference is the beat-stops in the American have somewhat better arms than those in Jim Fitzgerald's wheel.

Fred Herbert won 15 and lost 16 games on the mound for Toronto in 1915. Irving Trout, the former Peterborough catcher, hit .228 with the Leafs in 80 games. He played the outfield most of the time.

AMERICAN LEAGUE MANAGERS DISCUSS SEASON'S PROSPECTS

The only clubs in the American League who apparently are not figured to have a chance in the race for the pennant are the Athletics and Cleveland. Foxy Connie Mack may surprise 'em, but it is not likely.

Appended we have opinions of six managers on the outcome of the American League dash:—

HUGH JENNINGS, the fly-ish of the Detroit Tigers, says: "Detroit, Boston, New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Washington, these are the teams I pick to fight it out for the 1916 American League flag."

BILL CARRIGAN, boss of the world's champion Boston Red Sox, declared: "Last winter I predicted that the American League race of the 1915 season would be between Detroit and Boston. I think the same teams will fight it out again to the finish, and I expect we will be the ones to cop. At least I hope so. The New York and St. Louis teams have been strengthened and they are liable to throw a lot of trouble into the schedule."

BILL DONOVAN, pilot of the rejuvenated New York 'Yankees, avers: "The addition of Home Run Baker has put the Highlanders in a great spot, so far as the winning of the American League pennant is concerned. I figure that Detroit has a chance if it secures one more pitcher to work regularly. Boston, Chicago and St. Louis are the other teams in the race. Washington has just an outside chance to slip in."

CLARENCE ROWLAND, of the Chicago White Sox says: "Chicago is going to set the pace, I think, however, that stubborn opposition will be furnished by Detroit, Boston, St. Louis and New York.

CLARK GRIFFITH, fast losing his title of "old fox" but still field general of the Washington team, chirps: "I see where a lot of folks are counting Washington out of the race. All I have to say is that a lot of these wise ones are going to be fooled. I have the best pitching staff in the league and I am not doing much worrying over my catching department. Boston, Detroit, St Louis, Chicago and New York are the other teams I pick to be in the fight from the start."

LEE FOLIN, chaperone of the Cleveland Indians, whispers: "Boston Detroit and Chicago are the real contenders for the pennant, but New York and St. Louis are liable to upset the dope pot."

LARYNGITIS PREVENTS LAUDER FROM SINGING

DETROIT, April 5. — Threatened with pneumonia, Harry Lauder's engagement at the Garrick Theatre was cancelled for last week. The laryngitis which has prevented the Scotch comedian from appearing has developed symptoms that may make it impossible for the singer to resume work even this wek. This attack of laryngitis has cost the famous Gaelic entertainer above $10,000. Lauder has been under the care of three eminent Detroit throat specialists all week. Monday evening his voice failed him entirely. Saturday morning his health was materially improved but later in the day his condition took a turn for the worse.

CANADA'S CHAMPION SOLDIER TUGGERS—The distinction of having the heaviest body of men on a tug-of-war team in any of the Canadian Expeditionary forces now in training in Canada is claimed by the 148th Battalion, Kingston, Ont. The aggregate weight of the team proper, made up of ten men, turns the scales at 2,180 lbs., and with their Captain, Company Sergeant-Major Fisher, another 178 lbs is added, this average weight of each man on the team without the captain is approximately 214 lbs., and with the captain 218 lbs. The above picture shows the latest photo of the team, which won against all-comers in several military carnivals, and is open to accept challenges against any tug-of-war team on the American Continent.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

SPORTSMEN'S PATRIOTIC ASSOCIATION SMOKER WAS A DECIDED SUCCESS

Splendid Boxing Bouts and Musical Programme Entertained a Big Crowd at the Armouries Last Night—130th Men Featured.

CHAMPS WERE HERE

The local branch of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association scored a triumph in its first undertaking, the smoker in the armouries last night under the auspices of the Association proving a great success. The parent body of the Sportsmen, as represented by its originators, Lt.-Col. Greer and Capt. Tom Flanagan of the 180th Battalion, made a splendid evening's sport possible by attending themselves and bringing with them some of the galaxy of boxing stars who now wear the khaki in the Sportsmen's Battalion. The Toronto sportsmen put on four bouts, while exhibitions by members of the 93rd battalion, vocal and instrumental numbers and some splendid music by the fine band of the 93rd combined to make the event one of the most enjoyable of its kind ever held here. There was a good crowd present, the citizens turning out splendidly, while the 93rd Battalion men were all on hand. A number of ladies occupied seats in the gallery and seemed to immensely enjoy the programme.

Lt.-Col. R. H. Greer, commanding officer of the 180th Battalion, and president of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association, delivered a most interesting address during the evening. Lt.-Col. Greer, who was enthusiastically received, explained the objects of the Association and urged the support of the citizens of Peterborough for the local branch. He pointed out that the Association had been formed for the purpose of looking after the amusements of the men in khaki and had succeeded splendidly. Through the co-operation of sporting organizations generally the Association in Toronto had raised $30,000, which was being extended for the boys in uniform. The troops at Niagara camp last year had been supplied with baseball sets, cricket sets, footballs, rugby balls, and equipment for every possible sport. It was the idea of the Association that a man was a better soldier who gets lots of outdoor sports that sent him to bed tired and kept him away from "devilment." Speaking of the local branch Lt.-Col. Greer said that the parent battalion was proud to accept it as one of the family. The speaker urged upon the people of Peterborough to do their best to see that the soldier boys were entertained. The Sportsmen's Patriotic Association provided the way and Lt.-Col. Greer asked for support for the Peterborough branch. "The child is on your doorstep. Take it in and bring it up," he concluded amid great applause.

Capt. Tom Flanagan, who was associated with Lt.-Col. Greer in the formation of the Sportsmen's Association, as well as in the organization of the Sportsmen's Battalion, acted as referee during several of the bouts and was given a warm reception when he climbed into the ring.

Corp. Billy Breen of the 180th, better known as the coach of the Peterborough Electric hockey team this season, and as trainer of the local teams in years gone by, was the announcer for the evening and made a good job of it. Corp. Tommy Daly, the well known trainer, also a member of the Sportsmen, was another prominent figure around the ring.

It was a splendid collection of boxing talent that the Sportsmen sent here and their bouts were all interesting. The feature of the evening was the clash between Bugler Russell of the 180th, the present 115 pound weight champion, and Bugler Pee-Wee Adams, also of the Sportsmen, who held the title in 1914 and 1915 and is now in the professional class. The two boys gave a beautiful exhibition of fast, hard boxing, mixing it freely but with honours about even. They were enthusiastically applauded as they left the ring.

Pte. Danny Johnston and Pte. Ted Picton, both of the Sportsmen and both former Canadian welter-weight champions, also put on a nice bout. Johnston is very clever, but Picton is a rugged, hard-hitting mit artist, and the bout was very even.

Two fly-weight boxers, Bugler Golbourn, weighing 92 pounds, and Bugler Peake, just one pound over the century mark, staged a lightning bout. The two little Sportsmen buglers went after each other in great style and Referee Chris Graham had a hard time pulling them apart.

The bout between Pte. Donovan and Pte. Christie, lightweight champions, only went one round. Pte. Donovan, who is threatened with an attack of appendicitis, but who came to Peterborough in spit of that fact and gamely tried to keep his engagement, was unable to continue after the first round. With both men in shape this would have been a cracker-jack bout.

The 93rd Bouts.

A number of bouts between members of the 93rd, while lacking the science shown by the Sportsmen's stars, were, nevertheless, interesting. The best of the clashes between the local men was the bout between Sergt. Jay and Pte. Geo. Lilly. The latter is a veteran but has plenty of speed and a good punch left. The two mixed it up and the crowd enjoyed the go. Pte. Rumary and Pte. Rootes also provided a good bout, with honours about even. Pte. Markwick and Pte. Smethurst had a lively clash, both showing promise, while Pte. Emery and Pte. King made up in energy what they lacked in science. There were two wrestling bouts on the card, Pte. Moodie throwing Pte. Guest and the latter taking a fall from Pte. J. Bradley.

Other Features.

Pte. Goolah of the 180th Battalion, made a big hit with his vocal numbers. He has a magnificent voice and knows how to use it. His first number, "She's a Daughter of Mother Machree,' was enthusiastically received, and his encore number, "Save Your Kisses 'Til the Boys Come Home," was equally successful, a second encore being demanded.

Bugler Russell of the Sportsmen, demonstrated that he could do other things besides box by contributing a concertina solo that was cleverly played and warmly applauded. He replied with a number of patriotic airs, including "Keep the Home Fires Burning" and "Good Luck to the Boys of the Allies" that set everybody singing.

Corp. Breen, in addition to his work as announcer, added to the enjoyment of the evening with a couple of amusing recitations given in his inimitable style, convulsing the crowd.

The 93rd Band, under the direction of Bandmaster Hughes, assisted in the success by a well chosen and well-played programme of lively airs playing a couple of patrols and the descriptive number, "A Motor Ride."

Ex-Mayor Buller was chairman of the evening and at the beginning of the programme welcomed the Sportsmen's representatives representatives to Peterborough. Later on in the evening Major Watt expressed the hearty thanks of the 93rd Battalion to Lt.-Col. Greer, Capt. Flanagan and the members of the 180th Battalion for their kindness in coming to Peterborough and helping the Battalion and the Association.

Mr. Chris. Graham refereed nearly all the bouts and gave every satisfaction. No decisions were given in any case, the bouts being purely exhibitions. The bouts were all three-round affairs.

Following was the programme:

Boxing—
Pte. Smethurst, 93rd, vs. Pte. Markwick, 93rd.
Fly-weights—
Bugler Goldbourne, 180th, vs. Bugler Peake, 180th.
Address—Lt.-Col. Greer, 180th.
Song—Pte. Goolah, 180th.
Boxing—145 pounds—Pte. Danny Johnston, 180th, vs. Pte. Ted Picton, 180th.
Boxing—Pte. Rumary, 93rd, vs. Pte. S. Rootes, 93rd.
Recitation—Corp. W. Breen, 180th.
Wrestling—Pte. H. Guest, 93rd, vs. Pte. M. S. Moodie, 93rd. The latter won.
Boxing—115 pounds—Bugler Adams 180th, vs. Bugler Russell, 180th.
Boxing—Sergt. Jay, 93rd, vs. Pte. Geo. Lilly, 93rd.
Boxing—Pte. Joe Donovan, 180th, vs. Pte. Chas. Christie, 180th.
Concertina solo—Bugler Russell, 180th.
Boxing—Pte. Emery, 93rd, vs. Pte King, 93rd.
Wrestling — Pte. Guest, 93rd, vs. Pte. Bradley, 93rd. Won by the former.

The officials were were ex-Mayor Buller, chairman, Capt. Tom. Flanagan and Mr. C. G. Graham, referee. Lieut. Gillham, timer, and Corp. Breen announcer.

SPORTING COMMENT

"Big Bill" Hinchman, who pulled a come-back last autumn and celebrated by hitting .307 for the Pirates, was born in Philadelphia twenty-nine years ago to-day, April 4, 1887. Bill's 1915 come-back was his fourth trip to the majors. He started his career with Dion, in the New York State circuit, in 1905, and after a couple of seasons there was given a Cincinnati uniform. He didn't last very long with the Reds, and finished the 1905 season in Williamsport. In 1906 he was recalled by Cincinnati, but was soon swapped to Boston, which released him to the Columbus A. A. team. Bill batted .314 for Columbus in 1906, and at the end of the season he was sold to Cleveland. On the third appearance in the big show Hinchman got away with it, and for three seasons he was a regular outfielder of the Naps.

Hinchman's memory isn't treasured very highly by the Cleveland fans, for it was a bone of his that cost the Naps the pennant in 1908. In that year the club, led by Field Marshal Napoleon came within an ace of grabbing the flag, and many of the fans blame Big Bill for the failure. On the final day of the 1908 season the Naps had two games on with the St Louis Browns. To win both of them meant that a gonfalon would wave from the Cleveland flagstaff. The Naps took one of the necessary pastimes, but lost t'other. There was a runner on third when Bill marched to bat. He touched the ball for a grounder over second. Hinchman was apparently so sure that it was a safe hit that he took his time in ambling to first, while the man on third was scooting for the plate. Ol' Bobby Wallace was on the job, however, and he made a wonderful stop of the ball and heaved it to first in time to get Bill by the fraction of a second. That was the third out, so the man who had crossed the plate didn't count, and the lost run cost the Naps the game and the flag. Of course many of the fans wanted to slay Umpire Evan for deciding against Hinchman, but others insisted—and will continue to do so to their dying day—that if Bill had travelled at top speed he would have been safe by a wide margin. So it was that the only American League flag that Cleveland almost had went glimmering.

Hinchman was sent back to Columbus in 1910, and remained there five seasons, acting as manager the last two seasons. In 1914 Bill seemed to enter on a new lease of life, and led the American Association in batting with an average of .366. That naturally led attention to Bill, and he was offered a berth with the Pirates last year. In the National League he hung up a swatting average of .307, being tied for third place in the standing of Tener circuit batsmen.

HOW TO PROLONG LIFE

By adopting a simple diet men like Conaro have lived to be 100 years of age, but with our complex diets of to-day, the vitality of the aged is taxed to its utmost endurance. A simple diet, therefore, is conducive to a long life, and if the vitality becomes impaired and weakness seems apparent, our local druggists, McDermid & Dury and E. L. Payne have in Vinol a reliable, non-secret remedy which contains just the elements needed to restore strength to weak, feeble old people, and prolong a healthy, happy life.

Old Weather Signs.

Here are a few old English weather signs which are older probably than anyone living to-day. Experience has shown them to be fairly reliable, and some of them can be explained on a scientific basis:

Moonlight nights have the heaviest frosts.

The higher the clouds the finer the weather.

The farther the sight the nearer the rain.

Dew is an indication of fine weather.

When stars flicker in a dark background, rain or snow follows soon.

Expect a strong wind with stormy weather when smoke from chimneys hangs near the ground.

Here are a few in verse. They have the advantage of being easily remembered:

Clear moon,
Frost soon.
Year of snow,
Fruit will grow.
Rain before seven,
Fine before eleven.
If the sun set in grey
The next will be a rainy day.
When the wind's in the south
The rain's in its mouth.
The wind in the west
Suits everyone best.
If you see grass in January
Lock your grain in your granary.
Evening red and morning grey
Help the traveller on his way;
Evening grey and morning red
Bring down rain upon his head.
When the clouds appear like rocks and towers,
The earth's refreshed by frequent showers.

Care of the Eyes.

On rising in the morning the eyes should be bathed gently in cold water. Twenty passes are said to be decidedly strengthening. While using them closely they should be rested at intervals of an hour or two, for the strain of constant reading, etc., is like that of extending the arms at a certain height immovably. Imagine, then, the taxing of the eyes, which cannot complain save after years of irreparable neglect. When dust settles in the eyes warm water will soothe them of any inflammation.

The British Ambassador called at Councellor Polk's office to discuss especially the China case.

The French Ambassador saw Secretary Lansing, presumably on the situation arising from the Allies' refusal to heed the American protest against the seizure of mail.

BERLIN, April 5.—The German Chancellor told the Reichstag to-day that on Sept. 9th he had declared his readiness to enter into peace discussions, but that Germany's enemies had declined.

"Let us suppose," said the chancellor, "that I suggest to Premier Asquith that he sit down with me at a table and examine the possibilities of peace. Mr. Asquith begins with a claim for the definite and complete destruction of Prussia's military power. You see the conversation would be ended before it began.

"To these peace conditions from our enemies, only one answer is left. This answer, our sword must give. If our adversaries want to continue the slaughter of human beings, and the devastation of Europe, theirs will be the guilt, and we will have to stand it as men."

The HOME CIRCLE COLVMN

THE OLD MOTTO.

We found it in the attic where it long had lain away;
The dust had veiled the letters in a shroud of misty gray,
A spider's web was tangled in its odd fantastic weaves
Across the frame whose corners were hand carved in oaken leaves,
The old discarded motto—it was worked in green and red
On perforated cardboard, and "God Bless Our Home," it said.

"God Bless Our Home"—and loving hands reach out from all the years,
The hands that always reached to help, that wiped away our tears,
And now we know full well that when this motto held its place
They meant the faded prayer that today we slowly trace;
That every morn of work to do, that every night of rest,
The good old home was by some mystic benediction blest.

TO OUR YOUNG LADY READER.

To the young ladies who weekly read this column, we are moved by the good spirit to write a few words concerning their duties to their mothers. It may be you have noticed a careworn look upon her face lately. Of course it has not been brought there by any act of yours; still it is your duty to chase it away. Would it not be a happy surprise to her if you should occasionally bid her to sit down and rest while you performed the ardent is duties in hand? And how a tender kiss on her mouth will cause her dear face to brighten. Anyway you owe her a kiss or two. Away back, when you were a little bit of a girl she kissed you when no one else was tempted by your fever tainted breath and swollen face. You were not so attractive then as you are now. And through those years of childish sunshine and shadows, she was always ready to cure by the magic of mother's kiss, your little, dirty, chubby hands whenever they were injured in the first skirmishes with the rough old world.

And then the midnight kiss with which she routed so many bad dreams as she leaned above your restless pillow, have all been on interest these long, long years.

Of course she is not so pretty and kissable as you are; but if you had done your share of the work during the last ten years, the contrast would not be so marked.

Her face has more wrinkles than yours, and yet if you were sick that face would appear far more beautiful than an angel's as it hovered over you watching every opportunity to minister to your comfort and every one of these wrinkles would seem to be bright wavelets of sunshine chasing each other over the dear face.

She will leave you one of these days. These burdens, if not lifted from her shoulders, will break her down. Those rough, hard hands that have done so many necessary things for you, will be crossed upon her lifeless breast.

Those neglected lips that gave you your first baby kiss will be forever closed, and those sad, tired eyes will have opened on eternity, and then you will appreciate your mother; but it will be too late.

"Miners' Guardian Angel."

Miners of the North of England this year celebrate the centenary of the introduction of the Davy safety-lamp. It was on January 10th, 1816, that the "miners' guardian angel" was first introduced into any pit. Sir Humphry Davy's invention was really the outcome of the terrible calamity at Felling Colliery, Co. Durham, on May 25th, 1812, when ninety-two miners were killed and many injured. Davy began his experiments in the autumn of 1815, with fine wire gauze as an "explosive sieve," and on January 10th, 1816, the first lamp was tried by a hardly band of pioneers in the workings of Hebburn-on-Tyne colliery. The actual lamp is now a treasure in the Geological Museum in Jermyn street, London.

Animal Doctors.

There is more than one kind of animal that, when in a state of nature, employs animals of another kind to protect it from disease and other ills. For instance, crocodiles in the Nile make friends with a little bird called the Egyptian plover, which feeds on the insects that infest their jaws, and also on the pieces of food that cling to their teeth. No crocodile will ever harm this bird, for not only does it save him from having bad teeth, but it prevents him from being considerably irritated by the flies. An even more curious animal partnership than this is that which exists between the hermit crab and a worm called a "nereis." The hermit lives in the empty shell of some other shellfish; but as he is a very untidy creature and litters his "house" with bits of food, he induces the nereis worm to come and live with him. In return for shelter, the worm cleans up the hermit's dwelling by eating all the refuse that is left about the shell.

A Carrier's Fortune.

The death of Mr. Robert Christison, one of the foremost Queensland pioneers, recalls the romance of a Berwickshire post-boy whom he met out in the bush. James Nailan, the first post-boy between Foulden and Berwick, emigrated to Australia over fifty years ago. By working for two years he saved enough money to buy a yoke of oxen, and he made a small fortune by acting as carrier during the rush to Bendigo for the gold-digging.

Mr. Christison met him in "Bacchus Marsh," hiding for fear of attack by bushrangers. A feature of his equipment was a pair of bullock-horns, ostensibly filled with cart-grease, but having secreted in them 206oz. of gold-dust. Four years later Mr. Christison met him again in Melbourne. He had saved £2,000 as carrier, and bought land near the place chosen as harbor for Melbourne. As the result of his investment he was enabled to return to his native county and buy an estate of 1,000 acres.

The Germans Have Started a Fresh Offensive at Riga

Another Zeppelin Raids the North-east Coast of England

Heavy Concentrations of German Troops Reported On West Bank of the Meuse

Germans Are Now Stripping Their Lines From Soissons Eastward, in Order to Throw Fresh Forces Into the Battle ---Resumption of the Bombardment of the Vaux Front

LONDON, April 6.—Heavy concentrations of German troops on the west bank of the Meuse, and the resumption of the bombardment of the Vaux front on the east bank, were reported in Paris despatches to-day.

The Germans are now stripping their lines from Soissons eastward, in order to throw fresh forces into the battle. Regiments exhausted in the furious struggle about the citadel are being withdrawn and sent to portions of the line where little fighting is expected for many weeks.

New regiments which had not participated in the earlier Verdun fighting, were in action against the French around Vaux early this week. Following torrents of shell fire they charged the French trenches with such spirit that the French were first forced to fall back in Caillette woods, recovering ground later by counter-attacks.

Wounded French officers paid tribute to the bravery of the Germans in the attack that drove the French out of Vaux village. The Teutons advanced first in massed formation. Then, raked by fire from the French 75's, they broke into small groups and ran toward the houses of Vaux with rifle and machine gun fire sweeping the fields.

In the hand-to-hand fighting in the village streets, both sides suffered further heavy losses.

Britain Can Remain in Fight Indefinitely Says Financial Expert

LONDON, April 6.—A Zeppelin raided the northeast coast of England last night. There is no report as to the damage done. It is officially announced that a second Zeppelin was winged in innocent raids on England.

ROME, April 6.—Austrian airmen attempted a raid on Verona but were driven away by Italian gunfire. Two machines fell to the ground behind Austrian lines.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—President Wilson says he will now take final steps in the submarine issue with Germany.

COPENHAGEN, April 6.—German Government has seized all stocks of cocoa, tea and coffee.

LONDON, April 6.—Germans have started a fresh general offensive against the Russians at Riga.

OTTAWA, April 6. — New charges of war graft are expected to be made shortly.

LONDON, April 6.—British defeated the Turks in a fight on the Tigris River near Kut-El-Amara, taking a strong Turkish fort.

LONDON, April 6.—England's greatest financial expert says Britain can remain in the fight indefinitely as far as finances are concerned.

SAYS ALLIES ARE PREPARING FOR ANOTHER WINTER CAMPAIGN

NEW YORK, April 5. —Among financial and business men in England there is a strong feeling that Germany aims to capture Verdun and then notify the neutral nations that she is ready to consider terms of peace. Some optimistic persons believe the war will have ended by October, but military officials think it is certain to last into 1917, and preparations are being made for another winter campaign. Some officials at the Admiralty are of the opinion that the German fleet will come out into the North Sea, but advices from Berlin seem to indicate that the Kaiser's policy is to wait and try to destroy the British warships one by one rather than risk a fight in which his fleet would be hopelessly outnumbered.

With regard to the prospects for peace in the near future, West F. de Wend Fenton, editor of the London World, said:

"I think that the proposals which are reputed to have been circulated by Col. E. M. House are correct in the main. It is known that Germany is willing to give up Belgium if she can get concessions in the Near East, and would be content with Antivari, on the Adriatic, and Salonika, on the Aegean Sea. Germany has been making overtures to Russia to give her Constantinople, but I do not believe that Russia will be satisfied with anything less than an outlet for her Black Sea trade.

After the Emperor Francis Joseph's death if is well known that Germany and Austria will become a dual monarchy, and the minor Balkan states will be submerged, including Bulgaria, which is being Germanized to-day by scientific and military systems.

"With regard to the prospects of a spring offensive by the Allies, some critics think that the chief movement is likely to come from the south-east of Europe.

"The Russian advance in Asia Minor continues to be rapid, and its sentimental and political effect in the Balkans is already beginning to be pronounced.

"I believe that the only reason that Roumania has not yet definitely joined the Allies is the hesitation of Sir Edward Grey to make concessions to the Roumanian demands with regard to Bulgaria. Sir Edward is, rightly or wrongly, considered to have Bulgarian sympathies, while Roumania, not unnaturally, insists that the provisions of the Treaty of Bucharest shall be upheld by Great Britain.

"It is considered almost certain that Greece will follow the course pursued by Roumania, and with these two countries on the side of the Allies, a forward movement to roll up the Austrian flank would immediately become possible."

WORRIED AND SLEEPLESS?

Worry, overwork, over-study and indigestion cause Insomnia.

Healthy, natural sleep can't be produced by drugs.

First, the blood circulation must be improved:

Congestion of blood in the head must be removed.

Irritation in the brain must be relieved.

It's because Ferrosone equalizes circulation, because it soothes congestion that it does cure insomnia.

For building blood and nerve, for instilling force and life into overworked organs, for establishing strength and vitality, where can you find anything so sure as Ferrosone.

Remember, sleep is just as important as food.

You must sleep, or break down.

You can if you'll use Ferrosone and thereby remove the conditions which now keep you from sleep.

Ferrosone is not a narcotic, not a dope; it is a health-giving tonic that any child or delicate woman can use.

Absolutely safe is Ferrosone.

Take it for a month, take it for a year—no harm, but immeasurable good will result.

HAIR COMING OUT?

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. After a few applications the hair stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff.

GIRL'S VISIT MAY SAVE LIFE.

HARTFORD, April 5.—After a visit by his sweetheart to his bedside at St. Francis Hospital yesterday it was announced that John Henry, 20 years old, of Glastonbury, would probably recover from the bullet wound he inflicted on Friday when he held a photograph of Bessie Walker, 17 years old, of 82 Sargeant street, over his heart as a target. Young Henry believed that another suitor was favoured.

AUSTRIA NOT SICK OF WAR

Premier of Hungary Says So—Not War of Conquest.

LONDON, April 5.—Count Stephen Tissa, the Hungarian premier, is quoted in despatches from Budapest, as stating that Austria-Hungary is not fighting to secure new territory in Europe, but merely is united with Germany in a struggle until a fair and satisfactory conclusion is reached. "That's is all we want," he said and denied that Austria is "sick of the war," but he admitted that the war was long, hard and painful for all."

The Enemy Has Thirty Divisions Around Verdun

At a Moderate Estimate They Suffered 150,000 Casualties During the First Month of the Battle

LONDON, April 6.—Colonel Repington, the military correspondent of the Loading Times, sends that journal the following account of his visit to the Verdun front:

"The Germans now have thirty divisions around Verdun. At a moderate estimate, they suffered 150,000 casualties during the first month of the battle. They are getting no rest. The French are assuming superiority in artillery. They continue their fire all day and all night. They hold every road, reserve position, ravine, wood, and possible billeting zone under their fire. No German within five miles of the French guns can be sure of a moment's rest; and while the 250,000 German infantry suffered the bulk of the losses, there are probably 125,000 men of the artillery supply and other arms and services who also suffered much.

Petain's Policy.

"General Petain is not above giving the enemy a piece of ground it he wants it very badly, and if it forms a not easily defensible salient like Malancourt; but he is a stickler for the price and will not allow the enemy to come on until he is ready to pay three lives for one. In every unexpected corner machine guns watch to strike.

The chief theatre of fighting remains in the northern front. It is on this front that the main masses of German artillery are posted in two main groups—one about Septarges the other around Beaumont. Flank positions on the northern front — namely, Avocourt and Malancourt on the west, and Vaux on the east — are utilised mainly for the tactical purpose of aiding the northern attack. The German position in the Woevre plain is bad, and the artillery on this side seems to be willing to stop firing when it is left alone. Since the failure of the great attack on Fort De Vaux the Germans have dropped back a few hundred yards from the entanglements of the French.

Carpeted With Dead.

"The whole northern front is carpeted with German dead. A French patrol went out by night to examine one of the foremost German trenches which had been reported full of men by our air observers. The trench, in fact, was full of Germans but all were dead.

"Since this great attack failed the Crown Prince has resorted to his favorite method of disconnected and partial attacks. He did the same in the Argonne, when he commanded there and on one occasion made attacks with twenty-six battalions in succession, taken from twenty-one different regiments. Before Verdun he is making similar attacks, using up his divisons one by one.

Crown Prince a Failure.

"We are fortunate to have him here; but, just as in the Argonne, he was given all he needed with bountiful hands in the vain hope of connecting his name with victory. So now the whole German line is being drained of men and guns to save him from failure. He appears beneath everything as a commander, and but for his birth would have long since been relieved!"

Presentation to Rev. W. C. Holdsworth

Havelock Minister Who Leaves For a New Charge Was Presented With a Gold-headed Ebony Cane

On Wednesday evening of last week the congregation of St. John's church bid the incumbent, Rev. C. W. Holdsworth, a reluctant farewell and presented him with a beautiful gold headed ebony cane, accompanied by the following address:

Dear Mr. Holdsworth.—As you are now leaving our parish of Belmont under the authority of the government of our beloved Church of England, in order to set forth the true word and administer the Holy Sacraments of our Heavenly Father to those in fellowship with us in another parish, we, your parishioners having assembled, desire to acknowledge that during the past seven years of your sojourn here, we have endeavoured to emulate the example of your righteous life and have received many lasting benefits both spiritual and temporal from your ministrations and we have also profited by your surpassing sermons from the pulpit and discourses of the various Church functions. We believe you are a true servant of our Father in Heaven and one of Christ's true apostles and an indefatigable missionary spreading the gospel to every land and every clime. During your ministry our church edifice has been beautified in a way suitable to its exalted purpose and enriched with gifts devoted to religious use, and for temporal purposes the most modern financial system has been adopted. Your ministry affords one of the most brilliant passages in the history of St. John's. We well know that our Church's work in your hands will progress and wonderfully thrive in your new parish, and that your parishioners there will benefit by your efforts as a minister of the gospel and missionary. You carry with you our best wishes, and as a humble tribute of our regard for your work and you we entrust you to accept this modest gift.

Signed on behalf of the congregation,

F. H. Falkner,
H. W. Roche,
Wardens.

Mr. Holdsworth, in expressing his thanks for the presentation, assured his parishioners of his great regret at leaving so many kind friends and of the high regard he and Mrs. Holdsworth held all.—Havelock Standard

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush your kidneys occasionally if you eat meat regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys, and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Because hold up men are robbing the congregation in the dark streets after service, Dean James Tancock, of Trinity Episcopal Cathedral Omaha, announces that hereafter he will hold no more night services

OUR SERIAL STORY

"Flower of the Gorse"

BY LOUIS TRACY

Yvonne had Mrs. Carmac's trick of wrinkling her brows when in deep thought. Many a time had her father chaffed her on the habit, and pretended to wait in breathless suspense till the oracle announced its weighty decision. But the creasing of the smooth forehead passed unnoticed now. They were no longer light-hearted playmates, but a man and a woman pondering one of life's most harrowing problems.

"Raymond can get nothing at all unless he acts through Rupert Foodyke," she said collectedly. "Why shouldn't an arrangement be made with him—Foodyke, I mean. It's all a question of this wretched money. Why shouldn't Mother give it to him and his sisters? Surely they would leave her sufficient to live on?"

Youth is sanguine. Yvonne had reached the same conclusion at Tollemache; that, if money were really the root of all evil, the noxious growth that had sprung into such vigorous existence in Pont Aven since the feast of Saint Barbara might be torn out bodily.

But Ingersoll thought the discussion had gone far enough for the time. Certainly a settlement on reasonable lines might be affected; but it was impracticable to form anything in the nature of a fixed opinion until Yvonne and her mother had talked matters over in the light of full understanding. Something was gained in the fact that the last obstacle in the way of complete confidence between Yvonne and himself had been thrown down. His manner showed how beneficial this belief on his part might prove. He sprang up with a certain alertness of movement that was element of newborn hope.

"No more talk to-night Mignonne," he cried cheerfully. "Now that we know the worst, we can fight in the open side by side. Hitherto I have felt that I was treating you unfairly in withholding from your ken the most damaging item in your mother's catalogue of worries. Tell her what I have said. I want you to speak without reservation. Then, if she is equally candid, we shall know just where we stand and whence the main attack may come."

Unhappily Yvonne was aware when kissing her father goodnight, that the enemy was attacking already; but she held steadfast to the resolve not to disclose Raymond's brazen scheme at present. That day had produced sufficient wretchedness of spirit already.

So the two parted, and Yvonne, when safe in the solitude of her room, knelt and prayed that some ray of sunshine should pierce the gathering clouds. Then, in more tranquil mood, she forced her thoughts into a new channel by reading some pages of a biography of John Ruskin. By curious chance she came across a passage dealing with Ruskin's ill-fated love for Rosie La Touche, and copied out a poignant passage in a letter he wrote to a friend:

"I want my Rosie here. In heaven I mean to go and talk with Pythagoras and Socrates and Valerius Publicola. I shan't care a bit for Rosie there; she needn't think it. What will grey eyes and red cheeks be good for there?"

Yvonne closed the book with a snap. That shaft from the bow so deftly sped her very heart. She loved Tollemache. She wanted her Lorry here. If any maleficent influence drove him from her, all the brightness and color would depart out of her life, a pleasant world grew cold and gray for evermore.

Then, being weary yet eminently healthy, she went to bed and slept dreamlessly, and was up betimes in the morning. It was pleasant to see the sun rising into a clear sky above the stunted trees crowning the Toulifot hill. The frosty weather, coming unusually early that year had lasted far beyond the prescribed brief period of such cold snaps in December. There was little or no wind. It was an ideal day for a walk. Meaning to excuse herself from motoring, and wheedle her father into a long tramp after luncheon,—with Lorry, perchance, to disprove the infallibility of and adage that two is company and three is none,—she warned Mere Pitou and that she would return for the midday meal.

"Ah tcha!" said Madame testily. "What between one thing and another I'm thinking of taking a holiday. Little Barbe could have done all the cooking needed in this house during the past week. Look at your father. Anyone would say I starved him. As for you, flying and eating scraps and hashes in strange hotels, I'm surprised at you."

Yvonne assured her irate landlady that the best ragout in Brittany would not lack appreciation that day, and went to visit her mother in more cheerful mood than she would have deemed possible overnight. It was market day, and the Place au Beurre, beside whose old houses the parish church of Saint Guenole reared its modest spire, was alive already with country carts, smart coifs, and velvet jackets. In the larger square across the bridge traders from neighboring towns were erecting stalls for the display of their merchandise, mostly wearing apparel and articles of household use.

Yvonne knew everybody and everybody knew her. She had a smile and a nod for the Widow Limbour, whose confectionery and sweets had won her heart years ago, for Marrec the barber, Daoudal the baker, Madame Le Naour, purveyor of a strange blend in hats and liqueurs, and Madame Le Garrec, seller of newspapers and picture postcards. Monsieur le Courrone, whose little gallery had held many of her father's pictures, had spared a moment from his artistic wood carving, and was looking out at the crowded marketplace. The Morvans, Monsieur et Madame, whose Breton costumes and laces excite the desire and empty the purses of fair visitors in the summer, were in Pont Aven that day, and Canivet the coach builder was standing at the entrance to the yard that houses his industry. Each and all greeted Yvonne. For a few happy minutes she forgot her worries, until a girl met her, and asked shyly:

"Is there any news of Madeleine?"

That took some of the blue out of the sky. Yvonne had to confess that nothing was known of Madeleine except that she had gone to Quimperle the previous day. Her questioner simpered and passed on. Madeleine's story was already discredited. Much water would flow under the bridge before she was reinstated in the good opinion of Pont Aven.

Yvonne caught sight of Tollemache, standing, with a pipe in his mouth and his hands in his pockets, outside Julia's. And by the way, there is no disrespect in this curt allusion to the name of the chief hotel in the village. It is never spoken of locally otherwise than as "Julia's" in English and "Chez Julia" in French. The excellent lady who is a large extent built, and in every other way owns the property would think her popularity was fading if any more ceremonious description was used.

Near Lorry were Captain Pipplo and Jackson the latter now promoted to a stick and a slow limp. Yvonne would have passed with a smiling "Good morning," but Tollemache pocketed his pipe and hailed her. She realized instantly that he was excited about something quite out of the common run, though his air was studiously composed.

Tobacco Heart

CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Tobacco does not seem to affect all alike. Many men enjoy their smoke, live to a good old age, and apparently suffer no ill effects from the use of the weed.

There are others, though, on whose heart and nervous system tobacco produces the most serious results.

It causes palpitation, pain in the heart and irregularity of its beat, makes the hands tremble, sets the nerves on edge, and the breath becomes short.

To counteract this demoralizing influence on the heart and nerves there is no remedy that equals Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

They make the heart beat strong and steady, restore tone and vigor to the nerves, and remove all the evil results caused by the tobacco.

Mr. Nelson Young, Brampton, Ont., writes: "I have had, up to about a month ago, a very weak heart, which I suppose came from smoking cigarettes. When I heard of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as a cure, I immediately gave up smoking, and started using them. It does you justice to be the founder of such a great remedy. They made me feel like a new man."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

"You're quite the Mrs. Carmac, I suppose?" he said "Yes," she answered, coloring slightly under the intensity of his gaze, for Lorry had fine eyes, and now they seemed to be looking into her heart; which was so absurd a notion that her cheeks grew redder and redder.

"You won't be there long before Raymond comes in," he went on earnestly. "When he turns up I want you to look out through the window, and touch your chin with your right hand. That's all."

She laughed quite merrily, for sheer relief at the discovery that he was thinking of anything but the fantasy that had caused that riot in her veins. "Dear me!" she cried. "What does that signify in the code? Is he to be garroted straight off?"

GERMANS GETTING WORRIED ABOUT COMING CROPS

The Hague, April 6.—Germans are worrying already concerning the coming harvest. Newspapers from the Kaiser's side of the frontier lay much stress on the fact that relief from present semi-famine conditions is more important than even the greatest military gains.

The anxious tone of this comment strongly suggests that the press puts little faith in the official attribution of 1915's comparatively unsatisfactory showing to bad weather.

As a matter of fact, it is asserted, the area of land under cultivation actually decreased and it is denied that in any case was cultivation as intensive as it should have been.

For one thing, it is said, that so large a proportion of agricultural labourers were drafted into the army that work was left to inexperienced hands. The government is cautiously urged to consider that the importance of a good crop this year is sufficient to warrant even the temporary release of men from military duty if they are needed on the farms.

A shortage of draft cattle is complained of, and last year, it is stated, the supply of seed and fertilizer was adversely affected by the strain on the railroads.

RECORD HOG PRICES PAID HERE DURING THE PAST WEEK

Montreal Had Highest Price Ever Paid in Canada For Hogs --Sugar Remains Firm--Butter and Eggs Unsettled But May Go Lower

Eleven cent hogs! While this was not the prevailing price during the past week several instances were reported of its being paid to farmers for local delivery. And its a record, in fact a phenomenal price. The general quotation to-day is $10.65 a cwt. Last week it was $10.50. The demand for pork in the British market and the scarcity of Canadian supplies, explain the unusual strength of hog prices. Just what the movement will be next is not easy to estimate, but there are some evidences that before the situation is relieved the farmers will get even higher prices.

There has not been much change in butter prices. Last Saturday farmers received 32c and 35c a pound but with better roads this week and a larger offering it is expected there will be a further decline.

Eggs will likely go a little lower before they reach their turning point. Prices have been rather unsettled of late. The demand was keen enough but supplies were irregular.

Authorities in cheese expect higher prices than ever this year but shippers confronted with overseas transportation difficulties will likely have to adopt a holding condition. The future is thus discussed by one authority:

Will cheese realize high prices this year? At Montreal in 1915 April cheese opened at 16 1-2 cents and in the following months prices advanced to 18 1-2 cents and 19 cents for the finest western cheese but subsequently dropped to around 12 1-2 and 13 3-4 cents in August last and then went up to 19 and 20 cents.

Quebec as it sets its mouth for high prices and a big make this year becomes the "great difficulty" of scarcity of ocean freighters, "which it is feared will compel shippers to carry the cheese from time to time until they can arrange for transportation."

The situation is vexatious to the Bulletin, which goes on to point out that "there are no signs of peace in the near future," and so army requirements will be heavier than last year."

There seems no reason given why cheese prices should be abnormally high this year—unless from the reduction of the make. If the make is increased, no matter how plentiful it is hardly likely that prices will be as high as last year.

NOTES

London Wool Sales.—The Colonial wool sales which were to have commenced in London on April 4th, have been deferred for a week owing to a quarrel between buyers and merchants. Buyers are demanding an extension of a fortnight for the payment of wools purchased at the auctions, owing to the transportation difficulties entailing increased charges. The merchants are not inclined to yield. Buyers threaten to boycott the sales which have been postponed pending further discussion.

Cheese Factories Opening.—A Brockville despatch states that during the past few weeks many cheese factories in the Brockville section have commenced the season's operations with a fair output of fodder goods. It is expected that within the next ten days almost every factory in the district will be running. The snow has almost entirely disappeared and the farmers are looking forward to early grazing. In the meantime there will be heavy feeding to make as large a milk flow as possible in view of the high price of cheese. Before the grass cheese comes on market there is expected to be one of the largest outputs of the fodder article ever known in this eastern district. Cows have wintered well and all other conditions are favorable.

RECORD HOG PRICE.

During the week $12 a cwt. was paid for hogs at Montreal, the highest price ever paid in Canada.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Means And the End

A Question of Law and How a Judge Decided It

By CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY
Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Enderby was a pitiable spectacle; he was the picture of abject despair as he walked up and down the big office, not daring to look at Beatty, who sat at his desk, staring at his disturbed visitor with mingled amusement and contempt.

"Do you mean to tell me," said the lawyer, as if he could not fathom the depth of Enderby's depravity or realize what he had done, "that you have looted the Home Savings bank?"

"I have," answered Enderby, with increasing nervousness.

"But why on earth"—

"What's the use of dwelling on that? I told you the truth when I came in. What I want to know now is what's to be done?"

"Done? You ought to go to the penitentiary for it," returned the lawyer sternly.

"Yes, I know that too. I don't need a lawyer to tell me that. What I want to know is how to keep out of it."

"How much did you take?"

"In round numbers, $50,000."

"Speculation, I suppose?"

"Yes; sure thing at first and then more to recoup."

"The usual story."

The lawyer thought deeply. Enderby watched him in terrible anxiety. It was he who finally broke the silence.

"You know that Texas land I have?"

"Yes."

"It may be worth a great deal of money in a short time."

"I have investigated it," said Beatty, "for some of my clients who have holdings there. It is worth nothing now, but it is possible, if the railroad project goes through, that it may eventually sell for a good round sum."

"Yes, and if it is worth anything my share will be worth $60,000," said Enderby.

"Well?"

"If you will get me out of this I will give you a deed to the land."

"As a fee?" asked the lawyer coolly, his eyes very bright and hard.

"I hadn't thought of it that way," faltered Enderby. "I meant it as restitution, to pay back what I had—stolen."

"Well, that has saved your life, Enderby. If you had offered me that money to compound a felony, by heaven I would have kicked you out of the office. But if you are willing to deed that land to me to hold in trust and if anything is realized out of it to pay it over to the stockholders of the bank I'll try to get you out."

"I am glad to do it," said Enderby earnestly. "And whatever you are going to do, judge, will have to be done quickly. The bank examiners will be here tomorrow, and I can't cover it up any longer."

"How much money will there be in the vaults when you close tonight?"

"I don't know exactly, possibly $40,000."

"Can you get hold of it?"

"Why, of course. I can take everything in the bank."

"And you say your stealings amounted to $50,000?"

"Yes, in round numbers, maybe a little more or a little less."

"Well, then, go to the bank, get $50,000 in cash and bring it to me."

"You mean that I am to steal $50,000 more?"

"I didn't say anything about stealing it, did I? I said go get it out of the vaults and bring it to me, and I will do my best to get you clear."

"Very well," said Enderby. "I don't understand, but I will do what you say."

At 4 o'clock the president of the Home Savings bank came into the lawyer's office again.

"Well," asked Judge Beatty, "have you got it?"

"Yes," said Enderby, producing a bulky package of bills, "here it is."

The lawyer took the package, counted the bills methodically, satisfying himself that the full amount had been handed to him.

"It's all right," he said. "Now the deed for this land."

"Here it is," said Enderby again, handing the paper to him.

"Good," said Beatty after properly examining it. "Now you go home, don't come down to the bank in the morning, get sick, go to bed, keep away."

The next morning, very early indeed—about 6 o'clock, in fact—the officers and directors of the Home Savings bank, except the president, who was ill and confined to his bed, were summoned peremptorily to meet immediately at the law office of Judge Beatty, the leading attorney of the town.

The character of the messages each received was such as to bring them all there without delay, some of them coming without waiting for the formality of breakfast even.

"Gentlemen," said Judge Beatty when they were all assembled, "I have news of a most distressing character to communicate to you as officers and directors of the Home Savings bank."

"We are not all here yet," said Fowler, the vice president. "Mr. Enderby, our president, is ill."

"I know it. He won't be here, and it is because of that fact that I took the liberty of asking you to meet me here before the bank opened."

"Is anything wrong?" asked Mellen, one of the directors.

"I am sorry to say there is."

"With the bank?"

"Yes."

"What is it?"

"Mr. Enderby has embezzled $100,000 for speculation purposes and is short just that much."

"Good heavens!" exclaimed the vice president. "That will ruin the bank when it gets known."

"Undoubtedly," answered Judge Beatty amid the great perturbation of the other directors. "It rests with you, gentlemen, however, as to whether it gets known or not."

"With us?"

"Certainly. The bank is a fine business proposition for a small town, yet such a defalcation would seriously cripple it, and a run following would ruin it. Now, if you gentlemen want to save the bank and protect your depositors it can be done."

"You haven't called us here, I am sure," said the vice president hopefully, "without having something in mind. What is it?"

"This," said the judge. "Enderby has a number of friends here who are willing to back up their friendship for him with hard money. If you gentlemen will guarantee to keep the thing absolutely secret among yourselves and to refrain from prosecuting Enderby, who will, of course, resign from the presidency and the directorate and move away, his friends will raise $60,000 in cash, and they will place the amount in your hands today."

"If we should accept this offer," said the vice president, amid a general murmur of excitement, "and the ten of us who are here should each put up $6,000, the defalcation would be made good?"

"It would," said Judge Beatty promptly. "The bank would be on a sound financial basis once more, and the $50,000 would be paid back from the profits which are certain under judicious management."

"And if we don't accept this offer?" asked Williams, the cashier.

"The bank goes to the wall, you lose at least $100,000 cold cash and whatever else might be involved in a disastrous and expensive liquidation and the small depositors suffer terribly."

"In other words, you are offering us 60 cents on the dollar," remarked Director Taylor.

"Enderby promises to make good the defalcation; he has certain matters pending of little value now, but which may bring in large returns. I am not able to say just what they will be, but he has put the matter in my hands, and if the returns come in as he expects and as I expect, too, I will be quick to turn over to the bank enough to make good the defalcation."

"What evidence have we got of that?" asked the vice president.

"My word of honor, sir."

"But aren't we all compounding a felony?" asked Director Williams.

"Well," answered the lawyer, "I am afraid, if you ask for a legal opinion on that point, that we are. For my part I don't mind telling you frankly that I am doing it to save the depositors in this bank."

"Mr. Vice President," said a director, "I move you that we accept Judge Beatty's offer in behalf of Enderby, and if he will turn over to us $50,000 in cash we jointly and severally agree to say nothing to any one about the defalcation, and that we further agree to make good the amount over and above the said $50,000 and to reorganize and carry on the bank under new management."

"I second the motion," said the cashier.

"I suppose there is nothing to do but put the motion," said the vice president. "Are you ready for the question, gentlemen?"

And thereafter the motion was immediately adopted unanimously.

Beatty took from his safe the $50,000 in bills which Enderby had handed him the night before, the wrappings and anything else that would have identified it as having come from the bank having been destroyed.

"Gentlemen," he said, "there is your money. Here also is an agreement which I have drawn up embodying the substance of our arrangement, which you will be good enough to sign."

"Gentlemen," said the vice president, "a document of this kind you will all sign with me, and Judge Beatty, I think you had better sign it too."

"Certainly," said the judge. "As I am to be its custodian, I have no objection."

"That is all, I take it?" asked the vice president.

"That is all," answered the old attorney, "and, while legally our action is distinctly improper, I think we have acted for the best interest of the stockholders and depositors of the bank, especially of the latter."

"Yes, but I would like to get my hands on that scoundrel Enderby. I'd have trusted him with anything," said one of the directors.

"Leave Enderby to me," said Judge Beatty. "He is suffering enough now, and I think he has had a lesson that will last him. I believe that he will pay back all that he took, too, but that's in the future. Good morning, gentlemen."

"Now," said the judge to himself after they had departed as he sat down at the desk and stared at the Texas land deed—which, to anticipate, did finally bring enough to cover the defalcation—"I certainly broke the law of the land. Have I transgressed the moral law, or have I not? I have undoubtedly saved Enderby; I have saved the small depositors; I have saved the bank. Has the end in this instance justified the means, I wonder?"

HOW TO SAVE MONEY.

Are you in favour of saving money? Prior to and since the advance in nearly all lines owing to war conditions, we have been keenly on the lookout in the markets for goods that could be sold at the old prices. Today we have the largest and most complete stock we have ever carried. Realizing the advantages in keeping selling prices down, to you in saving money, and to us in increased sales, we devote much attention to buying and the marking of our goods, disregarding the fact that competitors are asking higher prices. In other words, we believe it is better business to give our customers the advantage thereby increasing our business, than to grasp at every raise in price for our own advantage.

On these principles we would ask you to trade with us and would call special attention at the present time to Dry Goods, Groceries, Hardware, Paints, Wall Paper and Seeds.

We have in stock a supply of sap pails and syrup making requirements.

Miss Thompson, previous to her marriage was engaged along education al lines in Chengtu College for Girls. We all wish Mr. and Mrs. Cook every good wish for a long and useful career.

"I'm a-thinking I shall go, Pat, and go and help and fight the Germans, Widow Kelly," said young Regan, who was a bashful suitor for the widow's hand.

"Foith, then it's a poor seger you'll make."

"What do ye mean"

"Oh, nothing. Only a man who hopes on calling on a widow for a couple of years without pluck enough to spake his mind, hasn't the making of a seger in him."—London Tit-Bits.

Coughed Almost All Night

WITH THAT

DRY, TICKLING SENSATION

IN YOUR THROAT.

How many people have lost a good night's sleep by that nasty tickling sensation in the throat?

The dry, hard cough keeps you awake, and when you get up in the morning you feel as if you had had no rest at all.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is a specific for just this kind of a cough, as it is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs, roots and barks known to medical science.

Mrs. Joseph Hiley, Orangeville, Ont., writes: "Just a few lines to let you know what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. I took a severe cold, and coughed almost all night with that dry, tickling sensation in my throat. The first bottle did me so much good I thought I would try the second one, and I am pleased to say "Dr. Wood's" resulted in a complete cure."

There is nothing that can take the place of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. There is nothing "just as good."

"Dr. Wood's" has been on the market for the past twenty-five years.

It is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

200 for a Baby.

There was once a tax on babies in England, but it was only in force for a short time. The tax was put on in 1695 and abolished in 1706. The higher up in society a man was the more he had to pay for the privilege of being a happy father; a duke, for instance, had to pay £20, a marquess £15, and so on. Nowadays the reverse principle is in force, and the State allows so much rebate on income-tax to those who have children, and of course thirty shillings to mothers who are insured.

Nervous and Almost Crazy With Pains in the Head

Clergyman Certifies To This Cure of Nervous Prostration by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

No ailment is more discouraging than Nervous Prostration. You may feel better for a day or two, only to find the next day that you have lost ground and are worse than ever. The headaches are worse, languid feelings are terribly depressing. As you lose strength you lose hope and courage and look to the future with fear and trembling.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the greatest blessing that has ever come to the sufferer from nervous exhaustion. It is not narcotic in its influence. It does not deaden the trembling, irritated nerves, but through the medium of the blood nourishes them back to health as nothing else can.

Mrs. Alonzo B. Elsner, Billtown, King's County, N.S., writes: "I was very low with nervous prostration and was about discouraged, as I could not sleep nights and was almost crazy with pain in my head. I had tried many doctors, but seemed to get little benefit from their treatments.

"A friend handed me Dr. Chase's Almanac, so that I might read about the Nerve Food. A single box of this treatment convinced me of its value for I was better. I cannot tell how many boxes I used, but the results were so highly satisfactory that I cannot praise it too much. My health and strength have been restored so that I can do all my own work, and I recommend the Nerve Food to all who suffer from nervous prostration.

"This is to certify that I am acquainted with Mrs. A. B. Elsner and believe her statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to be true and correct."—Rev. Arthur A. Whitman.

Some patience is required in the treatment of nervous prostration, but you will not be using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food long before you begin to find your strength and good cheer returning. You will then be encouraged to continue the use of the food cure until cured. 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

In its full effect—not because of any noticeable detail—are we attracted to this model of a lady's dress; faultlessly plain as fashion to-day demands, yet lacking nothing to make it handsome enough for wear on any occasion. In short, we may say it is one of "chic simplicity." The full blouse is slightly gathered at the waist line under an embroidered belt of the material—an individual "set-off" to the garment—the collar finishing the low neck is in light tone material and embroidered. Closing is in front, with the popular buttons and the sleeves finished without a cuff, but with an outside button row. The skirt is four gored, attached to a body lining. Inverted plaits at the sides of the fronts and sides of back also give panel to front and back of skirt—stronger line being given these panels with rows of buttons to the hip line for trimming, as illustrated.

The pattern, No. 7,654, is cut in sizes 36-42 bust measure. To duplicate the design in size 38 bust, using material that is 36 inches wide, you will require only 5¾ yards and ⅝ yard for lining—the collar using but ⅜ yard. 18 inch goods.

To obtain the pattern send only [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

Keep the Armholes Down.

It is strange that not one person in a thousand knows how to help a man on with his coat or a lady with her jacket. They all make the mistake of holding the garment too high, especially the last sleeve. They lift it so that a man nearly dislocates his arm reaching for it. The more faithfully he grabs and claws and lurches for it the higher they hold it until the wretched victim would have to get on a pair of stilts to find the armhole. The proper way? Why, hold the coat so that the armholes are as low down as the man's waist, taking care to keep the skirt of the garment off the floor, of course. If there is any struggle to find the last armhole, drop it still lower. Never raise it. Drop it until his hand slips into it naturally.

Emily Bronte.

G. K. Chesterton has added his meed of praise to Emily Bronte, the woman writer, who of all others has perhaps won most unstinted praise from men. A splendid creature Chesterton calls the author of "Wuthering Heights," and the book itself he finds likewise splendid. "But there is nothing human about it. It might have been written by an eagle."

A Perfect Defense.

"Sam, dear," asked Mrs. Prouty, who had been away from home the greater part of July and August, "what is the matter with the garden?"

"I don't know," answered Sam humbly. "I haven't done anything to it."—Youth's Companion.

DON'T SCOLD, MOTHER! THE CROSS CHILD IS BILIOUS, FEVERISH

Look at Tongue! If Coated, Clean Little Stomach, Liver, Bowels

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish full of cold, bad breath, throat sore doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomachache, indigestion, diarrhoea give a tablespoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

Antiquity of Shorthand.

Shorthand is apt to be looked upon as an essentially modern art. The predecessors of Pitman—Byrom in the eighteenth century, Mason in the seventeenth—are dim and distant figures beyond which it seems useless to venture. Cicero dictated his orations to his freedman, T. Tullius Tiro, and was inconsolable when temporarily deprived of his services. He complained in a letter to a friend that, while "Tiro takes down whole phrases in a few signs, Spintharus (his provisional substitute) only writes in syllables." We need not, however, suppose that the "notae Tironianae" were actually invented by the freedman in question. As M. Guenin points out, the Romans created very few of the arts of peace, contenting themselves, as a rule, by copying from the Greeks. M. Guenin, however, indicates the banks of the Nile as the cradle of the art.

Blunderbuss.

In using the word "blunderbuss" we unconsciously imply a sense of disparagement for the shooting powers of our forefathers contrasted with the precision of the modern rifle. The word itself has, however, a terrible enough meaning and disdains all connexion with "blunder." "Blunderbuss," in fact, as we have it, is a strange corruption—perhaps not altogether unhinged with the sense and sound of "blunder"—of the old Dutch word "donderbuss," which can be literally translated into the English "thunder box" and "thunder barrel."

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON.

The blood must be filtered, otherwise the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid, you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

Lifeboats in Submarines.

"Carry your own lifeboat," is the motto of an Italian inventor, G. Piperno, who has visited England with what is probably the most ambitious life-saving appliance on record.

When not in use the apparatus is packed into what looks like a man's suitcase, measuring 24in. by 16in. by 8in., and weighing 30lb. When disaster is imminent the passenger brings the suitcase on deck, breaks the seal, and the apparatus opens out and becomes a small boat.

If it is necessary to abandon the ship the passenger steps into his private boat, closes the outer cover, and launches his craft by hurling himself overboard. Then, according to Mr. Piperno, the apparatus rights itself in the water, the top cover is thrown open, and the occupant finds himself sitting in an absolutely unsinkable ship.

GOING

to the front?—Then don't forget you will need—above Zam-Buk! The soldiers on the front are asking for more of it. Pte. J. R. Smith, of the "Princess Pats," writing home, says: "Tell my friends there is one thing I should be glad to get—that's Zam-Buk." Also Corp. Franklin, of the 16th Field Ambulance, writing from France, says: "We are finding Zam-Buk splendid for injuries and ailments, but we haven't enough of it."

Zam-Buk cannot be expected for the injuries and ailments incidental to trench life. There is nothing that ends pain and heals so quickly. For cuts, scratches, bruises, stiff joints, and all skin ailments it is equally good. For sore and blistered feet, caused by long standing and marching, there is nothing brings such relief as Zam-Buk, and for sores of all kinds Zam-Buk is invaluable. Having some Zam-Buk on hand to apply immediately an injury is sustained will save a man much unnecessary pain.

If you are not going to the front, there is another way in which you can "do your bit"—help relieve the sufferings of the men in the trenches by sending them Zam-Buk. All druggists 50c. box, 3 for $1.25, or post free for price, from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

Wool Drying.

Wool drying is one of the principal and serious operations in the woollen industry. The more gently and uniformly the wool is dried the better is the result attained, for should the wool be slightly damp in some of its parts the dye does not take well, and the result is an unevenly dyed yarn, which shows in the texture of the woven goods. Overdrying is also bad.

Spoiled Pleasure.

Mrs. Meyer—What's the trouble, Mrs. Schultz? You are in bad humor this morning.

Mrs. Schultz—You see, my husband stayed at the club every night last week until after midnight. Last night I sat up, determined to give him a curtain lecture when he got in late, and what do you think? The fool came home at nine o'clock.

Gold And Silver Gospels.

"The Gold and Silver Gospels" is the name of a very peculiar book now preserved in the Upsala library in Sweden. It is printed with metal type on violet colored vellum, the letters being silver and the initials gold. When it was printed, by whom and what were the methods employed are questions which have great interest for the curious, but have never been answered.

Alkali Makes Soap Bad For Washing Hair

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Curious Nesting-places.

Every year some fresh discovery is made respecting the curious habits of British birds. The boldness shown by even our shy birds when domestic duties are concerned is surprising. Robins are especially noted for their boldness, and a pair have been known to build and rear their family on a beam in a school, entering by the window, which was left open. Swallows seldom build in odd places, but a pair have been known to build their nest against a pane of window-glass. A swallow's nest in a funnel is an exceptionally queer place for a bird of this species to choose.

Wrens are very ingenious, and their dome-shaped nests, which are so beautifully woven, are often found in old kettles and tins, and even in the pockets of old coats which have been left hanging about. A hedge-sparrow's nest in a kettle was found in a bunch of nettles close to a public footpath, where school-children passed every day, but the faithful bird, with no thought of danger, reared a family quite unmolested.

THE FRENCH GAIN GROUND IN BOIS CARRE

BRITISH TORPEDO BOAT SINKS A SUB.

FRENCH TROOPS CAPTURE A BIG PORTION OF BOIS CARRE

Offensive of Our Allies North of Avocourt Continues Successfully---Fighting Continued All Day Yesterday and Last Night in the Verdun Region, West of the Meuse--At One Point the Germans Succeeded in Penetrating French Positions.

OTHER GERMAN ATTACKS WERE REPULSED

PARIS, April 6.—The War Office announced this afternoon the capture by the French of a large portion of the position north of Avocourt, known as Bois Carre or "Square Woods." This ground was captured in the course of the fighting which went on all of yesterday afternoon and last night in the Verdun region west of the Meuse, on the Avocourt-Bethincourt line. At one point along the Avocourt-Bethincourt line the Germans succeeded in penetrating French positions. Two attacks were made by German troops against French positions north of Caillette Woods, but they were without result.

On the east bank of the Meuse, two German attacks against French positions in Caillette wood, south of Douaumont fort, were repulsed, the enemy suffering frightful losses.

Toward nightfall, the Germans suddenly emerged from their positions with simultaneous attacks on the village of Bethincourt to the east of Malancourt, and against Haucourt village south of Malancourt.

Investigation Shows Pieces of Metal Were Parts of a German Torpedo Findings of Attaches Based on a Comparison of Metal Pieces With the Structure of Captured German Torpedoes in France—Possibility of Rupture With Germany Increases.

WASHINGTON, U.S.A., April 6.—The American Embassy attaches, who were appointed to examine pieces of metal found on the Channel Packet Sussex, have reported. The investigation shows the pieces were parts of a German torpedo. Findings of attaches were based on a comparison of metal pieces with the structure of captured German torpedoes in Paris.

POSSIBILITY OF BREAK INCREASES.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Another day's developments has increased the possibility of a rupture with Germany. The receipt of the French official report of the Sussex disaster announcing the belief that the Channel Packet was a submarine victim, and citing evidence on which belief is based, confirmed the fear of Washington officials that a diplomatic break may be unavoidable.

The report of the French Admiralty is not accepted as conclusive, but there is little expectation that affidavits obtained by United States representatives abroad will differ in any important degree from those on which the French conclusions are drawn.

Direct evidence in the form of a report on pieces of metal found in the wreckage of the Sussex, is now in Secretary Lansing's hands. He has not divulged as yet whether these exhibits have been proved by experts to be fragments of a German torpedo as alleged by the French official statement.

One Child Killed---Another Zep. Raid

Examiner Special:

LONDON, April 6.—One person was killed and eight injured in last night's Zeppelin raid on England, the fifth of the present week, the War Office announced this afternoon.

One of the three Zeppelins that raided the northeast counties of England last night is reported to have been hit.

The War Office made this announcement in stating that three airships participated in the raid, instead of one, as was originally announced.

The raiders dropped 48 bombs, killing one person and injuring eight.

The German official statement of this raid declares that large iron works and other establishments at Whitby, England, were destroyed.

The Zeppelins' victim was a child. Of the eight injured, five were children and one a woman.

Germans Capture Village of Hancort

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, April 6.—The German troops have captured the village of Haucourt, ten miles northwest of Verdun, and a French point of support east of the village, the War Office announced this afternoon.

WILL ASK FOR THE REGISTRATION OF ALL MEN FROM 18 TO 46

Representatives of Manufacturers' Association to Go to Ottawa—Col. Wright and Mr. S. R. Parsons, of Toronto, Speak to Local Manufacturers and Business Men at Luncheon To-day

THE MEETING TO-NIGHT

About sixty men, including the officers of the 93rd Battalion and the leading men representating the business and industrial interests of the city, assembled at the Oriental Hotel at noon to-day, to hear addresses by Col. J. Wright of the 109th Battalion, and Mr. S. R. Parsons of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, along recruiting lines. The chair was occupied by Mr. E. G. Patterson, Supreintendent of the Canadian General Electric Works who introduced the speakers.

Col. J. Wright.

Col. Wright, in an interesting and forceful speaker, and his remarks were greeted at different times with applause. At the outset he referred to the fact that the Allies were not doing so well on land as they might and the call went forth for men and more men.

Great Britain was at war because she had kept her word, and he added, "We will be at war until Prussianism is crushed. After that we will fight Germany on the sea of trade and commerce."

British men had gone, he continued, from all over to fight for the Empire, and Canada would stand behind the Empire as long as men are required. "We have in Canada," remarked the speaker, "a high democracy, and Great Britain has given us it. She gives us the privilege of being a shirker or a slacker; and is not this democracy worth fighting for ?"

Up to the present time we have been beaten on land. The bright spot has been that our navy has kept the German ships botled up. Unless we win this war we can't expect anything but the treatment meted out to the Belgians."

As to the Factories.

Coming to the keynote of his address, Col. Wright stated that the industries must be kept up to one per cent. efficiency. During his recruiting experience he had raised his battalion from the factories, but in not one instance had he broken faith with the employers The latter were asked to promise three things in their attitude towards employees namely:

You are free to enlist if you want to.

Your job will be here when you come back, in as far as we are able to guarantee it.

The man who doesn't go, must make way for the fellow who does go on his return.

In his work at the factories, the speaker found that the appeal made the strongest impression on the most intellectual men. These were often the ones most needed in their present occupations. If the manufacturer said he had a man he could not spare, then he would not take him. Three out of five who stepped forward in one factory, and sixteen out of another industry, who volunteered for service were returned to their places. That was the economic side of the question.

Then as to the military side of the question, Col. Wright stated that all were called upon to make sacrifices. "We have got to win," he continued. God gave His only begotten Son to keep Christianity in the world, and we must not now give our sons to maintain its privileges."

Col. Wright quoted the figures to show the estimated number of men required in each military division; 53,000 are asked for, and 27,896 have so far responded.

Up to the present the recruiting methods employed have been wrong Thousands of men should be in uniform who were not, and many had enlisted who could have done greater

THE SOLDIERS' AID COMMISSION

A meeting of the local Soldiers' Aid Commission will be held on Friday evening, April 7th, at the office of the Patriotic Fund. General business to be transacted. The association has been active in securing employment and positions for all applicants, so far, and there is not the slightest doubt that positions will be found for all men able to take up any form of employment.

The services of the secretary of the local commission can be had at any time by calling at the office, or by communicating by 'phone or letter. The office is in touch with the Central Bureau, at Toronto, and all applications receive prompt attention. So far the work has proved satisfactory, and will be continued. More positions can be found than there are applications to fill.

Cottrell of the 93rd and formerly of the 57th Regiment was presented with his long-service medal, significant of twenty years' continuous service in the Canadian militia. OTTAWA, April 6.—While a memorandum has been submitted by the Militia Department regarding the summer camps for troops, it is not complete, and important details are still to be worked out. These have to do with the disposition of large bodies of troops in the Toronto, Kingston and London divisions. Niagara, Barriefield and Carling Heights at London will be utilized to full capacity, but cannot possibly accomodate all, and there is a possibility that part of the troops from each division will be located at Petawawa.

J. E. R. Munro, Captain.
Adjutant 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

Battalion Quartermaster Sergt. R. G. Cottrell of the 93rd Battalion is being congratulated upon having received his long service medal which came yesterday and which indicates twenty years' service in the Canadian militia. Q. M. S. Cottrell was a member of the 57th Regt., Peterborough Rangers, for over twenty years and now, like so many more officers, noncommissioned officers and men of the 57th, is going overseas to do his bit.

The news that Sergt. Peter Victor of the 2nd Battalion, C.E.F., and formerly of the 57th Regiment, will soon be home, is gratifying news not only to his mother but to his many friends in Peterborough. Sergt. Victor, who was employed in the local office of the Singer Sewing Machine Company before war broke out, was the first Peterborough member of the Canadian Expeditionary Force to be wounded On March 11th, 1914, he was shot through the legs while mending the wire in front of the 2nd Battalion trenches. He has been in different hospitals in England for over a year. Sergt. Victor's brother Jack who enlisted here with the 26th Battery, is now at the front.

The Accounting Department of the C.G.E., presided over formerly by Captain R. E. Layfield of the 80th Battalion, and now by Mr. H. Dearle has set a recruiting record that would be hard to duplicate. The strength of the Department averages ten or eleven men, but from it already twenty-three men have enlisted. The latest is Mr. Chas. Healey who has enlisted in the 93rd Battalion

A few days ago a notice was printed stating that the dependents of married men and mothers of sons who enlisted in the 224th or Forestry Battalion, would not come under the benefits of the Patriotic Fund. This order has been rescinded, and by advice from the Head Office it is determined that the dependents of these men shall be entitled to the same consideration on the same conditions, and at the same rates as men enlisting in other units of the expeditionary forces.

Mr. John Jayes, Secretary of the Brewery Workers and Wine Clerks of Peterborough, has received the following letter of thanks from Signaller E. Downey, 4th Battery, C. E F., in response to a shipment of to-

EVIDENCE HEARD TO-DAY IN REGARD TO KHAKI CLOTH

48 LIVES ARE LOST IN SINKING OF BRITISH LINER

The Steamer Kent Was Torpedoed Without Warning by a Submarine and Sank Very Quickly

ONLY 11 SURVIVORS

LONDON, April 6.—Forty-eight lives were lost in the sinking of the British liner Zent, by a submarine, it was announced to-day.

The Zent was torpedoed and sent to the bottom without warning.

The Captain and ten survivors of the crew were landed at Queenstown this morning. They all agreed that the ship was torpedoed without warning!

The vessel listed badly and began sinking immediately after the torpedo struck.

In an effort to get the boats over quickly the crew became excited and practically every boat capsised.

The submarine moved slowly off while the Zent's sailors were struggling in the water, making no attempt to aid them. A steamer finally appeared and rescued those members of the crew who had managed to keep afloat. The bodies of two men were also brought into Queenstown.

New York Stock Market

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

NEW YORK, April 6.—International nickel was active during the morning, advanced to 49 5-8 on heavy sales. General Motors sold at 460, off 25 points from the last sale which was on March 25. Industrial Alcho advanced to 170 1-2. The general list was quiet and featureless.

Record prices were made by several stocks this afternoon. American zinc climbed to 82, a new high price, while new prices for the year were made by Goodrich at 79 and American Linseed Pref. at 47 3-4. Mexican Petroleum sold up to 113 1-2. St. Paul and U.S. Smelting both gained a point. Sales were very light in mid afternoon.

ROBBERS RAID POKER PARTY.

BOSTON, April 5.—The local police occasionally break up Sunday poker parties here, but on Sunday a big game on West Springfield street was upset in an unusual manner. Seven men were enjoying "stud" when three masked youths stepped into the the room, levelled revolvers at the players, and called "Hands up!" The robbers lined the players against the wall and searched their pockets. One of the players was relieved of $1700, his diamond stick pin, ring and gold watch. The others were also stripped of their cash, watches and jewelry. The total money stakes taken by the thieves amounted to about $3500.

Witnesses in Inquiry Into Auburn Woollen Mills Inquiry Testify Before Sir Chas. Davidson at Court House This Morning.

LOCAL SITTING ENDS

Further evidence as to the quality of the khaki friese cloth supplied by the Auburn Woollen Mills Company to the Canadian government was heard before Sir Chas. Davidson at the Court House here this morning, continuing the inquiry which was carried on at Ottawa on Monday and Tuesday. Major Thompson was the counsel for the Commission, and M. Dan O'Connell, K.C., was present for the interests of the Auburn Company. Only a few spectators were in court when the inquiry began. Mr. Jas. Kendry, president of the company was present.

Major R. P. Watt, of the 93rd Battalion, and until August last an assistant in the office of the Auburn Woollen Mills, was the first witness called. To Major Thompson he said that he had no knowledge of the manufacturing processes nor of the proportion of wool stock used in the friese. His work called him into the mill at different times and he had noticed specks in some of the cloth. He could not say in how many samples he had noticed the specks

"Did you notice them in half of the cloth?" asked Major Thompson.

"No."

In one quarter of the cloth?"

"No."

Witness repeated that he could not say definitely as to the number of pieces of cloth in which he saw the specks.

Questioned as to the government inspector, Major Watt said that he had not been there continuously. Some of the friese cloth manufactured has gone to the militia department and some to M. Workman and Co. of Montreal. Some of the latter he thought had not been inspected by the government inspector.

Geo. Baird, who up to October last was boss dyer at the Auburn, a position he had held for 22 years, was the next witness. Asked about the material used in making the friese Mr. Baird stated that he had noticed some cotton specks in a few cases. This might get into new wool stock on account of the presence of sewing thread, etc

Asked as to what he considered the proportion of "wool stock" in the friese Mr Baird stated that 45 per cent. might have been "wool stock" and 55 per cent. pure wool.

The witness was given a sample of cloth to examine, which he said was about the same at Auburn. He could find no cotton specks in it.

He said frieze cloth, either khaki or any other colour, was practically never made without a proportion of wool stock

Which would you prefer, a pure wool or one made with a proportion of wool stock? the witness was asked.

"You could hardly wear a friese coat of pure wool," replied Mr. Baird. "It would be too stiff to walk about in."

Given a number of samples to examine, the witness said that "No. 7" was the poorest.

Bookkeeper's Evidence.

Miss Ethel Miller, bookkeeper for the Auburn Company, said that the company had been purchasing "wool stock" from the Smith Manufacturing Company. She did not think that the Auburn had ever complained to the Smith Company about the quality of the wool stock and was asked to verify this by an examination of her letter book. Miss Miller produced a number of invoices in regard to the wool stock from the Smith Company showing it was purchased at 31c a pound.

Mr. Walter Anderson.

Mr. Anderson said he was foreman of the picking and mixing room and had held the position since 1908. He kept an exact account of the quantity

THE GOVERNMENT INNOCENT?

Sir Thomas White doesn't make the government's case—refusing full investigation—any stronger by claiming that there is no evidence that the government had any knowledge of the shell contracts in which Allison figured so largely. If this is the fact, and if it is the fact now, it must have been the fact for all the months during which the government has so strongly fought off investigation of any kind. We have, therefore, the claims of the government's innocence weakened by the refusal to investigate charges that had no political significance or danger of damaging revelations, in so far as the government was concerned. Admitting that the government is innocent, because, as Sir Thomas White said, "the government has no knowledge of these contracts," the natural inquiry is why didn't they know all about them. The contracts were authorized by a member of the government acting as a member of the government. Are we to assume that the government shirked its responsibility and gave the Minister of Militia a free hand in the disposition of millions of dollars intended for the purchase of munitions? Mr. White roused "government cheers" when he declared:

"There is no charge, direct or indirect, against the government, nor any member of the government either directly or by implication."

Then why did the government, in a matter where the wasteful expenditure of some 25 million dollars was concerned, object to investigation, or when driven by public opinion, the were forced to grant investigation why was the scope of the inquiry restricted? Why, if the government's shirts were clear, did they try so hard to keep on the lid. Whom were they trying to shield? The attitude of the government to the matter gives small hope for any widening of the docket placed in the hands of the Royal Commission. The Commission is confined to charges in which Allison and his confederates were involved, and to such other matters as the government may consider proper subjects for investigation. A government with a policy of denying investigation till forced to give it, cannot be expected to voluntarily suggest new subjects of investigation, in respect of which the government may not be so innocent as it claims to be in respect of the Allison charges. The whole operations of the Shell Committee should be investiagted. The government refused full investigation by means of its party majority. Is the government afraid that its connection with the work of the Shell Committee in Canada is not so innocent as it is claimed to be in connection with the Allison-Yoakum-Cadwell exploitation. Isn't it as important to get at the bottom of charges in respect of charges publicly made of waste of millions in the production of munitions as it is to get at the bottom of charges made by one of the government supporters that affect a few yards of khaki clothing material? Is personal spite to have a readier recognition than patriotic desire to shield the country and the empire from waste in the almost as important matter of munitions? The government could yield to the demand to have the making of boots, the buying of drugs and horses, the making of clothing material investigated, comparatively minor considerations alongside the making of munitions involving millions of money. Why make flesh of one and fish of another? If the government grants investigation in respect of charges in which it declares itself innocent, are we not to conclude that the government in refusing to grant investiagtion into other charges, does not feel quite so certain of its own innocence—or the innocence of others endeared to it by party ties?

THE PRINCIPLE OF THE THING

It is stated that the labour interests of the city and the class they represent, are in sympathy with the City Council's action in reducing by 10 per cent. the salaries of city officials. If this statement is correct there is failure to view the matter at the right angle and to fully appreciate the principle involved in the Council's action. The Aldermen made the salary cut in their own interests—they wished to get the credit of striking a lower rate of taxation. They reduced the salaries of officials in order to reduce the rate from 29 mills to 27 mills. This was ostensibly done in the interests of the ratepayers—they were saved a few cents of extra taxation by imposing many dollars of extra taxation on other ratepayers to the extent of the ten per cent. salary cut. The aldermen, in effect, were making the few pay the taxes of the many—making some eight or ten ratepayers pay the taxes that would be otherwise paid by eight or ten thousand ratepayers.

The working man who approves of the reduction would not like the principle of it applied to himself and his fellow workmen. If, for instance he were an employee of a large manufacturing concern, which desired to increase its dividends, what would he think of a measure that provided for increasing dividends by lessening expense, if the expense reduction were proposed to be made by a ten per cent. reduction of wages. All the hands of the factory, say, a thousand, in that case would be taxed from $75 to $100 each in the course of the year, in order to give an extra one or two per cent. of dividend to the shareholders of the company. Yet, this is the principle or absence of principle, upon which the civic salary cut is virtually made, and which it is stated; many working men approve.

The Aldermen have failed to get the School Board to apply the axe to teachers' salaries, because they are a matter of contract; and honourable men will not, if they could, end a contract by breach of its conditions. Is not a civic salary a matter of contract? A civic salary can not be increased without the consent of the Aldermen. Can a civic salary be legally reduced without consulting the official? If it can be done by statute law it cannot be done without violating the moral law—the law of fair play.

The reduction is made, and why discuss it. Simply to reveal its unfairness; in the aim to prevent future councils doing a like injustice. Othello strangled Disdemona lest she "should betray more men." If a little discussion will show the City Fathers the error of their way of economizing and prevent the application of a wrong and unfair principle and induce them to practice real economy, get full value for expenditure as a means of keeping down the rate then let the discussion go on.

THE FARMERS' DIVIDENDS.

In the debate in the Ontario Legislature, yesterday, on Mr. Marshall's motion for more aggressive government action in the interest of helping the farmer to larger and more profitable production. Mr. G. A. Gillespie met the contention that farmers were making large money as things were at present. He showed by the following illustration what the average profits or balance of the average farmer were. As reported:

Taking the case of a 100-acre farm at $100 an acre, Mr. G. A. Gillespie (West Peterborough) gave some instructive figures. He added to the $10,000, $2,000 for stock and $1,000 for implements, a total investment of $13,000. He put the revenue as follows: Milk, $1,200; hogs, $1,000; sale of calves, $250; colts, $100; fowl, $100—a total of $2,650. Against that he charged for taxes, $50; wages, $300; interest on investment, at six per cent., $780; groceries, $200; depreciation, $120; —an expenditure of $1,650—leaving a balance for his wages and family, $1,000. In regard to a fifty-dollar-an-acre farm, Mr. Gillespie gave figures which brought out a balance of $350 for the farmer's salary and his family.

The farmer does not seem to have quite as big a "rake-off" as Col. J. Wesley Allison and his pals had in the manipulation of shell fuse contracts.

One Reform Paves The Way For Others

Mr. Rowell's Determination to Build Other Reforms on Prohibition Foundation

Special to the Examiner:

Parliament Buildings, Toronto, April 6.—A glimpse into the future and a broad general outline of what may be expected as the trend of Liberal policy in the province, was furnished by Mr. Rowell in his speech on the Temperance Act. This forward look, this stimulating tendency to set out from the base of one cardinal reform achieved, into new and more advanced territory to be conquered, is perhaps the most significant feature in the whole prohibition situation.

Mr. Rowell naturally was jubilant at the consummation, in conjunction with the Government, of the aim for which he has been working ever since he entered the House. But his viewpoint on the success of the prohibition movement was by no means confined merely to retrospect. His prospective attitude was even more inspiring. It showed the Leader of the Opposition alert and aggressive in the position of constructive leadership, pressing on into further endeavors.

Prohibition, he intimated merely cleared the way for other reforms and he gave a hint of what some of these might be—a striving for greater social justice, a more equitable distribution of wealth and greater care for the child, the widow, the aged, the sick and the unemployed.

Hand in hand with these reforms would go similar progress in the agricultural life of the province, as embodied in the Opposition resolution now under discussion, advocating among other thing a agricultural schools and demonstration farms, rural credits and co-operative efforts in buying and selling, and loans to assist desirable settlers in establishing themselves in the newer parts of the province and to enable farmers in the older districts to increase their productivity.

GOVERNMENT ALLIED WITH CAPITALISTS?

Special to the Examiner.

PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS, Toronto, April 4.—"Not one of them is prepared to lift a hand to help the people against the capitalists," was the apex of Mr. Sam. Carter's pointed criticism of the Government, in his motion on the nickel question.

This issue took the time of the House for three days, but the discussion all the way through was spontaneous and illuminating.

Mr. Carter, who introduced the resolution, feels that the Government is tied up with big private nickel interests. His own view was expressed as follows, in all the vigour of his language and style. "I'd leave this House before I'd help the big capitalists against the common people. The Government is afraid to tackle the problem. They haven't got enough courage to go against the selfish interests of the monied men."

The chief grounds of complaint by Mr. Carter and the Liberals against the Government on this issue are, first, that without any statutory authority the Government entered into a five-year agreement with the Canada Copper Co., which operates the nickel mines in connection with the International Nickel Company, to the effect that there should be a flat rate tax of $40,000 per annum for five years, in spite of the fact that the value of the nickel output has increased from five million to seventeen million dollars a year; and, secondly, that the Government will not consider the proposals for co-operation among the Provincial Government, the Federal Government, and the Imperial Government to acquire absolute control of the nickel mines and nickel products in the Province.

Mr. Rowell pointed out that in 1891 a somewhat similar proposal was made by the Government of Ontario then in power. As at that time nickel was not used in the preparation of war materials and armaments as it is to-day, the question was not so vital and the Imperial Government did not adopt the proposal. Then, from 1904 to 1907 representations were made by the Imperial Government looking towards a possible scheme of control, but the present Government did not act. By consistently voting down Opposition proposals for heavier taxation and more thorough control they are apparently, averse to action.

The Government's case, to-day, is based on the fact that they have appointed a Nickel Commission to look into the whole question.

THE TYRANNY OF GERMAN "KULTUR" CO-EXTENSIVE WITH ITS APPLICATION

"There can be no doubt that the efficiency of city Government will finally be promoted by the lessons which the war is teaching. In that war the individualism of England has been sharply contrasted with the collectivism of Germany. The notion that the community exists only for the citizen has been brought face to face with the notion that the citizen lives for the community, and in the terrible conflict of war, which is still the ultimo ratio among the sovereignties of the world, the German ideal has shown its vast superiority in the matter of efficiency over the English and American ideal. However, we may deprecate the heartlessness of the methods used in warfare, we cannot refuse our admiration to the wonderful results accomplished, not only upon the battlefield, but in soldierfying and organizing the entire body of the people in behalf of the commoq cause, not each individual or class for its self, but all the nation. Whether Germany wins, or is overcome by the greatly superior numbers and resources of her adversaries, the demonstration of her superior efficiency is very clear."

The above is an extract from an address by Mr. W. D. Foulke, President of the National Municipal League of the United States, and the reason we have quoted it is to deny as emphatically as we can the superiority of municipal government in Germany, and we believe that the sooner municipal students in this country are disabused of the idea of the so-called thoroughness of the German system the better it will be for their peace of mind. We go further and say that it would be a sorry day for us if the Germania brand of local government ever had an opportunity of being introduced into Canada—our rights and privileges as citizens to control our own municipalities would be gone, and without the satisfaction of knowing that we were being controlled even efficiently. We remember some years ago having to make a study of civic government in Germany itself—as it actually exists, or did; not as it is worked out on paper. We had to get the facts, and all we need say is that living under the most adverse municipal conditions in Canada is very much preferable, to a man with red blood in his veins, to living under the conditions of municipal Germany. The German form of civic government is in reality but a retail of the state government which is bureaucratic in form, and as far as the head—the Kaiser—is concerned, autocratic in power. Citizenship, as we understand the term, is unknown in Germany, the men and women being merely numbers, their usefulness being measured principally by their pro-creation proclivities.

The mayor, who is appointed by the state, and moved from city to city, is the real ruler, responsible to the imperial authorities only. The members of the council (local men) being ciphers in their own municipality. The whole life of the individual is regulated, not by himself, he not being capable in the eyes of the authorities, but by the council (the mayor), and where that official is of a tyrannical nature (in many places) the inhabitants are little better than prisoners under suspended sentence; and they dare not protest. During our investigation in Germany we came upon instance after instance of petty tyranny, which would be intolerable in a Canadian community, a tyranny practiced by officials who instead of being efficient as the advocates of system maintain, would not hold a municipal job down in this country for a week. We would suggest to those who are in love with the much vaunted German system of municipal government, to find out the real facts, not from the published reports of the German government, or from the evidence of its municipal officers, who cannot call their soul their own, but from the people themselves in their own homes, who, when open enough to tell the truth, would soon dispel the idea of German efficiency in civic affairs. On paper the German system of municipal government is beautiful, but in practice bad, and unthinkable in a democratic country like Canada.—Canadian Municipal Journal.

What Wise Men Say!

THAT Peterborough's population will be from 40 to 50,000 within 10 years I believe it, and I also believe that my choice lots only a few rods outside the city limits, north or south, have no equal for safety and profit, and as every person does or should want to save at least a little of his income, this is the place, and now is the time to plant a few dollars right at home under your own eye and watch it grow. I am closing out my best lots and all my lots under value, my active day being past, I must quit, hence your opportunity. Every lot is a garden; buy now, then use or rent. Small cash deposit, then any reasonable terms desired. I have guided many to success. Come in, hear my advice, and you will be pleased.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

SPORTING COMMENT

When it comes to grabbing free publicity, you've got to hand it to the Nebraska villagers. The outside world would have remained in utter ignorance of Wahoo if Sam Crawford hadn't been born there. St. Paul, Neb., is immortal as the home of Alexander the Great. And now comes the village of Dodge, with less than a thousand souls all told, getting columns in the public prints by reason of the possession of Joe Stecher, the human scissors, whose brawny, educated legs have made him the marvel of the wrestling fans. Joe isn't any masked marvel, either. He doesn't have to be. He is the easiest to look at of any grappler in the game. Most European wrestlers seem to have taken a fatted porker as their physical model. The Nebraskan is tall and big and magnificently developed, but he looks slender and svelte compared with many of the man-mountains who aspire to heavyweight grappling honors.

Yesterday was Stecher Day in Dodge for it was Joe's twenty-third birthday. He was born in the Nebraska village on April 5, 1893, of Bohemian parentage. The Bohemians have long been ardent wrestling fans, and, as there are many of them in Dodge and vicinity, Joe is a local hero, and when at home he is the monarch of all he surveys. The Dodgers wouldn't be half so proud of a pugilistic champion as they are of the big, good-natured boy whose deadly scissors hold has made him the acknowledged king of the catch-as catch-canners.

A lit'ry visitor to Dodge could quickly accumulate the raw material for a ten-volume de luxe deckle-edge biography of Joe Stecher. Every citizen has a fund of anecdotes to relate about the hero. Every incident of his boyhood has been resurrected from the past of Joe's admiring neighbors, and they are always ready to spill their stories and statistics on the slightest provocation. Joe is a local institution When he travels about the land, visiting the great cities of East and South North and West, his retinue is composed almost exclusively of Dodgers in good and regular standing. A less level-headed chap might give Dodge the cold shoulder and engage metropolitan talent for his managerial and training staff. But not Joe. He has given New York the once-over, and mingled in the busy life of Chicago, Louisville, Minneapolis, Amoha, St. Louis and scores of other cities, but none of them look as good to him as that dear old Dodge. Joe has had cigars and babies named after him, and beyond that the President himself can't go.

Joe comes of a big, old-fashioned family, and his brothers and sisters are all athletes. The champion's father was a pretty fair "rassler" in his young days. It is to his mother that Joe gives most of the credit for his great physical development. It was the "eats" she provided, he declared that made a giant of him. Fads and fancies, in diet, don't appeal to Joe. He eats what he wants when he wants it, and all he asks is that the food be plain and wholesome. When he is at home he can depend on getting that sort of "grub" but he doesn't find it so easy when living at hotels in the big cities. His elder brother, Anton, is Joe's chief trainer. Anton is a pretty classy wrestler, and so is brother Lewis an officer in Uncle Sam's navy.

Joe is a credit to the game. In appearance, action and speech there is no suggestion of the roughneck or the swellhead. If he assumes the crown of Gotch, as now seems highly probable, he will be the sort of champion that should bring about a big revival in wrestling interest.

J. Carlyle Smith, better known as "Red" the third-sacker of the Boston Braves, is now the most illustrous member of the well known Smith clan in baseball. There has seldom been a time in baseball history that the Smiths haven't had one or more representatives in the pajor leagues, while the minors fairly swarm with them. 'Red' Smith is a product of the sunny South land, and, according to the best available statistics, he is twenty-six years old to-day. He got his baseball start in the lots of his home city, Atlanta, and as an Auburn student, and in 1909 broke into professional circles with the Anderson club of the Carolina League. J. Cadlisle's first chance to land in the majors offered in 1910, when he was given a try-out by the Cubs, but he was passed up by the Peerless Leader and went back to Anderson. Cleveland took an option on him at the close of the 1910 season, but later cancelled it and Red was released to Nashville. He batted .316 in 1911 and his Southern League showing was so good that he was grabbed by Brooklyn in the latter part of the 1911 season. He remained with the Dodgers until August 1914, when he was sold to the Braves. He has been at outs with Uncle Wilbert, and his work for Brooklyn had been pretty rotten, so Gaffney got him at a bargain price. The Boston mogul had been dickering with the Pirates for Mike Mowrey, but when he heard that Smith was on the market he dropped the Mowrey deal and snapped up Red. At Boston Smith took the place of the disabled Deal, and fielded almost perfectly and batted like a demon. He had a big part in clinching the pennant for the Braves, but at the very finish he had the misfortune to break a leg and did not play in the world's series.

The beginning of the Smith representation in the National League goes back to 1877 when the old White Stockings, led by "Cap" Andon, had an outfielder of that illustrous name. Troy, Boston and other clubs had Smith in the first decade of the league, but none of them were very famous. Charles "Pap" Smith, who worked for Pittsburg and other clubs in the '80's was a great third sacker in his day and a good outfielder. "King" Elmer Smith, a southpaw, was a pitcher for Cincinnati for a time, and afterwards an outfielder and powerful swatter in the Pittsburg uniform. George "Germany" Smith was a good shortstop and outfielder for Cincinnati and Brooklyn more than a quarter of a century ago. There was another George Smith who was second baseman for the Giants in 1901 and 1902, and Alex "Broadway" Smith was a Giant backstop at about the same period. Judson Smith was an infielder for St. Louis and Cincinnati in the early '90's Jim Smith, an infielder, wore a Boston uniform in 1898. More recent Smiths include Charles, who graduated from Atlanta to a Washington berth about ten years ago and Frank, the "Iron Man" also a Southern League graduate, long with the Chicago White Sox and more recently with the Feds.

Elmer Smith, with Cincinnati and Pittsburg in the '80's, was the best batter of the family. He hit over .300 five years, his best mark being .366 in 1893 Only five other Smiths in major league history have broke into the .300 ranks. Back in 1884 an Altoona Smith, in the Union Association. In 1887 two Smiths in the old American Association—George of Brooklyn and J. F. of Baltimore—got into the .300 division. In 1897 "Broadway" Smith batted .309 for Brooklyn, and in 1898 another of the clan turned the trick for Washington. Charles Schmidt, who properly belongs with the Smiths, batted .308 for Boston in 1913. By and large, however the Smiths in baseball don't loom as large as either the Joneses or the Browns.

FIGHTING BY MINES IS THRILLING WORK A DANGEROUS JOB

H Warner Allen, the official British press-observer, with the French army, gives the following interesting account of underground fighting as practised in the present war: "Night and day the enemy is burrowing and pushing forward his saps, trying to gain a few yards of ground in the heavy clay soil, while the French and their side try to bar his progress with counter-mines and camouflets (or mines that are used to destroy an enemy's galleries without breaking the surface) and in their turn tunnel further and further towards the German lines.

"The soil is sodden, and to prevent it from collapsing on the sapper constant shoring up is necessary. Every ear must be vigilant for the slightest sound of the enemy's approach; his purposes must be divined, and everything done so silently as not to give warning. A time comes when the French and the German burrows are almost in contact. The lookout men listen for the smallest sound of tapping on the enemy's side. Calculations are made as to the position of the enemy's sap. Then with the utmost precaution a hole is made with a crowbar in the wall of earth between the two excavations. On one occasion three sappers were working on silently, when suddenly one of them stopped with a warning word. The earth sounded hollow under his pickaxe. Very cautiously a number of litl's blows drove his pickaxe downwards until the point passed into nothingness. There could be no doubt that there was a German sap immediately underneath. With every precaution they widened the hole until it was large enough for one of them to pass through, and a man with a revolver in hand slipped down into the darkness below. His inspection was brief. The German mine was empty and unguarded. The French soldier returned and reported to his captain, who at once called up all the men that he could spare to fill the German tunnel with explosives. The end of the tunnel lay certainly in the German trenches, and it was there that the effect of the explosion would be felt.

"The word of command was followed by a vast explosion. The enemy's trench was torn to pieces. A few minutes later the huge crater produced was in French hands. It is round these craters that some of the fiercest fighting takes place. The knife, the bayonet and the grenade play the chief part. Sometimes with the aid of sandbags, one of these enormous holes will be converted into what is really an advance fortress right outside the main lines."

PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS

Mr. J. W. Gardiner Presented With a Beautiful Gold Watch by the Cavan Methodist Church

A pleasing feature at the Recruiting meeting held in Cavan Methodist Church on Friday evening, March 31st, was the presentation to Mr. J. W. Gardiner, who for many years has been an efficient helper and church worker in Cavan, of a beautiful gold watch. Mr. R. Matchett, Jr., read the address and Mr. A. B. Kennedy, on behalf of the Church, made the presentation, to which Mr. Gardiner made suitable reply. The following is the address

Cavan, March 31st, 1916.

Mr. J. W. Gardiner,

Dear Friend, — For many years more perhaps than many of the present company can remember your family name, has been associated with the social, business, and religious life of this thriving Township of Cavan. Time has been very gracious to the family, of which you are one of the surviving members, but the major part of your respected connections, after having fulfilled their part in the building up of their country and church, have passed full of years to the great beyond How true that the one permanent thing in the world is the law of eternal change, and now we see but another evidence of the mutability of all things earthly in the knowledge we have that you are about to move from our midst, and take up such duties of life as may appeal to you in another community from that in which most of your life has been spent. We are desirous of acknowledging to-night your valuable aid and willing service for so many years in our Choir, and it will seem strange to those who for many years have worshipped in Cavan Methodist Church to not see the familiar face of the choir's oldest member, Mr. J. W. Gardiner. We gratefully acknowledge as well the financial assistance you so libegally gave to the demands of the Church. We readily believe that the memories and associations of the old home in Cavan Township have been so closely interwoven with the warp and woof of your life that they can never be forgotten, yet we believe when you look upon this time piece which we herewith present you, there will be touched a responsive chord in your memory that will help to recall the esteem in which you are held by your friends of the Cavan Methodist Church. Let us in conclusion extend to you and your aged sister our best wishes and our hope that in your new home each of your lives may be filled with an increasing measure of contentment and true happiness. Signed,—W. H. Staples, Jas. Douglas, Richard Matchett, jr. A. B. Kennedy, and others.

This Morning's Police Court

Three Police Officers Participate in the Arrest of George Sturmer, Who Makes Some Very Pointed Observations

"There will be no justice here until Germany comes" This pro German utterance was credited to George Sturmer who in this morning's Police Court, pleaded not guilty to a charge of disorderly conduct. Sturmer apparently objected to being placed under arrest by three police officers, all of whom swore that the accused refused to move on when requested by P. C. Smythe and incidentally used some very strong language. This Sturmer denied likewise that the pro German utterance that was credited to him. The accused said he was born in London, England and was a "thorough Englishman". He has resided in Peterborough for upwards of thirty-eight years.

"When ordered to move on you must go. It is not for you to dispute the authority of the police," admonished Magistrate Dumble. Sturmer was fined $2.75.

"Peterborough policemen are getting worse. You won't be able to laugh soon" declared Sturmer, as he left the dock.

The incident in question occurred shortly after nine o'clock last evening at the corner of George and Simcoe Streets.

A POOR JUDGE

"You here again" observed the Magistrate as Thomas McKinlay extended his form in the dock. The accused was unable to say whether or not he was drunk as was alleged when arrested.

"A drunken man is a poor judge as to his own sobriety" said the Court McKinlay was fined two dollars.

A similar fine was imposed in the case of Henry Ward who was charged with a similar offence.

PATRIOTIC FUND PAYMENTS

$600,000 Needed to Meet the Call for March.

OTTAWA, April 5.—More than $10 000,000 has been subscribed by the people of Canada to the Patriotic Fund. This sum is estimated to last till the end of the first few months in 1917.

The great number of enlistments during the past few months has added a greater burden to the fund, and now each month is being dispensed a sum far in excess than was anticipated a year ago. In February 1916, the total paid to dependents was in the neighbourhood of $525,000 which is the largest month's disbursement since the war began. For the first time it exceeded the half million mark. The amount requisitioned for March is $600,000.

bacco sent to the Peterborough boys in the Battery:

Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in thanking you for the box of tobacco which I received through you from the B. W. and W. C. of Peterborough. All the boys join me in wishing you all success and hope that you all will be at the same old job when we return, if we are lucky enough to do so. All the boys are well and all are enjoying the fun of putting shells over to Fritz—just to let him know we are always on the job. And take it from me, he gets his share of "iron rations" as we call the big shells. I think he is feeling the pinch. We are having some fine weather out here just now and I hope it will continue. Now, I have to go on duty, so I guess I will close Give my regards to all the boys.

Yours sincerely,
Sergt. E. J. Downey
4th Battery, 1st Brigade, C.F.A., France

Sergt. Peter Victor, the first Peterborough boy to be wounded in France, writing from Walthamstowe, Essex, under date of March 23rd says:

"I have your letter in front of me the one with all the questions. It starts off with "It's a year on the 16th of March since you were wounded, etc." But that is wrong, dear as it was on March 16th that I got hit. It was the second day of the Neuve Chapelle battle. I have had a letter and a card since John went to France, but you must not expect to have many letters from France You don't know the trouble it is to get a letter started. Perhaps when you have settled down to write you have to fall in for some parade. I don't know whether I told you before, but John is at the same place as I was at when I first went to France. It is the best part of the whole line. About Fred Riley. The only people who are compelled to join are the single men. But now everybody is asking for conscription for all classes. A few weeks ago nobody wanted it. Now they are shouting at the Government for not having passed it before.

Mother, will you go to the Examiner and tell them not to send any more papers as I will be coming home soon. Tell them I will come and thank them personally when I get back. This is my last day here I go to Shorncliffe to-morrow to get my "Medical Board"—and then!

Best of love.

PETER.

Gunner Charles White of the 4th Battery, 1st Artillery brigade, France, writing to Mrs. Wm. Henry of the Children's Shelter, gratefully acknowledges the receipt of a pair of socks, in one of which was Mrs. Henry's name and address. The socks were sent through the Canadian Kitchener League.

WORLD'S RICHEST MAN.

The distinction undoubtedly belongs to the Czar of Russia, of whom it has been said that he has so much money that nobody can count it. And it is a fact that the wealth that is his as controller of the Russian church and as ruler of the Russias, including that of the members of his extremely wealthy family, would certainly be too great to count, including as it does, all the wealth of Russia, which is estimated at $35,000,000,000.

The Czar's personal wealth, according to one statistical genius, works out at $550,000 a day, and should Russia get down to its last cent—or rather kopek—in the royal exchequer, Nicholas, single handed, could keep the entire Russian army in the field for several weeks.

Most of the Czar's wealth is derived from landed possessions, of which he has nearly 150,000,000 acres, three-quarters of which is rich timber, and yielding big rentals. The other quarter is mining land. Siberia's mines are owned by the Czar while his jewelry and art works are of fabulous worth. The Czar's state income is about $10,000,000, out of which however he has to provide for the expenses of his household, which includes the upkeep of more than a hundred palaces, to say nothing of the Russian court, with its 30,000 servants, 230 automobiles, 5000 thoroughbred horses and an army of several thousand soldiers and detectives.

A PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS TO MEMBER OF 93rd BATTALION

Havelock Teacher Who Has Joined the Signal Section of the 93rd Battalion, Remembered by His Pupils and Friends—Memorial Service in Havelock for Soldier Who Lost His Life on the Battlefields of Flanders—Havelock News.

Mr. Edward De Cow, teacher at the Rush Point school, has enlisted in the signal section of the 93rd Battalion at Peterborough, and on Friday night of last week his pupils and friends of that neighbourhood assembled at the school house and presented him with a beautiful military watch and the following address, read by Mr. Henry Melville:

Rush Point, March 24, '16.

Mr. Edward De Cow:

Dear Sir,—It is with feelings of the deepest regret, in a sense, that we have learned of your near departure from our midst after a year and a half of residence among us. As a teacher you have earned the respect of all older people and the love and esteem of all your pupils. But we are indeed proud to know that you depart from us to don the King's uniform —the uniform that clothes the man standing for the loftiest principles of liberty and chivalry, and we pray and trust that you will return from the field of war uninjured and with a full consciousness that you have done your duty to your God and to your country. In conclusion we ask you to accept this wrist watch as a slight evidence of our regard for you in this school section.

Mr. De Cow replied in appropriate words, expressing his appreciation of the honour done him and his regret upon leaving so many kind and loyal friends.

Break in the Water Main

Port Hope Faces a Serious Predicament—Extra Watchmen Employed

Port Hope, April 5.—Owing to a break in the water main Port Hope has been without water since Saturday, and all efforts to locate the damage have been futile. Six extra watchmen are on guard at night to guard against fires. Last night fire was discovered in the alleyway of a store in the centre of the business section, but the flames were extinguished by means of chemicals. It was clearly a case of incendiarism, a large budle of hay having been placed at the corner of the cellar door. The police are working on the case.

Peterborough Boy Is Returning

The following is taken from the 'Copper Era' of Morenci, Arizona.

The many friends of Eric Stuart are sorry to hear of his decision to leave Morenci, Arizona, U.S.A. and return to his old home in Peterborough, Ont., Canada. After a visit with his parents for a few weeks Mr. Stuart will respond to the call for volunteers in the Canadian army and expects to be near the battle front of the European war in a short time. Mr. Stuart has been in Morenci a number of years and has always been active in social affairs as well as the chapel choir and made him self popular among the young people. The Era joins with the community in wishing him the best of luck during his enlistment and a speedy return to Morenci again.

Railway Has Declared Embargo

MONTREAL, April 6.— The Canadian Pacific Railway has placed a temporary embargo on loaded cars for delivery to the Intercolonial portion of the Canadian Government Railways on account of the failure of the Government road to take loads which the C.P.R. is holding and has held in some cases for six weeks resulting in congestion which is seriously hampering the movement of traffic through C.P.R. terminals, it is understood that six hundred such cars are lying idle, waiting acceptance by the Canadian Government Railways.

"They're As Quiet As Lambs" Said Driver of His Runaway Steeds

A pair of percherons or other breed of heavy draft horses performed an amusing runaway up the main street about five o'clock yesterday afternoon. They were travelling on high speed, but their best was only a lumbering gallop that had plenty of momentum behind it, but did not unduly excite the spedometer. The team belonged to Mr. Jas. Stothart, and were in charge of W. Lancaster, who said they started off suddenly and without any warning from the vicinity of one of the south-end coal yards. Possibly they were in more than the usual hurry home for they pounded up George street on the wrong side at that, and although other vehicles had narrow escapes including an automobile, at Charlotte street corner, nothing was hit. P. C. Dickson chased after them in an automobile, but overtook them only at the tail of the hunt. Just below the Y.M.C.A., soldiers tried to stop the team with their swaying waggon. They swerved across the street toward the entrance of Detcher's blacksmith shop. Missing the opening by three or four yards they crashed head-on into one of Walter Stocker's de luxe billboards, snapped some scantlings, tore the tin, and escaped without a bruise or cut. Probably they discovered a few stiff spots this morning when they stretched after the night's rest. Lancaster finally tracked them to Detcher's, and exclaimed to P. C. Dickson—"I don't know what started them. Why they're as quiet as lambs."

RAPID TRANSPORTATION OF A TWENTY-TON GUN

Human ingenuity has been put to the test, probably, in more ways in the short period of the present war than in any whole quarter of a century before. And in a great many cases the result has been constructive rather than destructive—a motor truck of exceptional and enormous power, for instance, rather than a tremendously powerful high explosive shell.

One instance is that of a newly-developed auto-truck supplied by an American firm. For military reasons, the details by which the enormous power is possible can not be given. But it is known to be a fact that a truck has been developed and is in use, which has easily transported a big 20-ton field gun over a very poor road a distance of 11 miles in an hour and a half. The significance of the feat may be judged by the fact that with the best equipment available, before this new truck, a full day and a half would be required. In other words, this new truck cuts the transport of these big field guns down to just about 1-10 of what it recently was.

If the new truck can perform such wonderful feats of transport under the difficult conditions of war, what will it not be able to do in the great fields of commerce in times of peace?

When the war is over it is almost certain that we shall be many long strides ahead in the matter of truly wonderful developments in many fields. And these advances will be due, more than 90 p.c., to the compelling requirements of this war.

Complaints Will Be Investigated

Committee Will Enquire Into Damage Resulting From Recent Floods in East City

A small committee composed of members of the City Council will investigate complaints concerning recent floods in East City. This action was decided upon at a meeting of the Board of Works, which was held last evening. At the same meeting a petition protesting against the release of Mr. T. A. S. Hay, who is at present employed in the City Engineering Department, was received.

In connection with a proposal to close Mill Street, adjacent to the property of the Quaker Oats Company, a joint committee of the City Council and all parties concerned, will be called.

Fence Was Damaged.

Peck, Kerr and McElderry, on behalf of Mrs. Hammond, complained of damage to a fence on property owned by Mrs. Hammond at the corner of Smith and Bethune Streets. The matter was referred to City Solicitor G. N. Gordon.

The 93rd Recruiting Committee asked permission to erect ten illuminated recruiting signs, the usual fee to be remitted. This was granted.

City Engineer Parsons will secure prices on an eight thousand gallon storage tank for road oil.

CENTRAL ONTARIO DISTRICT AGENCY COMES SECOND BEST

The Central Ontario agency of the Sun Life Assurance Company, of which Peterborough is the headquarters, came a good second in the amount of insurance written and paid for, in the similar districts of the Dominion, for the three months ending March 31st. This agency would have come first, or near first, if one agent had not failed to have his report reach headquarters before the three months' period expired.

Rochester Flood Undermines Street

ROCHESTER, N.Y., April 5.—A gaping hole in the pavement of Main street's busiest block, a subterranean lake fed by some mysterious channel from the flood-swollen Genesee River, and a rushing torrent that threatens hourly to sweep away the support of another section of the city's principal artery of traffic, are the features of the aftermath of this city's recent flood.

Workmen in the employ of the Department of Public Works completed a wide trench just above the break early this morning, but the water seeped in so rapidly that work was stopped until a new pump could be put into operation. It is possible the hole can be cleared of water by morning, when the abandoned sewer or conduit will be examined and blocked above the point where the water leaves it. Shoring and sand bags are being used to prevent a widening of the hole about the point where the water is flowing into the old Front street sewer and thence into the new sewer tunnel to be carried away and poured back into the river further toward the lake.

A feeling of uneasiness on the part of the property owners between Front street and the four corners was only partly allayed by the assurances of the City Engineer that they were out of the danger zone.

Up to the present time the damage to property is estimated at $20,000. It is feared that before the source of the trouble is located and removed the cost will more than double that sum.

NO CHANGE IN LAW RE WILD DUCK BAG

Black and Gray Squirrels to Be Protected—Other Regulations

TORONTO, April 5.—The Fish and Game Committee of the Ontario Legislature organized for business this morning, and with the Hon. Finlay G. MacDiarmid, Minister of Public Works, in the chair. It was decided to allow the present rule of a bag of wild ducks of 200 to stand. The committee declined to make a day-bag limit of 15 ducks. Another suggestion thrown out was that each shooter in a duck-boat be limited to one gun.

It was decided to change the season of the shooting of wild ducks from Sept. 1 to Dec. 15 in the northern district, and from Sept. 15 to Dec. 15 in the southern district, to a general season commencing Sept. 1 to Dec. 31.

Some closer provision may be made for the county of Essex. In future duck hunters may only set out one flock of decoys of 25 ducks. No two hunters may set decoys nearer than 150 yards apart. The committee also passed a law that prohibits the chasing or putting to flight of wild fowl so that they would fly within the range of the hunter's gun. Wild geese and swan may be shot from Sept. 15 to April 30, instead of from Sept. 15 to April 15. A close season of three years was put on quail and Hungarian partridge, and a close season for two years was put on partridge, excepting in counties provided for by order-in-council. Hares may not be shot excepting between Oct. 15 and Nov. 15, and from Dec. 24 to Jan. 2.

Closed season of three years for black and grey squirrels may be provided by order-in-council.

Announcement From Robert Hicks Co., Ltd. Coal Dealers

A NUMBER of Our Customers have asked at our Office and on the Telephone regarding the advisability of putting in their usual supply of Hard Coal at the present prices. For them and the Public generally, we gladly give such information as we have at hand, in as concise form as possible. In doing so we wish to say, that at the present time the Hard Coal situation is not alarming.

1. The Miners Wage Agreement terminated on April 1st.

2. At the present time a Committee of the mine workers and a committee of the operators are negotiating a wage scale, and an agreement has been entered into whereby mine operations will be continued for the month of April, or until an agreement has been arrived at, or until it has been decided an agreement cannot be arrived at.

3. It is generally conceded, owing to the labor conditions in United States, that an advance in wages is inevitable. The question is as to the extent of the advance in wages to be made.

4. Of all Hard Coal mined about 65% only is for domestic use. The balance, about 35%, is buckwheat, rice and barley sizes, which is used exclusively for steam purposes, and is in direct competition with soft coal, so that almost all of the increased cost of mining will be borne by 65% of the output, which is domestic size.

5. Up to the present time, there has been no notification by the Coal Companies of the usual reduction of 50 Cents per ton for Spring prices.

REMEMBER—We do not advise you to buy Coal now—we simply lay before you the present conditions, knowing that in the past each adjustment of the miners wage agreement has increased the wholesale price of Hard Coal.

REMEMBER—We do advise you that WE are buying Coal now, and that should you decide to fill your bins we solicit your order.

REMEMBER—That by placing your order with us, you will be supplied with the Delaware Lackawanna and Western Coal Coy's Scranton Coal Screened by the Only Modern Screening System in the City.

REMEMBER—The Coal—The Delaware Lackawanna and Western Coal Company's Scranton Coal. Other Dealer's advertise Scranton and Lackawanna Coal, Etc. We regard these imitations as the most sincere form of flattery.

ties of new wool and wool stock used in the manufacture of friese. He weighed out the materials and kept a record of them in his "batch" book. The proportions during 1915 were 45 per cent of new wool and 40 per cent of wool stock. About the beginning of November last a change was ordered to 50 and 50 per cent., but was not carried out because the wool stock did not provide the required shade. Hence about 50 per cent. of pure wool was used. To work out the right colour the larger proportion of pure wool was used.

Loss in Wool Stock.

Mr. Anderson said there was a loss in wool stock of about 25 per cent. as follows: 10 per cent. of oil in drying, ten per cent. of the wool stock in carding, and five per cent. in the spinning.

How much of pure wool is lost? I don't know.

How do you estimate the loss in wool stock?

Mr. Anderson—I know it is 25 per cent. and more.

Mr. Anderson said he had tested the wool stock for loss.

Mr. O'Connell—You don't go beyond the skinning room in your losses?

No.

Major Thompson—Have you used any wool stock that has been dyed at the mill.

Not to my knowledge.

Was any old wool stock that is stock from old garments used in the friese?

Not that I know of.

Has there been any other change since the 50 and 50 instructions?

No.

Have you made any blend of khaki in which the quantity of wool stock was less than 40 per cent?

No.

Have you recently made any friese of particularly good quality, any special piece of cloth that was sent to Ottawa?

No. I know nothing about a special piece being made through.

When Mr. Anderson's "batch" books were produced several examples chosen at random were presented. One "batch" showed 630 pounds of new wool and 460 pounds of wool stock. A batch made in March 29th 1915, contained 1177 pounds of new wool and 1020 pounds of wool stock; on Feb. 5th, 1915, the figures were 873 of new wool and 826 of wool stock, and on Feb. 9th, 1915, 977 wool and 826 of wool stock.

Mr. John Bentley.

The next witness was Mr. John Bentley, late manager of the Auburn Mills. He said he had left in December, 1915. He was an investor in the company and was still financially interested in it.

Mr. Bentley told of having seen a sample of wool stock at the Smith Manufacturing Co., Toronto, who supplied this material. It looked very good. It was pure worsted serge clippings.

Mr. Bentley also obtained a sample of wool stock from the Auburn Mill and found that it corresponded with that which Smith had shown him.

Mr. Bentley—I told Greaves it was a good sample and that Smith was supplying it to the Auburn Mill.

Why did you mention it to Greaves?

Because I wanted to be a friend to him. I did not want him to make foolish statements.

Mr. Bentley said he had not seen the Auburn stock for four months.

Major Thompson—You saw it before when you were there?

Yes.

Why did you see Smith?

I wanted to see what he was sending since I left. I thought it was about the same as was supplied when I was there.

Only one piece of cloth was rejected while Mr. Bentley was at the Auburn.

William F. Orr.

Mr. William F. Orr said he was Government Inspector at the Auburn since March 8.

Do you follow all the processes of manufacture? No.

What do you do?

I wait till the cloth is completed and then compare it with the sample given me. I use my best judgment in the inspection.

Major Thompson submited a sample of cloth to witness and asked him what proportion of shoddy it contained, if any.

Mr. Orr replied that he could not determine the proportion. He thought there was some shoddy. The sample was picked haphazardly from a book.

You don't know whether the Auburn mill is putting in 40 per cent. of shoddy or not?

No.

What experience have you had?

About 25 or 30 years in a mill.

Regarding the exact proportions of wool and wool stock used witness said he could not decide. He would have to see the "batch" being made up.

Do you test for strength?

No. There is another inspection over mine in Ottawa.

How many pieces of cloth have you rejected?

Only some pieces that were off in shade. I found the quality was up to the Government's sample.

Mr. Orr was sent home for his government sample and the instructions pertaining to his duties as inspector.

A piece of the sample was put in as an exhibit.

Do you know whether paste is used in freize?

I never saw it in my life.

Did you see it used in the Auburn Mill? No!

Miss Miller submitted prices paid for khaki stock at various dates. October, 1915, it was 25c. a lb.; March, 1916, it had increased to 31 cents.

William Hartley.

Mr. William Hartley, Superintendent of the Auburn Woollen Co., was next called. He said that paste was used for waterproofing. Regarding the loss of material in the process of manufacture he said that in a fifty-fifty mixture of pure wool and wool stock there would be a loss of from 20 to 25 per cent. wool stock and the loss of pure wool would not amount to ten per cent.

Loss of 25 Per Cent.

Mr. Kendry, called to the stand, said that in the manufacture of friese there was practically no loss in pure wool, but that the wool stock showed a loss of 25 per cent., 25 per cent. after spinning, 5 1-2 per cent. in weaving and 7 1-2 per cent. in the finishing.

Major Thompson— What becomes of that 25 per cent. waste?

Mr. Kendry—It is a total loss. It falls under the machines and is thrown out.

The present cost of wool was 70 cents a pound and of wool stock 34 cents. On account of the waste in the latter it actually cost 41 cents.

Major Thompson— Have any complaints been made to you about the quality of the material supplied the Department?

No, sir.

Has your attention been called to any defects or irregularities in it?

No.

Mr. Kendry said he had supplied the government with cloth since 1898. During that time the rejected cloth was very small. When any goods showed cotton spots the inspector at the mill turned it back and this was sold across the line.

Do you use wool stock in serges?

No. Not at all. It is all new wool.

Mr. Kendry told of one shipment of about 30,000 yards that had been forwarded without factory inspection for the reason that the government needed it at once and wanted the shipment rushed. They had their own inspector at Ottawa.

To Mr. O'Connell he said he had never altered the cloth at any time. He had slightly increased the quantity of wool stock because he wanted to make it as cheaply as possible for the government. He had taken several orders from which he made next to nothing. The material with the extra wool stock had stood up well under the government test. Regarding the use of paste, Mr. Kendry said only a small quantity was used and it to increase the waterproofing of the cloth.

Mr. Kendry felt that the profit he had made was very moderate. The output of the Auburn Mills had been taken over by the government. Some orders had been taken lower than they ought to have been.

Mr. Greaves asked for proof of the prices of wool quoted by Mr. Kendry. He also estimated that in a fifty-fifty batch of material the loss in wool stock would be 20 per cent. and 10 per cent. of pure wool.

Mr. O'Connell asked him if he had been offered anything for giving evidence, but did not press the question, upon the Commissioner's suggestion that the investigation dealt only with figures.

In closing the local hearing, Sir Chas. Davidson requested Major Thompson to provide real evidence regarding the quality of the sealed sample of khaki used by Inspector Orr. The investigation thereupon adjourned sine die.

Monthly Executive Meeting of Local Red Cross Society

The monthly Executive meeting was held in the Teacher's room at the Public Library, Mrs. J. O. Davidson, the president in the chair. Miss Marion Rush, the supervisor of the workroom reported the sending away during the month of March of 109 bales of surgical supplies, including 13 bales donated by the Progressive Club, consisting of different sized pads, compresses, sponges, etc.

Miss Flora Davidson, convenor of the packing committee, reported the forwarding during March of 26 cases of general supplies, consisting of the following garments and articles:—

120 Hospital Night Shirts; 105 Ordinary Night Shirts; 80 Day Shirts; 67 pairs Pyjamas; 1,407 Crash Towels; 445 Turkish Towels; 262 Pairs Socks; 366 Pillow Cases 1,963 Hospital Handkerchiefs; 1,404 Face Cloths; 340 Many tailed Bandages; 207 Jaw Bandages; 9,000 Mouth Wipes, 73 Hot Water Bottle Covers; 14 Woolen Fomentation Cloths; 3 Ring Pillows; 3 pairs Bed-Socks; 2 Caps; 1 pair Wristlets; Chicklets, soap, etc.

South End Red Cross Auxiliary, Lily Lake Red Cross Auxiliary, Lakehurst Red Cross Auxiliary, St. Paul's Red Cross Auxiliary, St. Peter's Patriotic League, St. John's Church Women's Association, St. John's Church Junior W.A., Murray St. Baptist Ladies Aid, Ladies of Trinity Methodist Church, Knox Church Bureau Bible Class, Progressive Club, Teacher's Guild, West End Club, Mother's Club of Queen Alexander School, Mother's Club of King Edward School.

The Executive voted sixty dollars in response to an urgent appeal from headquarters for a cash donation to aid in the purchasing of rubber goods which are badly needed.

The usual monthly grants of $250 to the General Fund, $40 for bandages and $30 to the Prisoners of War Fund were voted, the latter sum together with the $20 contributed each month by the Progressive Club and other private subscriptions, make a total of about $100 forwarded by Peterborough Red Cross monthly to the Prisoners of War Fund, which was organized and is working so efficiently under the very capable direction of Mrs. Rivers Bulkely. The many letters received by this department of our Red Cross work, bear warm testimony to the splendid work it is doing not only in sending parcels of food regularly to our Canadian boys who are prisoners, but in the forwarding of warm underclothing, blankets, great-coats, socks and boots to them, all of which have rendered life a little more comfortable for them than it would otherwise have been.

The following letter has been received by our Secretary, Miss Laura J. Davidson, from Mrs. Rivers Bulkely:

Miss Laura J. Davidson,
The Canadian Red Cross Society.
Peterborough, Canada.

Dear Madam,—Many thanks for your kind letter. It is very difficult for us to do as you suggest, and send you thirty names for the purpose of adoption. You will readily understand that should we do this, these thirty men could not in the meantime be assigned to anybody else, and they might thus lose the chance of another adoption, also their addresses are now being so continually changed, that by the time we heard from you they would probably be moved to another camp.

May I suggest that if you know of any people kind enough to adopt prisoners, the enclosed forms might be filled in and returned to us. We would then fill in the names of the prisoners allotted to each person, return the forms to you and start sending parcels at once in the name of the adopter. I think, if I may say so, that it is a very much better plan, not only to get the names of the prisoners from this Society, as we are constantly in touch with the men and know what they are being sent, but also that parcels should be sent through us, the money being forwarded to this Society for that purpose.

Hoping I have made myself clear, and thanking you for your kind letter, I remain, ours truly,Y

Instructions from Headquarters to the Peterborough branch say it is impossible to get an over-supply of such accurate and satisfactory surgical dressings as have been sent by the Peterborough Red Cross Society, also the quality of materials and the workmanship of all garments forwarded by it, has been such as to place Peterborough in the front rank of those cities whose work has proved entirely satisfactory.

In view of the great offensive, which undoubtedly is coming ere long on the Western front, and in which the boys of Canada and of the British Empire will worthily play their part, and during which tremendous demands will be made on the resources of the Canadian and British Red Cross Societies, we would earnestly ask that the Societies do not suspend work during the summer season.

There will be no relaxing of the strain for the men at the front or for the wounded in the hospitals or for the doctors and nurses tending them, or for munition and other workers in connection with war supplies, therefore why for us? We may be weary and feeling the strain, but the more faithfully we continue doing our little bit just that much sooner will victory be ours.

The work-room at the Public Library will be closed on Good Friday and Easter Monday.

RED CROSS WORK IN SERBIA SHOWS THE LACK OF EQUIPMENT

An American doctor has written an impressive account of Red Cross work in Serbia. He was stationed in the Military Hospital at Belgrade, which was occupied by three units of the American Red Cross and had a capacity of 1,500 patients. The number of physicians ranged from three to nine and there were from nine to eighteen American nurses. The orderlies were mostly Austrian prisoners known as "Bolschies." At times during the bombardment of Belgrade, owing to lack of orderlies, it was necessary for doctors and even nurses to carry letters of wounded into the hospitals.

One of the chief difficulties of Red Cross work in Serbia was the utter lack of facilities for the quick transportation and handling of sick and wounded. In some cases the wounded were left uncared for on the field of battle for ten days. The Serbians transported their wounded for the most part in springless ox-carts, the capacity of which was increased by placing two or three litters across the top rack. Jolted over rough roads in the crude and tortoise-like conveyances, thousands of wounded died before reaching the hospital. In addition the Serbians had no proper letter service. Blankets hung from poles and doors were made to do duty as stretchers.

The patients, as a rule, reached the hospital in a most deplorable condition, their bodies covered with vermin, and their wounds aggravated by neglect. In a majority of cases the patients were in such a state of shock and exhaustion, so numbed into insensibility by excess of pain, that in the surgical operations, scarcely any, and in some cases, no anaesthetic was required.

In a little over a year the American Red Cross cared for about 20,000 sick and wounded in Belgrade and during the German invasion for about 4,000 wounded in thirty days. Some of the medical details of the sufferings of the wounded revealed in this doctor's report are heart-rending. In cases of post-typhus gangrene the soft tissues decayed and sloughed off, leaving the bone exposed. Ninety-five per cent. of gun shot wounds were complicated by infection. Tetanus was a common occurrence in newly-wounded cases, but thousands of lives could have been saved if there had been enough anti-toxin.

The Red Cross situation on the Western front forms a pleasant contrast to the horrors of Serbia, but the intense sufferings to which allusion has been made, point a valuable moral.

The amount of human suffering which an efficient Red Cross service can prevent is absolutely incalculable. If the medical services of the vast army in the field were to break down, the whole world would be visited by plagues, and humanity would not recover for generations.

It is, therefore almost a matter of self interest for every civilian to assist the Red Cross. Like the soldier in the trench, the Red Cross orderly, nurse and doctor, are also fighting a battle in behalf of those who stay at home as well as of their immediate patients, Serbia in deed, points the moral of Red Cross efficiency.

INDIA'S PRINCES IN WAR.

(Saint Nihal Singh, in London Observer.)

Only those who know of the sumptuous arrangements that exist in the rajas' palaces to insure their comfort can appreciate the depth of devotion to the British cause that impels them to bear the hardships of campaign life. At home they have large and commodious palaces with scores of attendants, generations of whose ancestors have served the rajas, and who perform every possible function for their masters, even in some instances to the point of cutting away the meat from the bone or placing a spoonful of rice in the ruler's mouth. Even the most important raja at the front has to share his small room with another, and must content himself with a single attendant, who must simultaneously serve as a private secretary, aide-de-camp, major-doma, and valet. So anxious have some cadets been to come to the front that they have put aside their pride of race, and volunteered to serve as hostlers, if that position would enable them to get into the fight. It is characteristic of the culture of these personages that the hardship that they have felt the most has been the necessity of going without their customary baths. Privations, however, have no terrors for India's fighters, be they rajas or commoners. Indeed on of the most distinguishing traits of the Indian rulers is their ability to inure themselves to hardships.

BAGGED THREE SEAPLANES.

ROME, April 5.—Among the details given in an official communication regarding the raid in Ancona yesterday afternoon by five seaplanes supported by two torpedo boats, as a result suit of which three persons were killed and eleven injured, are the following:

"The enemy seaplanes were attacked by anti-aircraft guns on an armored train and by four of our seaplanes. The seaplanes fled, but three of them were brought down. One was captured intact. The second burnt into flames and was destroyed. The third sank while it was being towed to port. The enemy torpedo boats remained far out at sea."

HAD VISION OF KING GEORGE

NEW YORK, April 5.—Clarence Hudson, alias Ernest Schiller, who was taken off the British freight steamer Matoppo several days ago, was to-day sent to the psychopathic ward in Bellevue Hospital for observation for ten days. Hudson told the magistrate that while on the Matoppo he had visions in which he saw King George and Lord Kitchener. Hudson said that he had a mission to start a revolution in Russia.

First of Four Faces Baff Murder Jury

Prosecuter Says He Will Prove That Hired Assassins Killed Poultry Dealer.

NEW YORK, April 5.—The trial of Giuseppe Arichiello, the first of the alleged slayers of Barnett Baff to be arraigned, began yesterday before Justice Shearn. Arichiello was indicted jointly with Frank Ferrara and Antonio and Joseph Zaffarone for the crime, but the defendants are to have separate trials.

It is alleged that Arichiello made a full admission of his part in the slaying of the poultry dealer, who was shot to death in West Washington Market on November 24, 1914, following a commercial war in which he was a leading factor.

The selection of the jury was completed during the afternoon and Jas O'Malley, Assistant District Attorney began the prosecution by giving a detailed resume of the murder and the alleged plotting which led to it. He said that the man on trial was one of the party of slayers who would kill for a price, and that they were about their occupation when the slaying occurred. Mr. O'Malley said he would prove that the men on trial fired the fatal shot.

The trial will be resumed to-day.

One Little Dog Halts Agreement

Husband Was to Get Miss Midget Under Separation Compact and Now He Sues for Her.

New York, April 5. — Little Miss Midget is only a very small dog, but Charles H. Cook and his wife fell out because of her. Mr. Cook says he owned her and that Mrs. Mary C. Cook agreed to turn Midget over to him when they made a private separation agreement. She did not do so, he says, in seeking $5,000 damages for her in the Supreme Court.

Miss Midget is not worth $5,000. That amount includes the dog and the quantity of silver which the parents of Mr. Cook gave to him and his wife as a wedding present. Mr. Cook says he and his wife signed a tentative separation agreement in January by which he received the silver, the dog and a clear title to three lots at Babylon, L.I., together with fifteen shares of Diamond match stock. Mrs. Cook was to receive an automobile, fire insurance policies and all of the contents of her home in Babylon. Through her attorney she has entered a statement to the effect that Mr. Cook did not live up to his agreement in certain details.

service at home. The question of recruiting must be gone at intelligently.

In munition factories, eligible men could be replaced by those physically unfit. Every manufacturer should be a recruiting officer. "Don't take on a man who could very easily go, but replace him by an ineligible," Col. Wright added. The remedy for wrong recruiting was organization. Stock of the man power of the Dmoinion should be taken. A registration board consisting of a jurist, a manufacturer, a military man and a labour man should be formed in every municipality and city. A man's elegibility would be dealt with by this board.

Mr. S. R. Parsons.

Mr. S. R. Parsons, speaking in reference to the 500,000 men, said that it meant every other eligible man between the age of nineteen and forty-one. He believes the government was blameworthy in setting forth that number, and not also devising some means by which to raise them. It was only through the production of Canada that this army could be maintained.

"A great leadership is needed in the Dominion today," he said. "Men who will put their duty before mere party politics were required."

Representatives of the Manufacturers' Association, said Mr. Parsons, will present the following resolution at Ottawa next Tuesday.

Proclamation for registration of men between 18 to 45.

Enrollment office to be opened in every city and municipality.

All men be given a badge.

Board to be appointed to deal with what class of service.

Each man would be assessed to, whether overseas, home defence or production.

Mr. Parsons also expressed himself in favour of conscription.

OBITUARY

The many friends of Dr. Lionel King, famous Peterborough hockey star in years gone by, will be sorry to learn of his bereavement in the death of his wife, which took place at Prince Albert, Sask., last night. Mrs. King was formerly Miss Ora Mickware of Cass City, Mich. The funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

EVELYN GEARY.

The death occurred this morning of Evelyn Geary, aged 24 years. She is survived by her mother and fahter Mrs. and Mr. W. J. Geary, and three sisters and three brothers. The sisters are Mrs. L. Henry and Mrs. H Campbell of Toronto, and Mrs. H. Legrow of Peterborough. The brothers are Joseph and George, at home, and John of the 93rd Battalion.

The funeral will be held on Saturday morning from the family residence, 667 Stewart Street, to St. Peter's Church, thence to St. Peter's Cemetery.

THE MINE-SWEEPER.

Foam-crested waves break upon her,
Ice laden winds sweep her deck,
Buffetted, storm-driven, and grimy,
she's only a tiny speck
On an ocean of tumbling waters, but she's doing her given task,
The same as the Super-Dreadnought;
What is she?" I hear you ask

She's not a stately pleasure yacht, built for a millionaire's sport.
But only a North Sea trawler that hailed for an east coast port;
And now on government duty, and armed with Q. F. guns,
She's sweeping the seas of deadly mines, sown by treacherous Huns.

From the "Shetlands" to "Beachy Head," then turning and beating back,
Past the "Goodwin's," up to the "Dogger Bank," or across to the "Skagger Rack;"
She's clearing the unseen perils from the paths of the monster fleet,
That awaits the day in the future,
when Briton and Hun shall meet.

Her crew don't wear three rows of tape, no silken scarf display,
Or "H.M.S." in gold on the cap, but they're drawing government pay;
Just show them what they have to do,
and you'll find them hard to beat,
For their job is just as deadly as the man's in the battle fleet.

Sometimes she'll sight the periscope
of an enemy's under-sea boat,
Then she'll readily meet and engage her as long as she keeps afloat;
For there's more than one of the "U" class, he's rotting beneath the swell,
Sent there by a North Sea trawler and a well-placed "Q.F." shell.

BERLIN TRAMWAYS PROSPER

Detailed figures of the business done by the Greater Berlin Street Railway during 1915 show that 437,000,000 passengers were carried, against 426,400,000 in the preceding year, and that the company's receipts rose from 42,3711,49 marks to 43,478,144, while its expenditures increased from 26,004,936 marks to 26,200,029. (A mark equals 23.8 cents at the normal rate of exchange.) The dividend for the current year was fixed at 6 per cent., the same rate as for 1915. In 1914 the rate was 8 per cent. During 1915 the street cars killed 35 persons and injured 1,142.

In noting the increase of nearly 11,000,000 passengers carried, the Berliner Tageblatt ascribes it to the fact that the war has greatly reduced the use of automobiles and taxicabs. The paper directs attention to the falling off in the service, the number of car-kilometers operated during the year being 91,700,000, against 96,900,000 in 1914, and attributes this to the lack of male personnel, both on the cars and in the shops. The increase in revenue is cited by the Tageblatt as full justification for the city's refusal to allow the company to raise its fares last year.

WAR HITS GERMAN AMBER

Of all the industries in which the German government is directly interested, the amber works at Konigsberg have been hit the hardest by the war, according to the Berliner Tageblatt, of Feb. 24th, which, while asserting that the situation improved considerably during 1915, remarks that at the end of the business year of 1914 the government had to cover a deficit of $200,000, compared with a profit of $172,500 in 1913. The production of raw amber fell from 472 tons, valued at about $625,000, to 193 tons, worth $250,000

A Transport Is Reported Sunk in the Mediterranean

RAIDING ZEPP BELIEVED TO HAVE GONE DOWN AT SEA

Heavy Loss of Life is Feared In the Sinking of the Liner "Simla" in Mediterranean

"Simla" Believed to Be the Transport Reported in an Athens Despatch to Have Been Sunk Off the West Coast of Greece

LONDON, England, April 7.—Heavy loss of life is feared in the sinking of the Peninsular and Oriental liner Simla, reported in Government service, as a transport in the Mediterranean, east of Malta.

No official statement has been issued by the Admiralty, and the Simla's owners thus far have no confirmation of press despatches.

The Simla is believed to be the transport reported in an Athens report to have been sunk off the west coast of Greece. Athens reported it was believed there had been a large loss of life.

The Simla was owned by the same company that owned the liner Persia, sunk in the Mediterranean last December with heavy loss of life, but was slightly smaller steamer, displacing 5,884 tons. She was 430 feet long.

Several months ago her regular sailings were cancelled and she was taken over by the Government.

Six men of the crew of the steamer Vesuvio, reported sunk last night were drowned, it was learned to-day.

Thorough search by patrol ships has failed to discover any more survivors of the torpedoed liner Zent, which was sunk with the loss of fifty lives.

Germany Ready For Peace On Before-the-War Basis

NEW YORK, April 7.—The feeling is growing that diplomatige negotiations will play a larger part than originally expected in the settlement of the war in Europe, according to the Rev. Chas. S. Macfarland, general secretary of the Federated Churches of Christ in America, who recently returned from as visit to the warring countries. In a statement to-day Dr. MacFarland said both the Entente powers and the Teutonic allies have definite plans for the next few months.

"The general 'attitude in Germany has undergone a marked change," Rev. MacFarland said, "from the manifest bitterness at the beginning of the war. I believe they might easily be ready for an adjustment on the assumption of the status antebellum."

In France there is a disposition to impose preliminary conditions which "preclude even the idea of conferences." This he attributed to German military excesses in Belgium and northern France, and the French distrust of the Germans.

"England occupies a somewhat mediating position," delared Dr. MacFarland, "and comes nearer seeing the whole field. She would ask guarantees of a very strong and guarded kind from Germany, and would be less exacting than France.

"In all European countries the Socialists are more or less mercurial." The common people, he asserted, are becoming increasingly questioning.

GERMANS GO INTO POLITICS.

Jersey Alliance to Fight Candidates Opposed to Their "Interests."

ELIZABETH, N.J., April 7.—Resolutions calling upon delegates to work against any Presidential candidate "not in accord with our interests," were passed recently at the State convention of the German-American Alliance. Also it was decided that the Executive Committee should meet after the national convention to take action on the nominees.

The convention was held in Turn Hall behind closed doors. Two sentries stood on guard and admitted only those with credentials. Following the meeting, Ernest German, newly elected Recording Secretary, made a brief statement of the proceedings. Asked if any names were mentioned in connection with the resolution bearing on the organization's attitude toward a Presidential candidate, he replied: "I don't know."

The conveniton affirmed the resolutions adopted at the national convention in San Francisco urging that Americans be warned not to travel on ships carrying munitions or on armed merchantmen. The "unfair press" came in for a share of criticism, as did the Administration for tolerating censorship in England of mail sent from America to neutrals and to belligerents.

Mayor Mravlag, himself a native of Austria, caused a stir when he welcomed the delegates. If they planned to criticise the Government or the Administration, he said, they should do so only as Americans. "You have no right to criticise any policy that you may believe works to the disadvantage of Germany if that policy is beneficial to the United States," he declared.

TREBIZOND WAS ONCE THE CRADLE OF AN EMPIRE

Trebizond, the old capital of Cappadocia, which the Turks have abandoned to the Russians, is mentioned by Milton in one of his first books of "Paradise Lost," where he refers to the knights who once jousted there. The city, indeed, was one of the great schools of mediaeval chivalry, and it was a German historian, Professor Fallmerayer, who tells us that it "became in popular romance and in the imaginations of the Italians and Provencals, one of the most famous empires of the east and the rallying point of the youth and flower of Asia." Readers of "Ivanhoe" may remember that the Templar boasts to Rebecca that he had won his horse Zamor, in single fight from the Soldan of Trebisond.

Apart from its clasical association with Xenophon and the Retreat of the Ten Thousand, Trebisond was one of the most notable cities of the East in the Middle Ages. The Hellenic Trapezus, or "Tableland," so named from the sloping table of ground on which it stands, at the time of the fourth crusade, fell into the hands of the Imperial Byzantine family, who founded there an empire which lasted for two and a half centuries, and included the greater part of the southern coast of the Black Sea. The Imperial family were renowned for their beauty, and princesses of Trebisond were sought in marriage by Byzantine emperors, western nobles and Mohammedan princes.

SHELDON CAUGHT AGAIN? CHARGED WITH FRAUD

BALTIMORE, Md., April 6.—In the arrest of C. C. Hoyt, on a charge of defranding several persons in this city out of amounts of money ranging from $300 to $400, headquarters detectives say that they have in their custody Charles D. Sheldon, formerly of Montreal. Hoyt it is said admitted that he was also Sheldon. He is specifically charged with defranding two women out of $700. He will be arraigned before Justice Supplee tomorrow morning.

For the swindle operated from Montreal, affecting hundreds of people in Ontario as well as in Quebec, Sheldon was sentenced to a term in the penitentiary.

WOMEN SHOULD GET THIS HABIT AS WELL AS MEN

Don't Eat Bite of Breakfast Until you drink glass of hot water.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking, each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and apperance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

SUFFOCATION CAUSED DEATH OF SOLDIER

PORT HOPE, April 6th.—The inquest into the death of the late Pte. Williams of Ottawa, 136th Battalion, who was found dead in a gutter here on Saturday last, opened here last evening. It was quite clear from the evidence that he had been drinking heavily between 6 and 8 o'clock on Friday night and when he was last seen was just able to walk.

The jury brought in a verdict that death was caused by suffocation while deceased was in a state of intoxication, after falling into a ditch of running water. The jury expressed the opinion that the person from whom he obtained the liquor should at once forfeit his license, and that all others who dispense intoxicating liquors contrary to law should at once be placed out of bounds.

THE EFFECT OF THE WAR UPON PAINT SITUATION

Raw Materials for the Manufacture of Paints Come From End of the World

Everyone is familiar with the abnormal conditions existing in the business world to-day, owing to the European conflict. Few lines of merchandise have been affected more than paint products.

The Messrs. Kingan Hardware Co., Limited, who have again made arrangements for placing Brandram-Henderson paints, varnishes and leads on the market, stated, to the Examiner that while the paint markets had been greatly disturbed, with the exception of a few special colours, all supplies could now be obtained and offered at reasonable prices.

"While practically every one is interested in paint," said Mr. Kingan, "few realise that the raw materials for their manufacture come from the end of the world, and with the world-wide war many changes in the raw material market have come about.

"B.-H. 'English' Paint," said he, "is our leading paint line. It is made on a pigment base of 70 per cent. white lead and 30 per cent. zinc oxide. Previous to the war, our white lead was manufactured from pig lead obtained from the smelter at Traill, B.C., and the zinc came from the zinc mines of Belgium and France; but this supply of zinc has now been cut off, and the lead from Traill is now used almost entirely for munitions, so that both zinc and lead products are now being imported from the United States.

"When one realizes that so many of the tinting colours come from the European countries—the siennas from Italy, the umbers from Turkey, and many chemicals for colour making from Germany—one can appreciate the effort required in the paint industry to keep the Canadian market supplied with paint of standard quality.

CANADIAN PRISONERS WOULD NOT WORK

KINGSTON, April 5.—Mrs. John Davidson has been advised by the American ambassador at Berlin that the punishment for refusal to work which was meted out to her son, Bryce Davidson, was not given for refusing to work on munitions, as was currently reported. The facts of the case are that Davidson with 14 comrades, was placed under arrest on October 5th, 1915, on a charge of disobedience to orders because they refused to march out of the camp at Giessen in spite of repeated orders to do so, to perform earth and masonry work to which they had been detailed.

SWISS TO MAKE BORDER DISTRICT

BERNE, Switzerland, April 5.—Swiss government is considering the marking of the frontiers with signs visible at a long distance by daylight and illuminated at night so as to avoid any mistakes by the German

A WORD OF GRATITUDE.

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles, and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Rice, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

A recent commerce report drew attention to a new turnip-topping and tailing machine, the invention of a Scotsman. The turnip crop in Scotland is of great importance, exceeding 430,500 acres.

Man Walked 4,000 Miles

Robert Sindt, thirty-five years old, of Davenport, Iowa, was facing a physical breakdown last fall. The doctors did not hold out much hope for him. He is a pretty good sized man when in robust health but his weight had dropped to 135 pounds.

"I'll doctor my own case, and fresh air will do for my first prescription," decided Sindt.

So he started walking. Not to any destination in particular, but just jogging along as far as he felt like going every day. He started to walk in August. Recently he had arrived at San Diego, Cal., having walked 3,884 miles in that time.

His prescription of fresh air, along with the accompanying exercise, has worked wonders, and his weight has gone up fifteen pounds. It's all solid bone and muscle, too, now.

Sindt has become a devotee of walking and has started out on a new trip to Washington, D.C. He pays his own way and adopts none of the minor grafts usually employed by professional pedestrians.

While on his long jaunt Sindt made a study of the effect of various foods, and he has arrived at the conclusion that the old fashioned staple—beans—just about tops the list in the way of affording nutriment. He drinks a great deal of water every day. He sleeps in the open air most of the time.

Sindt has averaged 15.73 miles every day since he started on his health pilgrimage.

"All Bosh—
Tea and Coffee
Don't Hurt Me"

says the cynic—but, we live and learn and at some time of life many tea or coffee drinkers wake up to the fact that the drug, "caffeine," in tea and coffee is "getting them."

Headache, nervousness, biliousness, heart-flutter, insomnia, etc., are often signs that tea or coffee is getting in its work; and the growing knowledge of its true nature has led thousands of former tea or coffee drinkers to turn to

INSTANT POSTUM

This famous food-drink has a rich, snappy flavour, but is entirely free from caffeine and other harmful elements ever present in tea and coffee. It is made of whole wheat and a small portion of wholesome molasses, and permits Nature, unhampered, to carry on her work of daily re-building brain, nerves and muscle.

Postum comes in two forms: The original Postum Cereal must be boiled; Instant Postum requires no boiling—a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water makes a delicious drink—instantly. Both forms are equally delicious and the cost per cup is about the same.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"Flower of the Gorse"

BY LOUIS TRACY

Tollemache laughed too. "Don't ask any questions, little girl, and you won't be told any fibs," he said. "Captain Popple and Jackson and I have some business on hand, and we want Mrs. Carmac and you to be present when we drive a bargain with the wily Raymond. Now, I shan't tell you any more; so you needn't pout."

"I'm not pouting."

"Oh, by the way, if there's any news of Madeleine, get it while the deputation is approaching."

She courtesied, with a demure "Oui, M'sieur." Somehow, that morning, despite the unpleasing tidings that might have arrived from Paris, she felt oddly lighthearted.

But the smile froze on her lips when she met Raymond on the steps of the annex, where he had evidently stationed himself in order to waylay her. His slight figure was tightly buttoned up in a heavy overcoat and he carried another coat over his left arm; so he raised his hat more awkwardly even than usual. Then she remembered that he was going down the river with the salvors, and summoned all her woman's guile to the task of bringing him back to her mother's apartments, in case he had been there already and taken leave. She could hardly have explained her motive. It sufficed that Lorry had made a point of Raymond's attendance under given conditions, and she was determined that his wish should be obeyed.

"I've received a telegram from Duquesne," he said, plunging at once into a topic on which they could converse freely without the inevitable constraint of a first meeting after the extraordinary disclosures of the preceding night. "It's satisfactory, in a sense. He was unable to approach Madeleine, because Feodyke met her on arrival at the Gare St. Lazare. But he followed them. Feodyke took Madeleine to a small hotel, and left her there. Duquesne will endeavour to see her this morning."

"Has he obtained her address?" inquired the girl eagerly, sinking her loathing of the man in the importance of his statement.

"No. I'll show you the message, if you'll hold this coat for a second or two."

"Come to Mrs. Carmac's room."

"Sorry, I've just seen Mrs. Carmac, and am making for the quay," he insisted," she said, with a very creditable effort at a coquettish glance. "We can't stand talking here. Come. I'll not keep you more than a minute."

Raymond, veritably astounded by her manner, as well he might be, followed her without demur. He was elated, almost excited. A new and entrancing vista opened before his mind's eye. Were the difficulties that yet loomed so large about to vanish into thin air? If Yvonne proved gracious what else was there to bother him? Each upward step on the creaking stairs seemed to be another rung in the ladder of fortune. He did not know it, but he had reached the highest point of the climb when he stood in Mrs. Carmac's room on the first floor.

Yvonne had hurried on ahead, and put a warning finger on her lips when she cried aloud, ostensibly to her mother, but actually for the secretary's benefit, "Mr. Raymond is coming in. He has news of Madeleine, and I didn't want to wait outside lest Peridot should pass. I mean to avoid Peridot until, by one method or another, I get in touch with Madeleine."

The explanation was not only plausible but strictly accurate. When she crossed to the window and made the agreed signal to Tollemache she might well have been looking out, to learn if Peridot was coming down the Toulifot.

Lorry and his companions were already on the way. They had seen the meeting in the doorway, and assumed that Yvonne had drawn Raymond in her wake. Nevertheless her stanch friend and devout lover was watching the window. He grinned broadly, and waved a hand. Why, she knew not; but her pulses throbbed. Some remarkable thing was going to happen. She felt it in the air.

Then she focused her thoughts on what Raymond was saying. He had produced the telegram, the text of which ran exactly as he had given it.

"As I may be absent all day," he added, "I took the liberty to tell Duquesne to wire the result of his interview with Madamoiselle Demoret to Mrs. Carmac. You have his address, and can communicate with him without waiting for me."

Mrs. Carmac nodded. She knew of the arrangement already, and meant to inform Yvonne of it herself. She was quick-witted, and her daughter's manner carried a vague consciousness of the imminence of some matter more important even than the tangle in which Madeleine Demoret was involved.

"That sounds practicable," said Yonne, rather for the sake of detaining Raymond than by way of agreement, since her father's revelation had destroyed every shred of confidence in the man himself and his Parisian help er. "Monsieur Duquesne can at least let us know where Madeleine is staying. "Then I risk all in a personal appeal."

"I would advise you strongly to act only through Duqueane," said Raymond. "He has wide experience, and is thoroughly trustworthy. You can depend on his discretion. He——"

There was a knock at the door. Tollemache entered. After him came Popplesor faced and serious, and Jackson, with a bulldog expression on his Cockney features.

"I want you to give me five minutes Mrs. Carmac said Lorry gravely. "Certain facts have reached me——"

"I'm sure you'll forgive me," broke in Raymond, with glib assurance, "but I am accompanying the salvage party, and I" walk slowly on to the quay."

"No, you'll remain here!" said Tollemache. "What I have to say concerns you more than any other person breathing. Just listen! I'll come to the point quickly. Mrs. Carmac, I have good reason to believe that this man Raymond stole your jewels. I believe he has them in his possession at this moment. Of course I'm fully alive to the risk I run in bringing such a charge if it is not substantiated. Now, Raymond, if you're in a hurry, hand over those pearls and diamonds. By staging the piece de conviction you'll save a lot of bother. Then the court, which is now assembled, can pronounce sentence, and you'll know exactly where you are, which should be a relief."

Tollemache paid no heed to the half-repressed cry of amazement that burst simultaneously from the lips of both women. He was gazing steadily and fixedly at Raymond, whose sallow face had suddenly grown vivid. During a few trying seconds it really seemed as though the rascal thus roundly accused of a dastardly crime would collapse in a faint. But he rallied, and blurted out a protest in a voice choked with fury.

"How dare you!" he cried. "You hound, to attack a defenseless man! Mrs. Carmac, I appeal to you! Do you allow me to be so grossly insulted in your presence?"

"Defenseless strikes me as the right word," said Tollemache, ignoring Mrs. Carmac's involuntary attempt at interference. "Of course you intend it as a plea on account of your injury; but unless I am mistaken—in which case I stand to be shot at in any way you choose—you got your arm broken while rifling Mrs. Carmac's trunk. However, I'll explain the whole business to your complete satisfaction. Give me those pearls and the other things. I mean to have them now. Don't think you can escape by biff, you miserable whelp. Hand them over, or I'll take them, and use as much force as may be necessary!"

Tollemache strode forward, and grasped the lapel of Raymond's coat. Then indeed it was more than probable that the secretary would drop where he stood. He trembled like one in a palsy, and his lips twitched convulsively, but could only mouth incoherent sounds.

Tollemache did not hesitate. Unbuttoning the overcoat, and endeavoring to avoid touching the bandaged arm, he turned a hand into the inner-hand pocket of Raymond's jacket. At that the accused man uttered a queer squeal of mingled rage and despair, and struck wildly at his adversary with his fist flat. Tollemache merely moved his head, and the blow passed harmlessly over his shoulder. In the same instant he withdrew something from Raymond's pocket, and stepped back.

"What's this, he said coolly, exhibiting a small square case, covered with Morocco leather.

Mrs. Carmac, who had watched this trying scene with manifest distress, looked at the object that Tollemache held in full view. Her eyes dilated in sheer terror; but recognition dawned in them, and she cried excitedly.

"That is the case which contained my pearls!"

Tollepache pressed a spring, and a lid flew open. There, coiled within, reposed a string of pearls. Mrs. Carmac gave them one glance; then she turned on the man who had been so dramatically compelled to relinquish his booty.

"Oh, how could you do such a thing?" she wailed brokenly. "You knew how I prized them—the one gift of my husband's which I valued."

"Your husband's!" snarled Raymond. "Which husband? Carmac?"

She flinched as if he had dealt her the blow intended for Tollemache; but her champion was in no mind to permit a discomfited rogue to vent his spleen on a woman.

"Unless you're a bigger fool than you are unquestionably a knave, you'll hold your tongue," he said, speaking with a vehemence that silenced Raymond for the moment. "Now let us have no more humbug, I don't want to hurt you. Where are the other articles? Either give them up yourself or tell me where to find them."

Though quivering with passion, the detected thief apparently realized that he had nothing to gain by further pretence. From the left-hand pocket of his jacket he took two cases similar in size and material to that which held the pearls, though the color of the leather differed in each instance. He ignored Tollemache, and gave them to Mrs. Carmac. Even in that supreme instant his brazen nerve did not fail him.

"This dispute really affects you and me," he said. "I suggest that you discuss it with me privately."

"At present, Raymond, I would call your attention to the fact that you are discussing things with me," said Tollemache firmly. "Mrs. Carmac, he went on, "kindly glance through your belongings, and tell me if there is anything missing."

Some Creoks Stories.

An English journalist congratulated Mr. Will Crooks on being a "Right Honorable," and asked him how it felt. "I don't feel any difference yet," he said, "but I feel very proud of the honor the King has done me. I hope it won't turn my head, and that I shall always be the same Will Crooks as ever. My motto has always been 'Be Useful,' and I hope I have lived up to it. I feel that every advance in life lays fresh responsibilities on me."

Ta fact that Mr. Crooks is a Privy Counsellor did not prevent him telling an amusing story of his early days, when Parliament was as wild a dream as the Privy Council. Mr. Crooks saved a sum of money by working overtime. "It burnt a hole in my pocket," he said. "We didn't know what to do with it, so one Saturday evening my wife and I sallied out and bought a beautiful brass bedstead, for which we had no use, but which 'blew' the money splendidly.

In the course of conversation "slackers" were mentioned, and Mr. Will Crooks told me a story about a certain "out of work" who went to the foreman at a big factory and asked for a situation. "I am afraid I cannot give you anything," he was told, "for there is scarcely enough doing to keep the regular hands employed." "Oh, that's all right, guv'nor," answered the applicant, cheerfully; "anything I would do wouldn't make very much difference."

HEAT FLASHES, DIZZY, NERVOUS

Mrs. Wynn Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her During Change of Life.

Richmond, Va.—"After taking seven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new woman. I always had a headache during the Change of Life and was also troubled with other bad feelings common at that time—dizzy spells, nervous feelings and heat flashes. Now I am in better health than I ever was and recommend your remedies to all my friends."—Mrs. Lena Wynn, 2516 E. O Street, Richmond, Va.

While Change of Life is a most critical period in a woman's existence, the annoying symptoms which accompany it may be controlled, and normal health restored by the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Such warning symptoms are a sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and lassitude, and dizziness.

For these abnormal conditions do not fail to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

MIXED METAPHORS.

"A Flea-Bite in the Ocean," One of the Best.

Mr. "Lulu" Harcourt's father, Sir William, once said, when taunting an Opposition member as to a Bill which had not come off: "We overlaid this bantling, and so it never came to birth"; and about the same time a well-known member of Parliament declared, in his grand oratorical manner, that "the pale face of the British soldier is the backbone of the Indian Army."

On another occasion this same orator, still talking about India, said, scornfully: "Talk of this as a loan to India! Why, it is a mere flea-bite in the ocean." On the very same day, in "another place" the late Lord Cross said: "The allegation is that the places are so far off that the man couldn't be in both of them at the same time, an allegation which we deny." And on another occasion he looked round the noble chamber with questing eye and said: "I think I heard a smile." He certainly heard a roar of laughter the next moment.

A similar slip was made by that genial nobleman and splendid man of business, Lord Balfour of Burleigh, when he exclaimed: "The noble lord shakes his head, and I am very glad to hear it." But one of the very finest examples of getting the metaphors mixed is attributed to Captain Craig, who said: "The naked sword is drawn for the fight; and never again will the black smoke of the Nationalists' tar-barrels drift on the Home Rule wind to darken the hearts of Englishmen."

"The law relating to labor combinations," said a well-known labor-ist, "must be watertight, so that no judge may drive a coach-and-four through it."

Mr. Swift MacNeill once said: "I will now put to the Attorney-General another question, which distinctly arises out of the answer which the right honorable gentleman has not given." But although this raised a laugh in the House it was as nothing to the roar which greeted a fiery speaker who exclaimed: "Whenever the Prime Minister mentions Home Rule he puts his foot into it up to the knee."

The late Mr. Forster, of Education Bill fame, began a peroration one night with the words: "I will, Mr. Speaker, sit down by saying——"; and some time since a member made the flesh of nervous M.P.'s creep by saying: "At one stage in the negotiations a great European struggle was so imminent that it only required a spark to let slip the dogs of war."

It goes without saying that it was a native of the Emerald Isle, which is not as green as it is painted, after all, who said, "Sir, since the Government has let the cat out of the bag there is nothing to be done but to take the bull by the horns and set the ball rolling at once." But the biscuit is most certainly annexed by Major Archer Shee's wonderful sentence: "Even the Stygian eloquence of the Chancellor of the Exchequer has not been able to wash the white elephant entirely."

Authors' Amazing Fees.

Five thousand pounds is the highest price ever paid for a poem, which Byron received for "Childe Harold"; he subsequently got £3,600 for "Don Juan." The celebrated poet, Thomas Moore, got £3,936 for "Lalla Rookh," and £13,600 for his "Irish Melodies." The Scottish poet, Thos. Campbell, got £3,750 for his "Pleasures of Hope." Lord Tennyson, during the later years of his writing, received from the sales of his poems from £10,000 to £12,000 a year, yet down to the issue of his collected works, forty-four years before his death, he had obtained next to nothing for his poems, during a period in which he had produced "Maud" and "In Memoriam," and his first assured income came from the familiar two-volume edition of his poems. Early neglect was the fate of many well-known poets. Longfellow only received £3 10s for "Excelsior." Whittier for his earlier poems received nothing. Lowell published his first poems at his own expense.

Defrauding the Waiter.

In a Parisian cafe an American ordered a hors d'oeuvre, sole, agneau pre sale, artichoke salad, peche Melba, and so on, and when the waiter brought him a bill of 30 francs he paid it like a man. After his change was brought he counted it and pushed a franc toward the waiter for a tip. But the man, pushing back the franc, said in gentle reproach:

"Pardon, monsieur, but that is the counterfeit franc."

THE MODERN SOLDIER.

A Death-Dealing Ogre, Sinister and Scientific.

A terror-inspiring creature, sinister as a "familiar" in the old Spanish inquisition, is the scientifically equipped soldier of to-day.

The arrow that flieth by day, the pestilence that walketh in darkness, and the destruction that wasteth at noonday are all alike to this specter. A steel helmet guards his cranium, a mask protects him against the poison gases, and goggles protect his eyes.

Like a fearful ogre he appears above the greenish yellow fog of poison breath that is wafted over the modern battle field.

It was to be expected that the multiplying perils of the war would result in the evolution of a regulation uniform armor and this appears to be it. A German war correspondent wrote:

"Behind the fourth gas-and-smoke cloud there suddenly emerged Englishmen in thick lines and storming columns. They rose suddenly from the earth, wearing smoke-masks over their faces, and looking not like soldiers but like devils."

Thus one terror of war follows another and out of peaceful, constructive, civilized men are made cunning, diabolical, desperate death-dealing ogres of destruction.

Amenities of the Table.

"I waited ten minutes for a car today," the budding was saying, "and then it passed me without stopping."

It was afterward recalled that the habitually silent man had been having unusual difficulty with his cocoa.

"Perhaps," he remarked, "the conductor didn't care to have you board his car."—Exchange.

FOUGHT LIKE GENTLEMEN.

British Officers Pay High Tribute to the Turks.

Although we live in an era of high explosive shells, machine guns, poisonous gas, and other murderous devices known as munitions, the chivalry of the soldier has not died out. This spirit of chivalry is not confined to Christian and civilized peoples. It is recorded of the Zulus that, in the war with the British, they scorned to attack or kill non-combatants. Contact with some of the most primitive tribes has shown at times similar codes of honor to exist. It is not surprising, therefore, to learn that the campaign on the Gallipoli Peninsula revealed the Turk in a new and favorable light to the British soldier. The British soldier is quick to respond to chivalrous conduct in a foe. That the Turk is a brave man and a good fighter all the world knows. It was left to the British to discover that the Turkish soldier fights like a gentleman.

"When the British forces evacuated the Anzac region, and the Turks, after a long wait, discovered that the bird had flown, one of the first things that met their eyes when they rushed through the silent and deserted British trenches was a table laid for dinner. Everything that the most fastidious hungry man could desire was there. On the table was a card from the British officers who had occupied the dugout, inviting the Turkish officers to accept their hospitality as men who had fought like gentlemen. Germans were specifically barred as unfit to sit at the same table. This superior streak in the Turkish character was noted also in Mesopotamia. A British officer who was severely wounded at Ctesiphon writes:

"I have such an admiration for the Turks that I wonder more and more how they ever came into the German net. They did a thing after Ctesiphon that commands recognition. A barge-load of three hundred of our wounded stuck in the mud, and with some medical personnel on board, had to be abandoned. The Turks towed the barge down stream, and under cover of a white flag sent the whole lot, including the medical personnel, back to the British camp, unharmed. I know of two wounded British officers left out on the night after the battle, who were found by the Turks, who did not harm them in any way, and in the case of one man they gave him water, loosened his coat, and made him more comfortable. They left both for our people to collect next morning. It is the Arabs who maltreat our wounded, and commit all sorts of atrocities."

In Armenia the atrocities were committed by the Kurds, although connived at by German and Turkish officials. How far the Turkish people as a whole are partners in the crimes of their Sultans and officials it is difficult to say. They have no political power, and those who control the ruins of government are for the most part men who are not of pure Turkish descent. That the British army has learned to admire and respect the Turkish soldier and to detest the Prussian is evidence that the Moslem is not as black as he is painted.

Dog in Burned Station.

RED TAPE IN FRANCE.

It Entangles One Even in Getting the Gas Turned on in a Flat.

Paradise is at once the paradise and the inferno of bureaucracy. For example, I wanted the gas to be turned on in my flat. A simple affair! Drop a postcard to the company telling the company to come and turn it on. Not at all! I was told that it would be better to call upon the company. So I called.

"What do you desire, monsieur?"

"I am the new tenant of a flat, and I want the gas turned on."

"Ah! You are the new tenant of a flat, and you want the gas turned on. M. Chose, here is a new tenant of a flat, and he wants the gas turned on. Where should he be led to?"

About a quarter of an hour of this, and then at last I am led by a municipal employee sure of his job and his pension to the far distant room of the higher employee appointed by the city of Paris to deal with such as me. This room is furnished somewhat like that of a solicitor's managing clerk.

"Good morning, sir."

"Good morning, sir."

"It appears, sir—M. Bonnay, fourth floor, No. 4 Rue de Calais, ninth arrondissement, is it not?—that you want the gas turned on. Will you put yourself to the trouble of sitting down, M. Bonnay?"

I sit down. He sits down.

"Ah! So you want the gas turned on! Let us see, let us see." • • •

Hundreds of such applications must be made every day. But the attitude of this ceremonious official might be put into words thus: "A strange and interesting application of yours, to have the gas turned on! Very remarkable! It attracts me. The case must be examined with the care and the respect which it deserves."—Arnold Bennett in Metropolitan.

DANDRUFF SURELY DESTROYS THE HAIR

Girls—if you want plenty of thick beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

VILLAGE LIFE IN EGYPT.

Crude Mud Houses, the Roofs of Which Are Garbage Dumps.

Egyptian village life is quaint and interesting, says the Wide World Magazine. The houses are crude, one storied structures of sun baked mud, with possibly a couple of tiny square holes cut in the wall for ventilation.

Each home consists of a single room, absolutely devoid of furniture, one or two drinking jars and cooking utensils being usually the only articles to be seen. The roofs of these hovels are thatched with cornstalks, and for some unaccountable reason all the household rubbish is dumped on the roof! For this purpose a ladder may frequently be seen reclining against the side of the house. From a distance a village is apt to look like an immense rubbish heap. These primitive erections are inhabited solely by the fellahin, as Egyptian peasants are called.

In some of the Arab villages the arrangements for sleeping are even more unconventional. Huge capital structures made of mud are built out in the open, away from the houses, and into these the babies are frequently placed during the day, and often the entire family sleep in them at night. The idea is to escape the numerous mushes and scorpions which abound during the great heat of the summer.

POISON IN ITS AIR.

Java's Valley of Death, Where Life Cannot Exist.

The Valley of Death is on the island of Java. It is the most remarkable natural example of an atmosphere loaded with carbonic acid gas in existence. It has never been fully explored because of the danger of remaining more than a few moments in its poisonous atmosphere.

Approached through an opening between the hills, it is seen to be an oval shaped valley about half a mile across. It is about thirty-five feet deep. The bottom is hard and sandy, without vegetation and strewn with large stones. The surface is covered with the bones of animals, birds and human beings.

Explorers seldom venture beyond the borders, though the deadly air does not immediately affect human beings. This is because the carbonic acid gas, being heavier than the atmosphere, settles to the bottom of the valley. Dogs and fowls thrown into it fall senseless instantly and die in a few minutes. No craters or fissures are visible on the floor of this valley, and it is thought that the openings are near the base of the hills.—Exchange.

To Cheer Him.

The wife of his bosom was going to leave him for a fortnight, and Fitz-Tomkins was trying his very best to look sad.

"My dear," he said, choking back a chuckle with his handkerchief and wiping his eyes, "I hardly like to think how I shall miss you. The evenings will be so long and lonely without you. I shall have no one to talk to."

"George," said Mrs. Fitz, surveying him with a marble eye, "I have provided for your comfort in this as in every other way. When you return home you will find dear mother there. She will remain till I come back and keep you company in the evenings, George."

And as the train slowly glided out of the station the guard wondered why Fitz-Tomkins nearly bit him when he insinuated a tip.—London Telegraph.

"Speech Clinics."

That distressing complaint, stammering, is now receiving special attention at St. Thomas' Hospital, London. In former years the work of combating stammering was for the most part confined to home treatment; but what is called a "speech clinic" has now been established as part of the children's outpatients' department of St. Thomas' Hospital, where cases are especially treated.

Under the superintendence of a highly-qualified specialist, children who suffer from stammering are treated twice a week in what are known as instructional classes.

Cases are diagnosed and classified by the help of the X-rays, which frequently disclose the imperfect character of the respiratory movements which are the chief cause of stammering.

Some children are found to stammer because of defective chest formation; others because of the ignorance, neglect, or example of their parents, and others on account of nervousness.

In the first stages of the treatment a child is given breathing, vocal, and musical exercises, while various movements of the body are employed in the care; for it has been found that from different physical exercises children gain some benefit which encourages them and assists to break down the nervous self-consciousness of their affliction.

Some Barber.

"Boy Scout Movement Greatest Developing and Civilizing Institution Started Since the Principles of Government Laid Down by Man

By Benjamin Franklin Roller, M. D.

If President Wilson, Roosevelt, Taft, David Starr Jordan, Judge Ben Lindsey, John Fellowes Morgan, Major General Wood, General George W. Wingate, Luther Burbank, Dr. Luther H. Gulick, Dr. G. Ward Crampton, Dr. D. L. Sargent, Mortimer L. Schiff, George W. Perkins, John Finley and dozens of other such men emphatically indorse a thing it must be worth while looking into.

Well, they are with the "Boy Scouts of America," heart and soul, and so am I. Do you know what it means? I did not until I started this investigation, and I dare say that nine out of ten of even the highly intelligent class who read this newspaper have no adequate appreciation of the significance of this wonderful and most important movement. Like many others, I had an idea that Boy Scouts meant embryonic soldiers, a military movement calculated to turn the nation into a vast army of gunmen in the course of a few years, and the very thought of war chills my blood—as it, no doubt, does yours. I am glad to inform you, if you do not already know, that it is nothing of the kind. In fact, it is exactly the opposite from that, and I promise you faithfully that when the day arrives that even fifty-one per cent of the boys of this and other nations have been Boy Scouts for twenty years there will be no more war in the so-called civilized world.

There is not the slightest doubt in my mind that in this movement alone lies the salvation of the world from the barbaric horrors of war. The school has proved inadequate, the church has failed utterly to prevent it, and the power of armament seems only to invite wholesale murder. In the Boy Scouts of America, however, lies all the potency for good that may be derived from school, church and preparedness.

Scouts' Motto Is "Be Prepared."

For it is primarily educational, fundamentally religious, and its motto, though in nowise military, is "Be Prepared." Prepared to fight if necessary, but—what is a thousand times more important—prepared to make and keep peace, prepared to smile, to love, to help, to do good, to spread sunshine and good cheer and kindness and knowledge, virtue, industry, prosperity and all the things that lead away from war. Understand, however, that I am speaking of the Boy Scouts of America and not of another body called "Scouts," which is distinctly a military movement. The former undeniably makes MEN out of boys, while the latter fails to make either soldiers or men.

If mankind is ever to be delivered from barbarity and strife and war and bloodshed, waste, sorrow, sickness and wanton destruction it will have to be by one or more of three things—education, religion or preparedness. The Boy Scout organization promotes education better than many schools; it promotes religion better than most churches, and it promotes preparedness far better than the government has done so far. The Boy Scout movement is for that reason the greatest developing and civilizing institution that has been started since the principles of government were first laid down by man.

It is not the aim of the Scouts to supplant the school, the church or any other institution. The leaders are careful to do or say nothing which could possibly be construed to head that way. I am free to express my candid opinion, without fear of the consequences, however, that the ease, certainty and degree of accomplishment of the Scout movement is so much greater than that of either school or church that both would enhance society's interests by adopting Scout methods.

Gives Real Education.

The Scout movement is the most prolific source of preparedness, because real preparedness depends on real education and real religion.

What do I mean by real education and real religion? Herbert Spencer says, "Education is preparation for complete living." But "complete living" is yet a mooted question. With a correct understanding of what is "complete living," however, Spencer's definition covers real education. Complete living, in my opinion, is living in that way which will most quickly and most surely attain the goal of human life, which is happiness. Even in altruistic service to our fellow men it is the happiness we derive from serving. Even in sacrifice it is the happiness it gives to us which makes us give to others.

Work, duty, kindness, charity, patience—all have for their object our own ultimate happiness. "It is more pleasant to give than to receive;" therefore we give. It is more pleasant to sacrifice than to enjoy; therefore men sacrifice. There is the keenest possible sense of pleasure in the knowledge of a charity, a kindness or a duty done; therefore men are charitable, kind and dutiful. Men often mistake fancied for real happiness to steal and enjoy the things they steal, but it does not—it means sorrow instead of pleasure in the end. Some think it pays to be selfish, unkind and uncharitable, but it does not. Those traits invariably reflect unhappiness in the end. Some think it is better to deceive and lie and cheat, but it is not—for honesty, truthfulness and fair play will always bring more happiness.

Happiness is the end of everything—it is all we live for, it is what men die for, it is the goal of life, the secret of industry and possession, the inspiration of hope and ambition, and the cause of men's belief in both immortality and God. That education, then, which tends to produce most quickly and most surely the greatest amount of the most genuine and permanent happiness is real education.

Good Citizenship Is Basis.

Society is a group of individuals banded together to promote happiness. That which best produces happiness is good citizenship, which means the upbuilding of mankind. That which aids in the upbuilding of mankind promotes peace, harmony and happiness. Nothing will further these things like real education. Therefore real education is that which produces good citizenship. But does the school teach citizenship and the art of living? I spent just twenty years of my life in school, and I was never in a practical class until I received the practical training in surgery for the pursuit of my profession.

I was never once taught how to earn a dollar nor how to spend one. I was never even taught what happiness is.

I spent days and months and years studying courses that never did me a bit of good nor paid me a cent. Coming to think as I look back over the hours that I wasted studying useless things—when life is so short and time so precious—that any reasonably bright boy of twelve years whose study has been properly guided could and should have more real education and be far better prepared to pursue the chase for happiness for himself and his fellow man than I was at graduation with two college degrees.

Of what use is Greek to an American who does not know English?

A boy wants a language that he can use.

Of what use is it even to commit "Faust" to memory if you can't order ham and eggs in German?

A hungry man wants food, not poetry, and for an American to obtain food in Germany requires conversational (not Goethe's) German.

Both the schools and the church can still learn valuable lessons from the Boy Scout movement in the matter of teaching. Scoutcraft teaching is practical and useful. It helps one to live, to be happy and to make others happy, and to make one's country "a better place to live in." That is, it makes the boy a good citizen. Here is a list of a few of the things they are taught:—Agriculture, gardening, blacksmithing, carpentry, masonry, business, civics, conservation, cooking, dairying, "first aid," life saving, music, machinery, personal and public health, physical development, swimming, seamanship and pathfinding.

There are many other things of the same practical use taught in scoutcraft, and these things, I think, are in the line of real education. In the matter of religion, then, they are taught reverence for the good, for true and the beautiful, duty to one's self and others, fidelity to the right and to conscience, loyalty to parents, friends, government and country, courtesy and kindness to everything and everybody, fraternity and love to the whole human family, courage to do right, to face trouble and danger with a smile and a will, and cleanliness of body, mind and soul. That is what I call real religion—the uplifting force in life, the greatest known impulse for good, and love, and progress, and happiness—but false religion is the worst of drawbacks to the individual, society and the world. Charles W. Eliot says:—"Nothing but good is to be expected from the Boy Scout movement, and its educational practices are highly to be commended."

Origin of the Movement.

The way in which the Boy Scouts originated is unique as well as interesting. A small book called "Aids for Scouting" was used entirely by the soldiers in England until about five years ago. Sir Robert Baden-Powell rewrote the book, adapting it especially for developing character in boys. He says he got many of his ideas from the customs of the Zulus, the red Indians and the Japanese; some from his contemporaries, like Smith, Seton and Beard, and some were original with himself.

Although the movement was started by Powell in England, and has proved successful not only there but in Germany, France and many other countries, it has been nowhere so successful as it has been in the United States of America. This is probably due to the broad expanse of open air, beautiful country, scenic woods and facilities for camping. In other words, the absence of the overcrowded and ultra-civilized conditions which have prevailed in a larger portion of thickly settled Europe. The movement was introduced into this country by Ernest Thompson Seton, the naturalist, whose genius was, in fact, responsible for its origin in England and its development by Powell. When Powell returned from the Boer War, armed with the literature which Seton had written for his Woodcraft Boys, Powell adopted Seton's principles in toto, adding to them, however, the color of patriotism, which Seton always has opposed bitterly.

Seton recently has separated himself from the movement, in fact, because various other influences interested in the promotion of the movement insist upon retaining the patriotic phase. The advocates of patriotism, however, insist that the patriotism engendered and taught is in no way synonymous with militarism. They insist that the love of country is yet, and will continue to be, necessary to the extent of fighting or even dying for its defence, until civilization has reached a far higher plane than it occupies to-day.

Rapid Growth Noted.

The movement is growing with tremendous and most gratifying rapidity.

October 1, 1915, there were 143,084 scouts in good standing in the United States, as compared with 91,978 the year before, a gain of 49,106. There were 6,540 scout masters, 5,822 assistant scout masters and 349 local councils. More than 38,621 badges of honor and accomplishment were issued, as compared with 26,198 of the year previous. New York heads the list of States with an enrolment of 15,513, according to the report dated February 5, 1915. Pennsylvania was next, with 12,823.

The movement is supported largely by private subscription, although recently a small fee of twenty-five cents for scouts and something more for masters has been charged for admission. The total receipts of the year 1914, which is the latest treasurer's report at hand, were $258,423.60. The expenditures of the year left a balance of $18,505.94 with which to begin the year 1915.

A campaign was recently waged in New York city by 400 prominent and interested business men to raise $250,000, with the hope of increasing the New York city membership from 6,000 to 30,000 boys. Even that seems an insufficient proportion of the approximately 600,000 boys of scout age who live in New York city. According to the federal census there are between 8,000,000 and 10,000,000 boys in the United States of scout age. What an incomprehensible force for good it would be if every one of these boys were enrolled and vitally interested in the Boy Scout movement!

I am surprised that millions instead of thousands of dollars are not sent forward for the advancement of the Boy Scouts. When I see accounts of the vast sums of money our people spend every day on misguided efforts, when so much is needed here for the most worthy of all causes, I appreciate their generous hearts but I pity their wasteful judgments.

Numerous charity organizations send out solicitors to gather up many thousands of dollars to buy holiday meals for the poor, not thinking that six hours later they will be just as hungry again. Money spent on the Boy Scouts will result in boys acquiring a resourcefulness that will make every one of them self-supporting. I am astonished that the people of New York, generous as they are, did not donate a million instead of $100,522.40 in the recent four days' campaign. It would be absolutely impossible for any one charitably inclined to spend money to better advantage or give to a more worthy cause.

What Men Think of Scouts.

This is what some of the greatest men in the nation have said about the Boy Scouts of America:—

"It is an admirable organization devoted to the objects that I myself thoroughly believe in. In the language of manufacture, character is a by-product. If you set out to develop it because you love it for yourself you will be an ass. If you disregard the consequences to yourself in order to serve other people you will make a noble gentleman. That is fundamental and sacred in an organization of this sort."—PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON.

"I believe the Scout movement to be one of the best agencies in existence for training and developing on right lines the boyhood and manhood of our country."—THE REV. WILLIAM T. MANNING.

"I regard the Boy Scout movement as one of the most valuable educational agencies of this generation. Give me one million Boy Scouts grown into manhood and I will fear neither foreign domination nor internal social disorder. We ought to have five million Boy Scouts in this country."—DEAN RUSSELL, Columbia University.

"I am most heartily in sympathy with the Boy Scout movement. You have found a motive and a training which will give boys a wholesome and noble tuition."—JOHN FINLEY, State Commissioner of Education.

"The Boy Scout movement will produce in boys resourcefulness, self-reliance, unselfishness and habits of clean and manly living. It deserves the hearty support of all men and women."—WILLIAM FELLOWS MORGAN, President New York Y. M. C. A.

"As evidence of the increasing indorsement of the Scout movement by Catholics, I quote the following from one of our Bishops:—'I am with and for the Boy Scouts of America. I think the Boy Scout movement is the best, most natural and most efficient step taken for the development of the character in the American boy that has come under my observation.'"—VICTOR RIDDER.

Belong in Field and Forest.

"The human race was born and developed in field and forest. It is dying in the cities. I approve of the Boy Scout programme in full. It brings to boyhood its full realization. It provides proper avenues of escape for effervescing vigor; it furnishes guide posts that point the way from the morally and physically fetid atmosphere of saloons and dives which trap boys into paths of moral laxity and dam leads boys up into strong manhood instead ing them down. To make strong, healthy minded men we should spend every effort the Boy Scout movement effective through whole United States."—DR. C. WARD CRA

"The Boy Scout movement is of peculiar tance to the whole country. It is a practical through which to impart a practical stan ethical conduct, fair play, consideration for courage and decency to boys who have not reached and who never will be reached by t nary type of play or clerical preaching. A B must have efficiency, he must have knowle must cultivate a sound body and a good m train himself so that he can act with quick in any crisis that may arise. Mind, eye, mu must be trained so that the boy can master and thereby master his fate."—THE ROOSEVELT.

The purpose of the Boy Scouts of America acter building and useful training. As nearly tell from the condensation of expressions of its leaders, its whole aim is to develop body, intelligence of mind and resourcefu both, to construct a moral stability of chara a full sense of duty in the matter of citizens popular impression that the Boy Scout mov military is entirely wrong. It is neither mili anti-military. The Executive Committee of tional Council has resolved as follows:—

"First—The Boy Scout movement neither nor discourages military training. Its one c the development of character and personal ef of adolescent boys.

"Second—The logical result of the Boy Sc gramme is as strong a factor as any other pro which the country now has for preparedn it develops the character of boys and assi in securing the proper conception of the citi sponsibility.

"Third—Boys who have been Scouts will of their training under the motto 'Be Prepare themselves more virile and efficient in an gency which calls for their services as citize country."

Mr. Roosevelt says:—"It does not try to soldiers of Boy Scouts, but to make boys who out as men to be fine citizens, and who will country needs them, make better soldiers fo been Scouts."

Soldier and Fun Incidental.

I understand definitely, therefore, that Scouts of America is not a military organiza I even suspected that it were I would opp bitterly as I now argue in favor of it. Fu edge of the facts, however, convinces me that ment exists neither for the purpose of ma diers nor for the purpose of furnishing s only. It so happens that in the Scout pr great variety of amusement is afforded, an happens that in the proper development of a a citizen and a man the best fighter in the w result, but both the soldier and the fun are in

There are three ways in which the Scout m exerts an uplifting influence upon the boy always toward his development into an h and a most desirable citizen. The first of th the Scout oath or promise, which is:—

"1.—On my honor I will do my best to duty to God and my country and to ob Scout Law.

"2.—To help other people at all times.

"3.—To keep myself physically strong tally awake and morally straight."

No living being can read that triple promi it, think it and accept it without being ex efited. The duty to God is vague and deser nation, but it is left open to the boy to ga planation from any source which he may The absence of any specific explanation her that the movement is non-sectarian. Whether medan or Christian, or whether Catholic, P or Jew, the boy has an indefeasible right to own religious convictions, and he is trained t furthermore, the convictions of others.

The duty to country embraces their ne patriotism, by which they mean love it, pr and improve it; as Dr. Crampton says, "m better place to live in."

The helping of others at all times is, as C Eliot says, "the doctrine which forms the cor tion of the democratic order." That altruis fountain from which democracy originate is the feeling which promotes humanity an Helping others makes others happy and refl piness and benefit upon ourselves. There is in which one can better help himself than by others.

To keep one's self physically strong, m awake and morally straight is a timely i tion in the twentieth century.

Improvement of All Men.

If the men who are citizens to-day had b Scouts in their youth and had learned to k promise, what a difference it would make i ords of morbidity and crime! By far the c cause of all deaths to-day in this country is ure to keep that promise—that is, the failu scientiously attend to one's physical hea alacrity and moral rectitude. These three t intimately associated and to a very larg interdependent. People do not generally t worth while to keep themselves physically e mentally awake; therefore they though sometimes wilfully eat and drink and s much and exercise too little. The accum body poisons causes a decline in both ph moral strength, and mind, being a function is made stupid by the same cause. Both bo and the will become weak; therefore sick crime result.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Barrington's Convert

The Effort Was Discouraging, but Succeeded at Last

By JOHN V. LARNED

Bob Barrington was one of those youngsters who are dead set against a humdrum life. Bob's father, when the boy was fifteen years of age, secured him a position in a friend's counting room, but the friend soon told Mr. Barrington that Bob was not fitted for a commercial life.

"What's the trouble?" asked the parent.

"Well, the life's too cramped. What we want are young fellows for cogwheels. They should go through the same routine every day; never ask questions or make suggestions, but do what they are told to do and no more. If they see anything that looks to them a bit—well, shrewd, they're not to flare up and call it dishonest. Our business is a machine, and every part must fit into every other part."

"I see," said Mr. Barrington. "Bob is not in your line."

Bob was withdrawn and asked what he wished to do. He said he thought he would like to get a breath of fresh air, which, being explained, meant that he would like to go where natural instincts had a fuller play. To state the case more definitely, he proposed to go west and be a cowboy. His father, thinking that if his son had some experience in herding sheep during a blizzard he would be glad to come home and go to work in a civilized way, consented. Bob was well outfitted, being given a thousand dollars, which he was told must last him a year. He told his father that he didn't want any more than enough to take him to his destination and he wouldn't call on him for any more. So he handed back all but $200 and started on his journey.

The new life suited him exactly. He made a cowboy of himself for awhile, but, having displayed considerable nerve in several frecases, he was elected sheriff, at which calling he made a success.

One of his exploits during his term of office was the hunting down of a notorious desperado named Donohue. The outlaw came into the region over which Sheriff Barrington had jurisdiction and commenced a series of robberies that terrorized every one. Barrington made it his business to capture the man without killing him. Not that such a kindly act was obligatory on him. Indeed, his constituents would have much preferred that Donohue should be taken dead, for, in that case, the territory would be spared the expense of a trial. The truth was, Barrington never quite succeeded in eradicating civilization from his system and felt a repugnance against making an executioner of himself.

One day the sheriff was missed, and nothing was heard of him till one day he reappeared, with Mr. Donohue in a wagon, bound hand and foot. A meeting of citizens was called and, after a vote of thanks to Sheriff Barrington, decreed that a committee be appointed to hang the prisoner. Bob claimed the captive as his own and insisted that he be turned over to a court for trial. This excited much opposition, on the ground that there was no evidence that Donohue had murdered any one. Consequently he could never be hanged.

However, it could not be denied that the prisoner belonged to Barrington, and, since he would not consent to the hanging, the man must be sent to a place where there was a court. Here, too, Barrington stood in the way of justice. Certain persons who knew of murders committed by the accused of which there were no eyewitnesses kindly consented to perjure themselves that a proper punishment might be inflicted. The sheriff would not consent to this, and when the judge proposed to give the convict all the imprisonment the law allowed Barrington stood out for two years. The judge, being a stanch supporter of the sheriff, acceded to his wishes.

One would suppose that saving a man's life and cutting down a term of ten years at hard labor to two would touch the heart of the subject of this magnanimity. Instead, when Donohue was taken away to serve his term he said:

"Sheriff, ef ye hadn't sneaked up on me and got the drop when I wasn't lookin' for you you wouldn't 'a' got me. Howsomever, I'll git out o' jail in two years from this yere present time, and it'll be you as'll have to look out fur me."

"Thank you kindly for mentioning your benevolent intentions," replied Bob. "I'll try and be in a position to congratulate you on having attained your freedom and keep from getting bored at the same time."

When Bob had been in the west a year his father asked him if he didn't wish to return and take up civilization again. Bob wrote that there was too much of a mixture between the good and the bad in civilization; he preferred the two separate, as they were in the west. The better class of people in the west made no pretense to culture, but they treated one another like Christians. When a man was bad he was bad all over and didn't pretend to be anything else. The consequence was that there was no mistaking either the good or the bad.

When Donohue had served some eighteen months of his term Bob's mother wrote her son that his father was ill and begged him to come home. Bob sighed, tumbled into the fine clothes he had worn when he reached the west and started for home. He had not worn a boiled shirt for a long time and felt in one now as if he were being garroted. He found his father in very bad health, and his continued presence at home was necessary. He therefore yielded to his parents' request and determined to remain with them.

When Donohue was released to recommence his praying upon the world the first person he proposed to pray upon was ex-Sheriff Barrington. Bob during the administration of the duties of his office had received a great many threats, none of which had materialized. When the two years of Donohue's term had rolled around Bob had forgotten all about it. Besides, he had left his old stamping ground and did not conceive it possible that a desperado in the west would take the trouble or have the means to travel a couple of thousand miles to hunt him up.

Donohue was a man with considerable pride, which had it not been misdirected might have been of advantage to him. He had made a statement at the time of his conviction and he proposed to carry it out at any cost. He had not been out of jail long when he had accumulated sufficient valuables and cash to pay his expenses east, and having obtained Barrington's address set out to find him and take his threatened revenge.

On reaching the city of his destination he realized that he would not have the same advantages in killing a man as in the west. It was possible there to do the deed, light out, seek other fields, and there was a chance of never being called to account for his crime. Not so in a city. To start gun play on a street would be to collect a crowd, followed by an officer, and there was no chance of escape except by the law's delays, and even then funds were required for the purpose. These imperfections in legal justice did not make it less desirable for honest persons than the code of the revolver or Judge Lynch.

Donohue therefore decided to steel up on his enemy as his enemy had stolen up on him. But this was not so easy in civilization as in a new country. Bolts separated him from the man he wanted, and he was not used to this way of getting at a man. However, he saw no other way and resolved to effect an entrance into Barrington's home at night and do the job there when Bob was asleep.

When Barrington had returned to his home he had tossed his revolver into a bureau drawer, and there it remained. One night Bob awoke suddenly. He did not know what it was that awakened him. During his term of service as sheriff, when he had many enemies, he had been a light sleeper, and the slightest sound would rouse him. Believing now that there was some cause for his broken sleep he listened and soon heard what turned out to be the raising of a sash on the main floor with a jimmy. Springing out of bed he seized an electric light he kept in his room and remembering the revolver in the drawer took it in his other hand. It had not been reloaded since his homecoming.

Going out into the hall he heard a sound as of some one lighting on a floor after getting in a window. Stepping in his stocking feet down the stairway he went into the living room and ensconced himself behind the door. His position was admirable. He could shoot through the crack made by the door and the wall. He had not been there long before by the dim light coming from the street lamps without he saw a figure coming through the hall. When it was about to turn to go upstairs Bob flashed his electric light with his left hand, while with his right he thrust the muzzle of his revolver through the crack of the door.

"Hello, Donohue!" he said. "Is that you? Hands up! Quick, or I'll fire!"

Donohue, blinded by the bright light, was completely at his enemy's mercy. He raised both hands at once. In his right hand was a revolver.

"Put your weapon on the stairs," said Bob. "Be quick about it, but don't make a noise."

Donohue had no choice but to do as he was told. He laid his revolver on a stair above on his head.

"Now back away from it. That'll do. Stay where you are till I come."

Leaving his fortification, Bob went into the hall and drove his man into the dining room. There he turned on a light.

"I saved your life," he said, "and cut your time down to two years. This is your gratitude. I'm going to give you what you deserve. It won't be less than ten years."

The man looked the picture of despair. Ten more years in stripes! The prospect was too much for him.

"I'd rather have you settle me with a little lead!" he groaned. "You might at least give me credit for sayin' that I was goin' to do it."

"That's something in your favor, and you have shown a perseverance in following me up which if exerted in a better cause would have brought you comfort. Have you ever been married?"

"Yes; to a woman I don't deserve. She left me long ago, takin' the kids with her."

Donohue's voice trembled.

"Suppose I help you to retrieve your past."

"You couldn't do that."

"I can, with your help."

An hour later a plan was arranged by which Donohue should start afresh. He made good, with Barrington's assistance, and a time came when he was reunited to his wife and children.

He and they worship the ground Bob Barrington treads.

Suffered Constantly FROM HEADACHE.

To suffer from headache makes life miserable, and it takes a person who has been or is subject to headache to describe the suffering and agony that goes along with it. The dull throbbing, the intense pain, sometimes in one part of the head, sometimes in another, is caused by some disturbed condition of the system. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but whatever the cause, the presence of headache clearly shows that there is something wrong somewhere, and unless the cause of the headache is removed, some serious trouble is very liable to assert itself.

The fact that Burdock Blood Bitters reaches the root of the trouble, and banishes the headache is due to its success in first relieving, and then permanently curing the cause of the trouble.

Mrs. Wallace J. Boyd, Milltown, N.B., writes: "Several years ago I was a constant sufferer from headache. I was all run down, and nothing seemed to do me any good. I read of Burdock Blood Bitters, and decided to give it a trial, and the result was marvellous. The headache stopped at once, and I feel better in every way since. I recommend it to all sufferers."

B.B.B. is the oldest and best known blood medicine on the market to-day, having been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ABOUT THE HOUSE

Little Romances That Are Linked With Its Furnishings.

EVOLUTION OF THE CHAIR

The Leisurely Progress From the Three Legged Stool to the Luxurious Rocker—Origin of the Table Drawer—The First Picture Frames.

If you only knew it, queer little romances are peeping out at you all over your house, from attic to cellar. They are well worth looking for.

Framed pictures had to have a beginning. They date back to about 300 years ago, when peaceful monks painted the walls of their living rooms with Scriptural subjects. Then one day some one conceived the bright idea of nailing wood around these frescoes so as to separate the subjects. A little later came gilding—and the evolution of the modern picture frame was simply a matter of time.

The drawing room is a perfect mine of history. As most people know, this is, strictly, the "withdrawing room," to which one withdraws after dinner, as the name implies.

The antimacassars over the backs of the chairs similarly carry their object in life in their name. These more or less artistic things had their beginnings some 150 years ago, when every one used macassar oil for the hair. The mistress of the household then would no more permit greasy polls to spoil her fine chairs than would the modern mistress. And, lo, the antimacassar!

Of chairs themselves, perhaps the most interesting feature is the familiar crossbar—technically known as the stretcher—which joins the front legs. Nowadays its purpose is usually for ornamentation, sometimes strength, though often it is absent altogether.

It harks back to the days of the first chairs, when knights and dames wanted to keep their feet off the cold, drafty, rush littered floors; hence the stretcher. Originally the stretcher was only a few inches above the ground, but when, later on, rugs and carpets came into more general use and rooms became more comfortable, the stretcher gradually lost its importance.

It is curious to note that the easy armchair was the last stage of all. Cushions and padding were the first additions to the plain chair. Then came painted chairs and afterward carved legs, and finally—a leisurely last—came backs and arms and with them the luxurious rocker.

In point of fact the chair is easily the most important piece of furniture you have, historically speaking. To this day, "taking the chair" denotes taking the head of affairs, reminiscent of the time when there was only one chair in a room, three legged stools at the most being provided for less important folk.

Window curtains, again, have their little romance. Originally all windows were in the roof, but in time came open windows in the wall. In the middle ages some one brought from China the idea of using cloth to cover the windows, and there is the origin of your curtains, with its frills and loops.

The glass chandelier, if you have one—they are out of fashion now—can be put down to the workmen refugees from France driven from their homes by Louis XIV. by the revocation of the edict of Nantes in 1685.

Even the drawer in the kitchen table—any table drawer, for the matter of that—had to be thought of, but nobody did manage to think of fixing a drawer to a table until some inveterate card player—his name is forgotten—wanted a handy place for the cards when they were not in use. The very thing! And table drawers were invented.

"Kitchen," by the way, is derived from an Anglo-Saxon word meaning "to cook," while "scullery"—which positively has nothing to do with "scullion"—comes from a word meaning "a bowl."

Some of your furniture may well have an English political bias! It certainly is so if it bears that familiar design based upon the Prince of Wales' feathers. Hepplewhite, the famous furniture designer, began it. In his time there was a strong Tory party supporting George III., while the Whig party was headed by the Prince of Wales. Hepplewhite was an ardent Whig and accordingly introduced Prince of Wales' feathers into his furniture designs on every possible occasion. Incidentally the sofa is an importation from the easy loving Arabs, whose "sofuh" was a long bench outside the house.

And, finally, "hall" simply means a place which is covered in, and the word comes from exactly the same root as the informal regional — Philadelphia Ledger.

A Different Fish Story.

J. Clarence Harvey, the Lambs club wit, is telling this story about elimination: The proprietor of a fish store had a new sign: "Fresh Fish For Sale Here." "Why say 'here?'" said the first customer. "It's unnecessary." He painted "here" out. Said the second customer: "Why 'for sale?' Of course they're for sale." He painted out two words more. "Why 'fresh?'" said a third customer. "You wouldn't sell them if they weren't fresh, would you?" At last the sign read just "Fish." Along came a fourth customer. "What's the use of having that sign," he asked, "when you can smell them a block away?"

The Following Story Unfolds the Secret of the Famous Point 7

To most people chewing gum is a mystery. They may know that different chewing gums are made from different ingredients. But that is about all. Here are facts which we believe you will be glad to know about Sterling Gum:

Your Sterling Gum is made from the following materials:

The basis is the pure sap of the tropical Sapota Tree—a natural gum.

This natural Sapota Tree sap is boiled, sweetened and flavored. The sweetening is simply pure cane sugar and pure corn syrup.

The flavoring is of two kinds—Peppermint (in red wrappers), Cinnamon (in blue wrappers).

There are some twenty varieties of the mint plant. The Sterling Peppermint is a product of the choicest, smoothest-flavored of these many mint varieties.

The spicy Cinnamon flavor is extracted from the Cassia bush which grows in the tropics.

The sap of the Sapota Tree, the cane sugar, the corn syrup, the Peppermint and Cinnamon flavors all come from the sap of some plant or tree. Nature herself supplies these delicious materials from which your Sterling Gum is made.

ANNA CASE
The Miracle Girl

IN New York there are two phrases always used in conjunction in describing Anna Case: "A wonderful voice and a raving beauty." She is of surpassing physical charm—and she has a voice—such a voice, fresh and silvery; a soft caress, and yet youth's virileness in every note.

Hear Anna Case

on concert tour or at the Metropolitan in New York. Miss no chance to hear this miraculously endowed American girl. The story of her life reads like a romance. She is the miracle girl of music.

It was Anna Case who first sang in comparison with Edison's Re-Creation of her voice to test his new art—to determine whether the Wizard had in fact achieved his ambition to Re-Create the human voice so perfectly that a singer's performance could not be distinguished from his record of it. Anna Case was the first to prove this to the world. Today over one hundred thousand of the most critical and cultured music lovers in America have heard similar tests. The musical critics of more than one hundred of the leading newspapers in this country have confessed that their trained ears cannot distinguish, by actual and direct comparison, an artist's performance from Edison's Re-Creation of it. Booklet of critiques will be furnished on application.

Forget the various trade names of the various talking machines. All talking machines are now like last year's fashions. Edison has developed a new art in music. It can be heard only in his new invention, the New Edison Diamond Disc Phonograph. If anyone claims to have a talking machine that equals the New Edison, ask them if it has ever been publicly tested in direct comparison with living artists, and if so, where—and ask them also to let you see what the newspapers had to say about the test.

HELP THEM UP.

As life's steep thorny path we tread,
With perils girt on every side,
If heedless from the guarded track
A fellow traveller's foot should slide.

Ere far he sink beyond our aid,
In the abyss, that yawning lies,
Let us not fear our robes to soil,
But kindly stoop and help him rise.

Dare we with callous soul unmoved,
Coldly aloof, self righteous, stand,
And see him perish, or in scorn,
Pass by, nor lend a helping hand.

We who have kept the straight highway,
By heaven's sustaining grace alone,
Condemn him to the leper's fate,
Or smite him with a cruel stone.

Gloating upon the blighted fame,
And ruined prospects, that portend,
One with the ruthless, ravenous pack,
That turns a fallen mate to rend.

He might be, venturesome and rash,
Misguided, weak and wilful, yet,
Could we have travelled scathless through
Temptations, that his course beset.

For the Great Father, wise and just,
Has formed us of the self same clay,
With feeble wills, and passions prone,
From virtue's narrow track to stray.

Shall we, from thrice ten thousand debts
Freely absolved, by mercy true,
Sternly exact the paltry mite,
To us from fellow servant due?

Nay, rather, to the erring give
A helping hand, when ere we may,
And guide the home-sick wanderers back
To wisdom's safe and pleasant way.

Let charity, that thinks no ill,
—Enfold them in her mantle wide,
Enough from the world's bitter scorn,
Their follies and mistakes to hide.

As to Himself the Master counts
The least sweet pity shown to them,
And bright each rescued soul will star
Our everlasting diadem.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time mixtures of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even colour, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

The Wrong Number Again.

Governor Chambers, of the Toronto Coal, had an amusing telephone conversation recently that illustrates how little one may appreciate to whom he is speaking sometimes. The Governor was sitting in his office when the bell rang. He was surprised to hear the greeting: "Howdy, Guv'nor, is Dot there?" "Dot? Dot?" he replied, "I don't know any Dot." "Ah, swan, quit yer kiddin'. Dot Dawson. You know. Ain't she there now?" came back the answer. "Well, I'm sure I don't know," said the doctor, "I'll go and look her up," and he kindly went to the records and made a careful search. "No, I don't find her name here," he advised his interrogator. "I don't think she has been here for some time." For goodness' sake, is that Mr. Blands house," came the query. "No-o-o, this is the coal," said the Governor, and the sudden "bing" of the receiver at the other end announced the lady's impatience at being given the wrong exchange.

The Well-Known Emotion.

Love was under discussion, and the time old "When is a man in love?" question came up. "A man is in love," said one, "when it gives him physical pain to tear up the slightest of her notes." "When"—but it would be violating confidences to tell other answers. One only, the best, we begged leave to print. "A man isn't really in love," said this romantically astute old gentleman, "until he begins to skip the descriptions of heroines in novels he reads, saying, 'What's the use of reading that? I'll have her looking like Her and talking like Her anyway'."

One might almost do an Elizabethan poem on that.

The Gem of the Collection.

Baron X. had been going over the museum of a little country town, and when about to leave he asked the curator if there was anything more to be seen.

"Yes, baron," was the reply; "there remains a little casket."

"No doubt used as a deposit for the jewelry of some eminent personage?" inquired the baron.

"No, sir; that is where I put the tips given to me by visitors to the museum."

National Preparedness does not come from guns and dreadnoughts alone, but from men who are fit for the day's work. The making of men is a question of food and rational exercise. You can't build stalwart men out of an unbalanced "ration." Shredded Wheat Biscuit contains all the material needed for building the perfect human body. It is the whole wheat grain made digestible by steam-cooking, shredding and baking. One or more Shredded Wheat Biscuits for breakfast with milk or cream makes a man fit for work or play. It is ready-cooked and ready-to-serve.

BREATHES LIFE INTO BABY.

HAVERHILL, Mass., April 5. — A baby girl, born apparently dead, to Mrs. Antonio Schavoni, was revived 20 minutes later, according to a statement made by Dr. A. J. Grandmaison, the attending physician.

Use of a stethoscope failed to show a sign of life when the baby was born but Dr. Grandmaison breather into the child's mouth constantly for twenty minutes. Then the infant gasped. A pulmotor was sent for and renewed efforts were made by the physician. At the end of 20 minutes the baby was breathing normally. The child showed ability to use her lungs as she demanded sustenance.

ENGLAND PREPARES TO REPEL INVASION

New Type Disappearing Guns Vanish Under the Water—All Shore Leave is Suspended.

NEW YORK, April 5.—According to a passenger who arrived here from London the Admiralty believes that Germany may attempt to invade England in the next few weeks, and has made all preparations to give the enemy a warm reception.

The southeast and east coasts are protected for miles inland by trenches which are filled with troops every night. A fleet of 100 naval aeroplanes make flights out over the North Sea day and night to get the first sight of any of the German scout ships approaching from Heligoland. Powerful searchlights have been placed all along the coast, which will light the surface of the water as by day in case of attack.

"By courtesy of the Admiralty," the passenger said yesterday, "I was taken on to a base along the east coast, where there was a fleet of light cruisers assembled, which are of the latest type and superior to the Arethusa class. They are armed with three six-inch, as well as smaller quick-firing and machine guns, and have a speed of thirty-five knots. Except the new type of destroyers, which can make forty knots, these cruisers are the fastest war vessels in the world. I saw a flotilla of the new destroyers and also a flotilla of the latest type of submarines in the British Navy, which was accompanied by two mother ships.

"The naval commander who accompanied me on my tour explained a new type of disappearing big guns which suddenly rise from the water, fire a round and then sink beneath the waves without leaving any trace behind them, the submerged torpedo tubes at various points along the coast, and other specimens, of what he termed 'frightfulness,' which were waiting to welcome any invader on the shores of ancient Albion. These preparations are exclusive of the permanent land forts which have been equipped with the big naval guns having a range of twenty-three to twenty-five miles.

"The battleship fleets are stationed ready for action at three bases adjacent to the North Sea. The first fleet which includes the battle cruisers and swiftest battleships, is within twelve hours steam of the strategic centre in the North Sea, and the other fleets can reach that position within fifteen and eighteen hours respectively. The commander also informed me that some of the latest superdreadnoughts had been equipped with heavy guns, which would astonish the world by their powers of destruction when they get into action.

"The officers and men of the fleets get shore leave every three months to see their families, and are all well trained and in the best physical condition and eager for the fray. All leave was stopped at the garrison along the east coast when I left England, and the leave was also stopped on the warships until further orders had been received from the Admiralty, as it was expected the German fleet intended to make a dash across the North Sea some dark night and fire a few shells at the coast towns.

"An official at the Admiralty informed me that the only difference observed by merchantmen of the allied countries since they mounted guns on deck was that the German submarine commanders let them severely alone. All the unarmed steamers and sailing vessels have been torpedoed without warning. The Admiralty is doing all in its power to check renewed submarine activity in the English Channel and Irish Sea, but there is a leakage somewhere in the system of patrol and net trawling which enables the Germans to get through. Quite recently they have succeeded in sinking vessels off Dover, Folkestone, Havre, the east coast of England, and the southwest coast of Ireland.

"I was detained twelve hours at Havre waiting for the port to be opened and saw three transports arrive with 10,000 British infantry and cavalry on board and four supply ships with stores which were all convoyed over by destroyers from Southampton and Portsmouth. One of the stone piers at Havre is devoted to Red Cross work, and as the trains arrive from the war zone the wounded are carried upon the stretchers right aboard the big hospital ships which leave daily for England.

"The auxiliary cruiser Alcantara was torpedoed by the German raider Greif on Feb. 29 in the North Sea near Hull, before she could fire a shot, through the recklessness of Captain C. T. Wardle, who was in command. When the suspicious-looking Norwegian tramp steamer was sighted Captain Wardle ordered a shot to be fired across her bow as a signal to stop, which was obeyed. Instead of going up and taking a position astern of the suspected vessel the Alcantara went close alongside and lowered a boat with a naval officer in command to inspect the papers and see that all was in order.

"As the boat was being pulled toward the accommodation ladder, two torpedoes were fired, which struck the Alcantara and caused her to sink in a few minutes. Her sister ship, the Andes, was fortunately in sight at the time, and steamed up at seventeen knots, firing rapidly at the Greif with her six-inch guns. The aim of her gunners was so accurate that the German raider sank in ten minutes without being able to damage the Andes with her guns except that shots struck the superstructure. The boats rescued 120 of the crew of the Greif, which numbered about 300, and 130 of the officers and men of the Alcantara, which lost five officers and sixty-nine men.

"After the action the Andes steamed slowly down the coast around England to Bifkenhead, where she arrived late on Saturday, March 4, and landed the survivors, wounded, and the German prisoners on Sunday morning, March 5. Repairs were made and with the aid of plenty of paint it was difficult for any one to notice that the Andes had been in action when she went into dock. The news was suppressed by the Admiralty for several days, and, although rumours of the fight were current in Liverpool, emanating from the crew, nothing appeared in the newspapers.

With regard to the Zeppelins the passenger explained that the naval air squadrons along the east coast went up and attacked the German aerial raiders directly they appeared in sight from the North Sea, and in many cases drove them back, which was not made public by the Naval Intelligence Department at the Admiralty. "In the raid over the southeastern counties just before I sailed for New York," he said, "three British aeroplanes were wrecked and two of the best pilots were killed through making a landing in the dark, which is very dangerous and is dreaded by the most skillful airmen."

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N. B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

There is one little thing that a lot of people will never have to pay and that is an income tax.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

This charming dress has, in the shoulder edge of each front, two backward turning plaits that take an inward line in their course to the waist. The blouse—as full as fashion allows—has a V neck finishing with a collar in contrasting goods for an overlay. When the long sleeve is used it is made to fit the arm from the elbow to the wrist, where it finishes without a cuff and with the slightest outward flare. Closing is down centre front. A separate belt conceals the joining of the waist to the three gored skirt that is fitted with a novelty patch pocket that is of a size to suggest a side or divided yoke style. Trimming the dress from neck to hem we have the buttons that will not be outdone for "popularity." If the garment is built upon a raised waist line no belt is required and short length sleeves may be adorned with a cuff in contrasting goods. So, because many small things make a great, we have as a result of the pretty and complete arrangement of details a dress with lines in distinct tune with all that is crisp, dainty and fashionable.

The pattern, No. 7,687, is cut in sizes 36-44 inches bust measure. For size 38 one will need 4¾ yards 36 inch material and ¼ yard contrasting material. This will give a width of 2¾ yards to the lower edge.

To obtain the pattern it is only necessary that you send to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Rids Poisons From the Blood Clears Up the Complexion

Sallow Skin, Pimples, Pains and Aches Are Soon Gone When Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Are Used

The doctor feels your pulse and looks at your tongue; but at the same time he is reading your condition in your face. The sallow complexion tells him that your liver is not doing its work, the pimples tell him that the kidneys are not properly purifying the blood, he realizes that the bowels are constipated and the system overloaded with poisons.

You can apply this test in your own case and may be able to add other symptoms, such as headaches, pains and aches through back and limbs, spells of biliousness and indigestion.

If you have not used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you will be surprised to find how quickly they will rid your system of poisonous impurities and thereby remove the cause of pains, aches and skin troubles.

Mrs. F. N. Hall, 103 Queen street, St. John, N.B., writes: "I am glad to say I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with splendid results. I was greatly troubled with constipation and pimples on the face. I tried other remedies and used liquid arsenic three times a day for a year to get rid of the pimples but received no benefit. I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and it was not very long before I was completely cured. The pills acted on the bowels, kidneys and liver and cleansed them of all impure matter. I think they cannot be beaten as a means of ridding a person of that tired aching due to weak kidneys, and I would not be without them in the house for any money."

Germans' Desperate Attack At Bethincourt

HOT FIGHTING ALONG THE BRITISH FRONT

Foe Trying Hard To Crush In The Bethincourt Salient

German Onslaught Shifted to Southeastern Side But French Counter Attack Ejected Them From Nearly All Their Newly Acquired Positions---French Make More Progress Near Fort Douaumont.

VIOLENT ARTILLERY DUEL IN WOETRE REGION

PARIS, April 7.—(French Official Communique).—The Germans launched heavy attacks against the Bethincourt salient last night after violent artillery preparation, the War Office announced this afternoon. In an attempt to crush in the south-eastern side of the salient the Germans penetrated the French trenches on the Bethincourt-Chattincourt road. They were immediately ejected by a French counter attack from all but three hundred yards of newly captured positions. Unable to make further progress in the Haraucourt region, because of a terrific curtain of fire from the French dominating positions on the heights, the Germans shifted their attack to the south-eastern side of the Bethincourt wedge. The German onslaught reached its greatest fury between Bethincourt and Hill 295. The Germans drove forward in an attempt to reach the Bethincourt-Esnes road leading south from Bethincourt, and thus cutting off the French retreat from the Bethincourt salient. Despite the fury of their attack, they only succeeded in taking the front line trenches at a point a mile east of this road. On the east bank of the Meuse, an intermittent bombardment continued last night. The French made further progress in the enemy communication trenches south-west of Fort Douaumont, where a substantial gain was reported last night. Artillery duels became violent in the Woevre region last night.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE GALICIAN VILLAGE

Russian Troops Are Also Advancing on the Black Sea Port of Trebizond From Both the East and West—Turkish Steamer Sunk by a Slav Submarine

Examiner Special:

PETROGRAD, April 7.—The capture of the Galician village of Svetlavtze, near Tarnopel, was reported officially to-day, with forty-two land mines and much other booty.

Austrian attempts to retake the village were repulsed.

Russian troops are now advancing on the Turkish Black Sea port of Trebizond, from both the east and south.

In a Black Sea naval fight, Russian submarines sank a Turkish steamer being convoyed by a torpedo boat and eleven sailing ships laden with coal.

A Russian battleship bombarded at long range the former German cruiser Breslau, which fled.

HOT FIGHTING ON THE BRITISH FRONT

Canadian Regiments Reported to Be in the Thick of the Fighting at St. Eloi—French Position at Bethincourt is Being Heavily Bombarded

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 7.—Hot fighting is going on along the British front at St. Eloi. The Germans are attacking in large force. The Canadian regiments, it is unofficially reported, are in the thick of the fighting at this point. The French position at Bethincourt, greatly imperilled by the surrender of Haucourt to the Germans, was under a terrific bombardment all day yesterday, according to Paris reports to-day.

The Germans apparently were preparing to concentrate in a heavy smash against this salient as the next move in their new drive north-west of Verdun.

Though it is becoming increasingly more probable that the French may be thrown back upon the town of Esnes, seven and one-half miles north-west of Verdun, no alarm is felt here over the situation at Verdun.

PEACE NO NEARER IS BRITISH OPINION

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 7.—Peace is no nearer in war torn Europe as the result of the German Chancellor's Reichstag speech on Wednesday. Every British official interviewed to-day scoffed at the idea that the Allies might agree to end the war on the terms stated by Germany. For the most part they saw little prospect that the war might end "by autumn." The Germans have modified their peace demands for two reasons, officials here declared. One is the Crown Prince's failure to take Verdun. The other is the increasing seriousness of the food problem in the Central Empires. Whatever the peace movement may have gained through the withdrawal of the demand for indemnities was wholly lost in the Chancellor's statement that none of the territory now held by the Austro-Germans will be returned to the Czar. The fate of Poland, Volhynia and the Baltic provinces hold the same interest for the Allies as does that of Northern France and Belgium, it was stated.

CONVINCED TORPEDO DID THE TRICK

Special to the Examiner.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The United States Government is absolutely convinced a German torpedo struck the Channel packet Sussex, and the administration does not purpose to wait longer for Germany's explanation.

PROHIBITION TO GO IN FORCE ON 16TH OF SEPT.

Hon. W. J. Hanna Makes Announcement in the Legislature—Referendum Probably Three Years After

GIVE SOLDIERS A CHANCE

TORONTO, April 7.—Prohibition will be effective in Ontario after Saturday, the 16th of September, and will remain in effect until probably the first Monday in June, 1919, three years hence, when its continuance will depend upon the wishes of the electors of the province expressed through a referendum.

This was Hon. W. J. Hanna's announcement made in the Legislature last night when the House in committee got to the closing sections of the Ontario Temperance Act. The announcement that the Government had decided to allow license-holders until the middle of September to clear up their stocks brought from N. W. Rowell, K.C., an expression of regret that it had not been thought fit to make the extension much shorter. The whole Act was so important and so far-reaching, however, that he would not attempt to mar the good feeling in the matter by dividing the House.

"With the time given the license-holders should receive this in the spirit the House gives it and feel that they have received fair treatment," he said.

In referring to the referendum, Hon. Mr. Hanna stated that it could not fairly be taken until a considerable time after the war. By leaving it until 1919 all the soldiers would be back from the front and would have had ample time to get on the lists and the Act would have had a fair trial. Then if the people wanted to repeal it they could do so. They would be able to vote upon it intelligently. The Minister was not certain whether the terms of the referendum would be to continue prohibition or to repeal it. That would be decided by the law officers.

Hon. Mr. Hanna said that a clause would be introduced repealing the Ontario License Act in the meantime. Hestated also that the Government felt that if the province went back to the present order of things as a result of the referendum then those people who have licenses now should have first call in the distribution of any licenses that might be issued. The return to present conditions would not, he said, affect local option districts, which would again come under the by-laws.

Distribution of Liquors.

But for half a dozen or so sections, about which the Government has not definitely determined what it intends to do, the Ontario Temperance Act is ready for third reading. The bill was before the House yesterday afternoon and evening and excellent progress was made. The sections allowed to stand for further consideration are those that have generally been looked upon as the most likely to cause difficulties, among them being the provisions for placing in the hands of the wholesale druggists the distribution of liquor for scientific and mechanical purposes in addition to supplying retail druggists, the section dealing with the allowable strength in "temperance beer," the native wine clause and several others of lesser importance.

In explaining that the Government did not propose to dispose of the druggist clauses in a final way, Hon. Mr. Hanna explained that during the afternoon he had received a deputation representing the wholesale druggists. They had xepressed their very strong opposition to being shouldered with the residue of the liquor business, and suggested that they be permitted to operate as at present, supplying the druggists for medical purposes, and that the rest of the business, the sale of liquor for mechanical and scientific purposes, etc., be taken care of by one or two men with some knowledge of the business whose standing in the community and the trade would be some guaranty that the law would be fairly observed. Hon. Mr. Hanna stated that the wholesale druggists were prepared to go on if the Government did not see its way clear to changing the plan. The Minister said that the matter was still under consideration, and intimated that the suggestion might yet be adopted in some form.

SPECIAL MEETING TO-NIGHT

FIRST CASUALTY IN PETERBORO' CONTINGENT IN MOUNTED RIFLES

Pte. Jack Jones 238 1-2 Simcoe St., Reported Wounded ---93rd Battalion Not Likely to Camp Around Peterborough This Summer--Promotions Announced--To-day's Orders and General Military News.

News was received this morning of the first casualty as far as is known among the Peterborough members of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, when Mr. Robt. Jones, 238 1-2 Simcoe Street, foreman for Adam, Hall, received a telegram from the Adjutant-General's Department, Ottawa, informing him that his son, Pte. John Duncan Jones Mounted Rifles, is officially reported, admitted to No. 1 Canadian General Hospital at Etaples, France, on March 29th, suffering from a gunshot wound in the abdomen.

Pte. Jack Jones, who was born in Peterborough, and who is only about eighteen years of age, did not join B squadron of the 8th C.M.R., when that unt was being organized here, in the early part of 1915. When the second call for mounted men came during the training of the 8th C. M. R., at Barriefield, however, Pte. Jones, who was a member of the 57th Regiment, signed on and went overseas soon after with the 8th. He has been at the front for some time.

In the list of the officers and non-commissioned officers of the 93rd Batalion, who are leaving to-morrow night for Montreal, to take a special course, published in last evening's Examiner, the name of Corp. B. Carpenter was inadvertently omitted

The Machine Gun Section of the 93rd Battalion are organizing a baseball team.

The statement by Mayor Duffus at last night's recruiting meeting that he had done everything in his power to have a summer camp for soldiers established around Peterborough and had failed, is evidence that the 93rd Battalion will be leaving this city in the course of the next six weeks for a central training camp, probably Barriefield or less likely, Petawawa. The 93rd will soon be the senior battalion in this division, and it is not expected that its stay in camp, wherever it goes, will be long. Mid-summer should see the Peterborough Battalion in one of the Canadian training centres in England.

STIRRING SPEECHES AT THE RECRUITING MEETING

TRIBUTES TO LATE PRIVATE ROGERS FROM MEN OF 21ST

In Letters to His Mother—He Was Shot in the Breast While Working in Front of the Trenches—Buried in Cemetery

THE CHAPLAIN'S LETTER

Letters from his officers ad companions in the 21st Battalion have been received by Mrs. Jos. Rogers, Frank Street, mother of Private J. Hayward "Scottie" Rogers, who was killed in Belgium on March 16th.

The following is from the Catholic Chaplain of the 4th Brigade

Somewhere in Belgium,
March 20th, 1916.

Dear Mrs. Rodgers—While on duty on the night of March 16th, your son was shot through the breast and instantly killed. He simply said: "I'm shot' and it was all over. He was buried the following day, with those of his companions, in the military cemetery of Ridgewood, about a mile from the German lines. These, dear madam, are the crude and cruel facts.

I was up blessing his grave to-day and Col. Hughes, who was present, was very much moved. He told me that "Scotty" Rogers, as your son was called by the men, was one of his very best soldiers—cheerful, sober, willing, and always to be depended upon. It is not often you hear Commanding Officers speak of their men in this manner, and your son must have been an exceptionally good soldier to merit it.

But you, as a Catholic mother, will be more pleased to learn that your boy always fulfilled his duties to his God. He was a model boy, and set an example to his companions. I have known him, when very tired to walk over three miles to mass. His generosity in giving his life for his country and his constancy in practicing his religion have been rewarded. May he rest in peace. God has demanded this sacrifice of you, may He give you strength to bear it.

Sincerely Yours,

Capt. (Rev.) R. C. MacGillivray, C.F.
4th Brigade,
2nd Canadian Division,

Deflected Bullet.

Private A. Nicholls of the 21st Battalion, wrote as follows:

Just a short line expressing the deep sympathy of all the boys in your bereavement. I also thought you would like to know the full particulars about "Scottie's" death. We were out on a working party in a dangerous place. I think the Germans must have known we were out there for they turned a machine gun on us, but with no results. Well, a stray bullet hit a tree and glanced off on to "Scottie," hitting him in the breast. I did not hear the bullet hit him, but "Scottie" gave an exclamation and said "I'm hit." We could

UNUSUAL TRADE CONDITIONS

Compel Local Firm to Force a Stock Reduction at a Big Sacrifice

The peculiar conditions in the Men's clothing trade, are accountable for a most unusual opportunity for men and boys to secure a new stock of clothing at remarkably low prices, while the overstocked sale at Merrell and Meredith's is being carried on. The firm give as the reason for the necessity to unload the slowness of sale due to the hundreds of young men who have enlisted, not requiring to buy clothing. As they say in their ad. there are hundreds of men left who do not need cloths, and this is their opportunity Sale opens to-morrow and lasts till Easter

Remarkable price reductions in all lines, should certainly achieve the stock clearance that they feel compelled to force

Mr. S. R. Parsons, Vice-President of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Denounces Grafters and Those Who Abuse Their Trust--What Hinders Recruiting?

ADDRESS BY COL. WRIGHT

The visit to this city of Lieut.-Col. J. Wright, Officer Commanding the 169th Battalion, Toronto, and Mr. S. R. Parsons, Vice-President of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, culminated last evening in a recruiting meeting which was held in the armouries. An able address was made by Mr. Parsons while Col. Wright followed with a vigorous speech that was of special interest to men eligible for enlistment. The latter were conspicuous by their absence.

The band of the 93rd Battalion rendered a number of appropriate selections that were well received. The chair was taken by His Worship Mayor Duffus who, in opening the meeting, said that he had been informed by the military authorities of the 3rd Division that the 93rd Battalion was the third senior battalion and was only preceded by the 70th and 99th Battalion. "This city," said Mayor Duffus, "has sent away upwards of twenty-five hundred men and as soon as the present unit was completed, the work would continue until the struggle was at end. The 93rd battalion has now 980 men on the strength. Efforts have been made to secure a military summer camp for Peterborough, but unless orders were changed, the battalion would go elsewhere for training

Mr. S. R. Parsons.

Mr. S. R. Parsons, who was the first speaker, remarked that he had been credited together with Col. Wright, with having accomplished more in the way of recruiting than possibly any other two men in Canada. This honour, the speaker declined to share in. Mr. Parsons referred to a Mutt and Jeff cartoon in which one of the subjects was credited with saying, "Why should I lay down my life for the country when I live in the city?" This is an attitude too often assumed by people generally, said the speaker. If the war was to be brought to a speedy conclusion greater efforts would have to be made in the way of recruiting. We sometimes speak of the unity of the Empire and the grand old flag, but it will never save us unless we do our share. It is because we don't believe in the Kaiser's method of civilization that we are sending our men to the front.

A Man of Peace.

"I am a man of peace," said Mr. Parsons, "as you cannot carry an olive branch and a sword together. One will hide the other, and he who carries both is half hearted. We must be ready with men, money and everything we have, to throw ourselves into the conflict so that the heritage that has come down to us will remain unspoiled. Canada has sent out an order for 500,000 men. That is a large order. Sir George Foster has stated that this number represents thirty-eight per cent. of the male population of Canada between the ages of 19 and 41. Eliminating the foreign population would bring the requirement up to possibly fifty per cent, which means that every other man must enlist. Can we do it? I believe we can, said Mr. Parsons.

The Manufacturers.

Speaking from a manufacturers' standpoint, care must be taken so as not to impair the industrial efficiency of the country. The time has come to present this matter to the government. Three lists ought to be prepared classifying the men employed. The two leaders in the House of Commons have declared against conscription. The matter is going to be difficult. Politics may enter into it, but the

USES OF OPPOSITIONS.

The popular idea that the habitat of a parliamentary Opposition is in the "cold shades," indicates a failure to grasp the functions and usefulness of such a body. Of course the government party in parliament has all the "say" when decisive action is involved; but there is real, if indirectly exercised, power in an opposition. The opposition in the Dominion parliament has not the constitutional power to do one single administrative or legislative act. Yet has had power—the moral compulsion, in partnership with public opinion—to make the government partly do what it does not want to do. The government sets its face against facing investigation into the Allison-Shell-Committee graft. But the opposition persisted and aroused public opinion so thoroughly and menacingly that the government had to consent to a half hearted investigation—restricted to inquiry into 28 million dollars worth of steeling, but refusing inquiry into the alleged wrong-doing involved in respect of the other 275 millions of exploitation by the Shell Committee. If it had not been for the work of the Opposition at Ottawa, we should have been still living in a fool's paradise—fatuously fancying that we were getting honest value for the millions we were spending on war supplies, instead, as was the case as exposed by Opposition-incited investigation being robbed right and left.

In the Ontario Legislature the Opposition has been doing good work. Opposition initiative has advanced the interests of radial railways. An Opposition member time after time brought in resolutions, in its interests and though they were naturally voted down by the government supporters, the government afterwards adopted the principles involved as their own and acted upon them as they might not have done, or have done less promptly except for Opposition spurring. The prohibition measure Ontario virtually has to-day, is due to the Liberal Opposition. Mr. Rowell, Opposition leader, made it a broad plank in his platform and submitted it to the judgment of the electors. It was voted down for purely partisan reasons. But Mr. Rowell stuck to his guns; he offered the government his full cooperation and support in advanced temperance legislation. He has kept his word. Public opinion roused by his campaign, virtually forced the government to legislate in the direction and fact of prohibition. What the Opposition sought and worked for, at first, with small success, becomes, through its seeking and work, the law of the land. A resolution in the interests of bigger aid to agricultural interests was introduced into the Legislature Wednesday and though it was voted down, in the debate ensuing the seed was sown, with good promise of a future good crop—good farmers say that the earlier in April the seed can be sown the better the prospects for a good harvest. Though the resolution referred to may be regarded as so much wind—legislation on paper—it will have its effect. As in the case of the Opposition graft charges at Ottawa and radial railway and temperance resolutions in the Ontario Legislature, it will be a stimulus and a hint of the right way to the government, which after decent hesitation it may act upon, with the result of something better than the perfunctory and routine attention which has put and keeps agricultural interests worrying along in a rather deep rut—"scuffling" the surface when the need is deep ploughing.

"A CITIZEN SOLDIERY SPRINGING TO ARMS.

The United States Secretary of War called for 20,000 recruits, so as to bring the army up to the numerical standard fixed by law. In five days 387 recruits were obtained. Where are these million who were going to rush to arms the moment they knew they were wanted? — Victoria Colonist.

THE AUBURN MILLS CHARGE.

In these days of war supply scandals and charges — only too well proven—it is satisfactory to feel assured in respect of the charge against the Auburn Woollen Mills, that, for the credit of Peterborough and the reputation of one of its oldest and most important industrial establishments, in the words of the late Mr. Pope—"there ain't nothing to it." The result is, besides, a vindication of the business honour of one of our oldest citizens whose business methods have never been questioned, as has calmly been done in this case. The investigation is practically closed, that is it is understood that there will be no more evidence taken, the late sitting held here having been adjourned sine die.

Though technically the matter is still sub judice, it may be permitted to refer to the investigation. One cannot be certain what Sir Charles Davidson's finding will be; but to the layman who has followed the evidence, there doesn't seem to be much, if any, justification for the charge, brought by one George Grieves, a discharged employee of the mills, to the effect that the Auburn Woollen Mills had supplied, or were supplying, khaki frieze cloth for the Government, of a quality inferior to that required by the terms of the contract with the Government. The only apparent—and apparently only apparent—justification, is the fact that "shoddy" was used in the manufacture of the cloth. Even this is misleading; for the "shoddy" used was not the "shoddy" made from grinding up old, woollen rags; it was "wool stock," made of all wool serge clippings. It was brought out in evidence that this was the only kind of "shoddy"—as it is called by the mill employers—used in the manufacture, by the Auburn Mills, of government freize; and that, as testified, by Mr. George Baird, a 22-years' employee of the mills, khaki frieze or frieze of any other colour was practically never made without a proportion of "wool stock." It is also stated that frieze cloth made of all wool would be too stiff for wear without the admixture of "wool stock," to give it necessary flexibility. Though the proportions of the wool stock varied, according to the evidence, it averaged about 55 per cent. new wool and 45 per cent. wool stock, a proportion that is modified by the fact, given in evidence, that in the various processes of manufacture, from 25 to 35 per cent. of the "wool stock," and ten per cent. of the new wool is lost—become waste and do not, therefore, enter into the composition of the finished article.

The assumption that the proportion of "wool stock" used was proper is supported by the fact that the cloth made by the mills met the requirements of the specifications; it passed double government inspection—at the factory and at Ottawa; not one yard was rejected for any cause connected with any excessive proportion of "wool stock," or inferiority of quality. Out of some 280,000 yards manufactured for the Government, only 1,000 yards were not satisfactory; and they were refused because they lacked uniformity of shade, and not from any lack of wearing quality.

Mr. Kendrey, the president of the company, testified as to the ratio of the price paid and received to the cost of the goods; he said the price per yard was $1.85, and the cost of manufacture was $1.80, and that if new wool alone were used without a proportion of "wool stock," the manufacturing cost would be $2.70. He had, he testified, been furnishing cloths to the Government since 1896, and during that time very little had been rejected. No complaints regarding the quality of the cloth supplied under the present contract had been made by the Government.

One cannot judge how the quasi judicial mind of Sir Charles Davidson may appraise the evidence submitted to him in this case, or what his finding may be, but an unprejudiced consideration of the evidence by the lay mind pretty thoroughly justifies the conclusion, subject to his finding, that the charge made — that the Auburn Woollen Mills supplied cloth to the Government that did not fulfil the specifications—was not sustained, but substantially and effectively disproved. If this conclusion is correct the Auburn Woollen Mills case is the only case of "war graft" charges that have not been justified.

One cannot avoid being struck with the fact of the singularity of this charge. It was not, like the others, ventilated in Parliament and investigation demanded; it was put through very quietly at the assumed instance of a discharged employee, with what advice and help can only be assumed; and with the further remarkable fact that more prompt attention was given to his plaint than to the specific charges of responsible members of Parliament, made on the floor of the House in other cases.

DISCOVERY AND DEVELOPMENT OF THE ELECTRIC TELEPHONE

The discovery of the principle of the telephone is brought to our notice just now owing to the unveiling of a tablet in Botton. The tablet has been erected by the Bostonian Society and the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company to commemorate the event which took place some forty years ago. A noteworthy fact in connection with the unveiling is that both the Canadian inventor, Alexander Graham Bell, and his assistant, Thomas A. Watson, were present.

Mr. Watson related the story of the discovery, which was accidental, but, as he says, the incident could only have been taken advantage of by a man with clear conception, such as the great inventor had. The discovery was made on the afternoon of June 3, 1876, during experiments in connection with Bell's theory that a current of electricity should vary in intensity as the air varies in density during the production of a sound. Dr. Bell was testing a spring in one of the receivers to ascertain if the pitch was correct. He had pressed the receiver close to his ear and was listening to the faint sound of the intermittent current passing through the magnet, when the transmitter in Mr. Watson's room stopped vibrating. Mr. Watson snapped it with his finger to start it vibrating again. It was this action that was responsible for the discovery. Dr. Bell heard the pitch due to the length of the spring and also the peculiar soft twang, and recognised instantly that the current carrying such a sound was realising his long-cherished idea.

What had actually happened was that the spring which Watson had snapped had become permanently magnetised and was in condition by its vibration to generate the sought-for undulating electric current, and when the current passed through the magnet of the receiver, which was pressed against Dr. Bell's ear, it set into vibration the spring of that instrument, which spring, being confined against his ear, was in a condition to vibrate as a diaphram and not merely as a fixed reed.

The invention of the speaking telephone, however, was no accident—it was a development of the undulatory electric current.

From this time on, Dr. Bell devoted his whole time to the study of the speaking telephone, resigning his teaching position at Boston University.

Finally, on March 10, 1876, the telephone actually transmitted intelligible words. The sentence was, "Mr. Watson come here: I want you." Probably if the inventor had thought of the great invention he was making he would have chosen a sentence not so commonplace as the one he used. From the time of this first use of the telephone as a transmitter of the voice By early summer in 1876 it was possible to converse fluently between two rooms. On the evening of October 9, 1876, the first long-distance test was undertaken, when messages were carried over a wire two miles long. The commercial success of the telephone was then assured.

Dr. Bell and his assistant possibly have seen the greatest scientific development along any one line that has been the satisfaction of any inventor to see. From th little imperfect room-to-room telephone line they have seen th wonderful lines over which it is possible to converse from Montreal to San Francisco. They have seen the great commercial development due to no small extent to the great inventor by which commercial enterprises have been connected in one great network of wires. It has seldom been the experience of an inventor to see his invention so developed, more especially by himself. It is to be lamented that inventors very often, who make an invention, find it enlarged upon by some other inventor who gets the greater amount of credit and profit. It is to be hoped that Dr. Bell has seen his ideas fully developed and has received all the satisfaction and benefit which he deserves for his great invention.

The blessings which have followed in the wake of Dr. Bell's discovery it would be well near impossible to describe. The world has been made smaller and more neighborly—business has been facilitated to an enormous extent. It is doubtful if any one single invention has contributed so generally to the enjoyment of the people as has the telephone. One can only realize the value and convenience of the telephone when, after having used one for years, he is placed in a position where he cannot have access to it. It is like an insurance policy, "Tis better to have it and not need it than to need it and not have it."—Canadian Engineer.

Germans Abandon Massed Attacks Southwest of Douaumont

(By Fred. B. Pitney)

BAR-LE-DUC, France, April 7.—In their last attacks at Verdun the Germans adopted a new formation to replace the massed attacks, which after a long interval, again became the feature of their offensive as at the beginning of the great battle. A French officer, describing Tuesday's fight southwest of Douaumont, says:

"The bombardment of our position began early on Monday and continued all day as though the Germans intended again to try an attack at night, which has been their favourite time lately. Instead, however, the artillery fire fell to normal and we had a comparatively restful time during the hours of darkness. But as soon as day began to break on Tuesday the bombardment was resumed, and continued until 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when the cannon ceased and a thin line of Germans like a file of skirmishers debouched from Bois de Chaufleur and advanced on our trenches by short rushes.

Three Regiments Attack.

"We held our fire and two more skirmish lines followed the first, while after the last line came three supporting columns. Their whole force was in the open and we had ample time to study their new formation before we opened fire. There was a total of three regiments in the attack.

"Our men waited with calm confidence until the first German line was only fifty yards away, when, at a signal machine guns and rifles opened fire. If the Germans had been in their former mass formation we would have begun fire sooner, but with the new plan of thin lines it was perfectly safe to let them come closer and trap them between two fires.

First Line is Dropped.

"Our fire dropped the first line but the second came on and supporting columns rushed men forward to fill the gaps. It was then that our 75's opened up and spread a barrier of shells between 300 and 400 yards in front of our trenches, trapping the attacking Germans between our mitrailleuses and the rifles of the trenches and the barrier of shells. Our mitrailleuses worked pitilessly and the German line wavered and recoiled slightly, but their officers rallied them on. Our men, calm, and alert, directed their fire coolly and carefully.

"A second time the Germans hesitated, rallied, came on a few steps then broke and fled through the zone of shells for the shelter of the woods. But there was no shelter for them. Our 75's increased their trajectory and raked the wood and many of those who escaped in the open met death where they had hoped to find safety. I do not know why the Germans adopted their new attacking formation. Perhaps their reserves are decreasing; perhaps their losses were too heavy in the mass attack. But the new formation saves our guns from overheating."

For A Working Man Paying Rent Is Wasting Money

Because few rent payers ever save any money to enable them to buy a home. The time before and after working hours is wasted, setting a bad example for the family, leading to crime and the police court.

The same money you pay for rent will buy a Home from me with good garden where all may have profitable work late or early.

As I am retiring from business, you should see me at once.

MERRELL & MEREDITH'S

OVERSTOCKED SALE

Unusual conditions have affected the Men's Clothing trade more than others, one cause being the large number of young men who are wearing Clothes supplied by the Government, and limiting the sale of civilian clothing. The consequence is that we find we have $10,000 MORE STOCK IN MEN'S CLOTHING THAN WE SHOULD HAVE, and must find an IMMEDIATE OUTLET for it, to enable us to finance the coming Spring payments.

We have only a short time in which to unload, as WE MUST TURN $10,000 WORTH OF CLOTHING INTO CASH BY EASTER. We realize that half-way measures will not do it, and we have made MERCILESS SLASHES at our regular reasonable prices, and thrown our splendid stock of over $40,000 in Men's Wear on the market for practically what we can get for it.

This is the Prudent Buyer's Opportunity at Our Expense

WE COULD NOT REPLACE THESE GOODS AT ANY PRICE

Wool has advanced to nearly double the old price before the war, and if we had to buy the Clothing we are offering at such tremendous price reductions, on the present market, we would find it impossible to replace them at a large advance on the prices at which we are selling them, and many of them are unobtainable now at any price. By buying at Merrell & Meredith's Great Overstocked Sale you SAVE A THIRD OF THE PRESENT VALUE OF THE GOODS.

JUST TWO WEEKS OF PHENOMENAL PRICES

This Sale commences on Saturday, April 8th, and continues for two weeks, ending at Easter, April 22. Thousands of men and boys have to have Clothing, and the Store should be crowded by bargain appreciating buyers every hour of the thirteen Sale days. Come early, take your time in selecting and get the bargain of your life in a Suit or Overcoat. Everything in the store goes without reserve. DON'T MISS THIS GREAT SALE.

SALE STARTS SATURDAY, APRIL 8th, ENDS AT EASTER

Style, Quality and Reasonable Prices Commend These Hats

This trinity of desirable attributes renders our present showing notable among millinery offerings. Seldom are all three qualities united. Really smart millinery usually bears a high price ticket and inexpensive varieties generally fall short of the desirable in style and quality. As the result of careful planning we are able to include in this selection the Newest and most effective of spring designs each with that indiscribable smartness about it that bespeaks the work of a clever milliner whether it originated in New York or our own work rooms. Each marked at a price for Saturday which you will be glad to pay. See them in the Millinery Department, 2nd Floor.

ACTION AGAINST CHIEF OF POLICE

Chief of Police Reid is being sued for $10,000 under circumstances peculiar. Some time ago one Jas Gage, an Austrian, was convicted for selling liquor without a license at Belleville and sentenced to four months in jail. Inspector Stokes, of that place, notified the police here that Gage was in this locality, and asking for his arrest. Gage was working on the Trent Canal at Washago and coming to town one day was arrested by Chief Reid, a constable from Belleville coming up with a warrant and taking Gage there. He is now serving his term in jail there. Meantime through his solicitor, J. B. McKenzie, Toronto, he has issued a writ for untold damages for arrest and assault. At the time of the arrest Gage was on parole on card issue by Chief Reid. The License Department is defending the suit.

WAR'S YEARLY COST NOW $25,000,000,000

All the Belligerent Governments Busy With Loans and Taxes for Meeting Expenditures

Bank of England Gains Gold—Reichsbank Has Metal for a Third of Its Note Circulation.

The expenditures of the four great powers at war are now running almost twenty-five billion dollars a year. Estimates based on recent reports, make the annual cost to Great Britain about $6,000,000,000, to Germany and Russia each $4,000,000,000 and to France, $4,000,000.

These figures are presented in the April letter of the National City Bank in a study of the means employed to meet the tremendous cost. It is the conclusion of the writer that neither side can afford to consider peace while Great Britain holds command of the seas and Germany the advantage on land. For this reason, he regards peace talk as premature. Extracts from the letter follow:

The belligerent Governments are all busy with plans for raising money, both by taxation and loans. There has been no large British internal loan since last June, and the proceeds of that were exhausted some months ago. Since then the Treasury has been supplying its needs by the sale of five-year Exchequer bonds, and Treasury bills running three, six, nine, and twelve months, the bills being the main resource. The amount of these outstanding March 1 was a little above $2,000,000,000. Three months' bills now draw 4 1-2 per cent., six and nine months' bills 4 3-4 per cent. The British fiscal year ends March 31, and the total Government expenditures for the year just closed, including the civil establishment and loans to Allies, is nearly, if not quite, $8,000,000,000, but of this approximately $2,000,000,000 was advanced to the country's colonies and allies. It is supposed that a new internal loan will be brought out before long, probably at 5 per cent.

The revenue of the British Government under the war taxes are very large. The peace revenues were about $1,000,000,000 per year, but for the year just closed the total income from taxation has been about $1,700,000,000, and for the coming year it is expected to reach $2,200,000,000, not counting new taxes which may be levied. The excess profits tax has scarcely begun to show results, and the proceeds of this may carry the income above all estimates.

The cessation of gold exports to the United States has enabled the Bank of England to gain about $20,000,000 of gold since January 1, and at approximately $275,000,000 the stock is only about $6,000,000 below what it was a year ago, notwithstanding the large exports to the United States and elsewhere during that time. The great production of gold within the British Empire serves it well at this time. The closing of the diamond mines in Africa has given a large supply of labour to the gold mines, and the African production is now at the rate of about $200,000,000 per year. The Canadian production rose last year to $18,000,000, and the total output in the British possessions is close to $300,000,000. The Bank of England reserve is now about 28 per cent., and the reserve against Exchequer notes about the same. Its public and private loans are considerably less than a year ago owing to the large payments upon premoratorium paper.

The German Government has closed the books on its fourth loan, and subscriptions are officially stated to be in excess of 10,000,000,000 marks, or about $2,600,000,000. The third loan, brought out last fall, realized about $3,000,000,000, and the Secretary of the Treasury announces that the total subscriptions for all the war loans aggregate 38,300,000,000 marks, or about $9,000,000,000. In presenting his annual budget, with certain proposals for new taxes, to the Reichstag a few days ago he stated that the war expenditures in December exceeded 2,000,000,000 marks, about $500,000,000, but had since been running lower, and now were scarcely greater than a year ago. He estimated that the new taxes would bring in 10,000,000 marks monthly. The gold reserve of the Reichsbank is about 39 per cent. of its note circulation, and 30 per cent. against notes and deposits. The note circulation is about $400,000,000 above a year ago, and loans about the same.

France has resumed the sale of 5 per cent. defense bonds, suspended since November last. The Minister of Finance states that the war expenditures in 1915 were 22,000,000,000 francs, or approximately $4,400,000,000, and the total military expenditures since the war began have been 37,000,000,000 francs, or about $7,400,000,000. For the second quarter of 1916 the estimate calls for $17,800,000 per day. The Bank of France maintains its gold holdings at about $1,000,000,000, which is about $150,000,000 larger than a year ago, notwithstanding several large shipments to the Bank of England in the mean time. Its note circulation is about $700,000,000 higher than a year ago, the percentage of reserve to circulation 33 1-3, and percentage to circulation and reserve about 30. Its holdings of premoratorium bills have been reduced nearly one-half since a year ago, but its advances to the State on account of the war are up $400,000,000 in a year, and now stand at about $1,000,000,000.

The borrowings of Russia from the beginning of the war to Jan 1, 1916, were a little above $4,000,000,000, and the war expenditures are now at the rate of about $500,00,000 per month. The gold reserve of the Bank of Russia has been increased from the circulation and by the product of the mines to about $1,120,000,000 or about 40 per cent. of the outstanding note circulation, and 32 per cent. against notes and deposits.

Youth of 18, Working in Department Store, Inherits Fortune.

Harold Richard Clements, 19 years old, who has been working in a department store, in Seattle, Wash., at a small salary, has been notified by Arthur Payne, an attorney at Louisville, Ky., that he has inherited the $3,000,000 estate of his grandmother, Mrs. Mary Clements, who died there recently. Young Clements is the son of Harry Curtis Clements, formerly president of the Denver Traction Company, who died nine years ago. When Mr. Clements died he left the bulk of his estate to his mother, only a small allowance going to his son, young Clements said.

EMBARGO IS STILL IN FORCE

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, April 7.—With reference to the C.P.R.'s embargo against the Canadian government railway officials of the C.P.R. stated to-day: Only eight cars were withdrawn from the accumulation of Canadian government railway cars in C.P.R. yards at St. Rosalie junction on April 5th. The average for the past four days being even and half cars in spite of the fact that on March 28th Mr. Cruttelius agreed with the C.P.R. to take sixty cars a day from that junction. In order to help the Canadian government railways the C.P.R. recently loaned twelve locomotives, but the situation so far from being relieved has become so grave that the C.P.R. is considering the possibility of still further lightening the existing embargo on loaded cars at both Rosalie and St. John and refusing all perishable freight to I.C.R. points.

The position to-day is that the C.P.R. has 635 cars of which it wishes the Canadian government railways to accept delivery."

Y. M. C. A. CIRCUS LIVED UP TO ITS ADVANCE NOTICES

Was Bigger, Better and Brighter Than Any Performance Ever Presented in the Building—Greeted With Capacity House

The Y.M.C.A. circus true to the show bills was bigger, better and brighter than ever and scored a big triumph for the physical department of the Association. The gymnasium was filled to its utmost capacity and scores of people failed to secure admission. While fulfilling mostly a fun making mission the circus wa salso a demonstration of the Physical culture work accomplished by the Y.M.C.A. This year a number of new acts were introduced by Mr. Roper and were of the highest grade.

The Athletic posing by two young men in chalky white under a 750 candle power light was most pleasing and artistic. The Mammoth gramaphone is a large box like machine with an immense horn at the top and after a vigorous cranking produced some marvellous music from equally marvellous records. The surprising feature in connection with the Mammoth gramaphone was the introduction of a small brown dog into the machine followed by music punctuated with real link sausage which essayed from the horn. Perhaps the most popular feature of the entertainment was Joffre the trained elephant about whom it is no exaggeration to say that he is the most intelligent beast ever seen in any circus in Peterborough.

Maggie and Father were up to their usual antics and were seen in various parts of the building. Father invariably had under his dress hat a pail of liquid refreshment. However Father's behaviour was very credible last evening due perhaps to the fact that Maggie's grip on his ear was never released for very long.

The famous Look 'Em telescope was another new feature through which Venus the great Bear, the Little Dipper and the female continent seated in the gallery were plainly visible.

The opening number of the programme was the most impressive as it served as a grand entry for all the performers, as led by the elephant and Gordon Roper its boy trainer circled around the gym. The street parade should also receive mention as it served to create much amusement to the hundreds of people who lined George street and the six to eight hundred people who crowded the streets around the Y.M.C.A., demonstrated the interest taken in the first circus to visit Peterborough this year.

Mrs. Meserve and her lady assistant had charge of the Inside Inn a canvass booth located in the main lobby. This booth was well stocked with pies, lemonade and peanuts but at the close of the show everything had been completely sold out. The booth will be in operation again this evening when ice cream cones will be sold along with other eatables. Thanks are to be extended to the ladies of the city who made this occasion a pie shower for the benefit of the boys piano fund. These fine juicy pies home made pies melted from view like the few snow flakes of yesterday morning.

The circus programme will be repeated this evening with a few additions and will no doubt be run off more smoothly than last evening, a good crowd is expected.

Professor McNeely's band led by the Professor in person, was present in all its glory. Some of the most exquisite music being rendered on the most wonderful instruments.

ARRANGED "HUSH FUND" TO COVER UP MURDER

Another Arrest Expected To-day in the John E. Peck Case.

New York, April 7.—Another arrest may be made in the Peck million-dollar poison mystery to-morrow.

The announcement was made by the authorities to-night. It followed receipt by Assistant District Attorneys Dooling, Mancuso & Bros. of documentary evidence that Dr. Arthur Warren Waite had arranged a "hush fund" of $25,000 to cover up the murder of his wealthy and aged father-in-law, John E. Peck.

It is alleged that Eugene O. Kane, an undertaker's assistant, received $9,000 as hush money out of $15,000 promised.

The Unusually Broad Selection Of Fashionable Spring Suits Makes Choosing Easy Here

Quite naturally, we could devote several times the amount of this space telling of the various styles, and just why you should buy at this store. Nothing would convince you more, however, than a visit and an inspection. The items mentioned below have been selected merely to give you an idea of the style of the garments and their prices.

Most Unusual Suits at $16

The average woman expects to pay more than $16 for a suit, but you will hardly be able to see any very marked difference between this Suit at $16 and the average suit at $18 to $20. It took us quite some time to locate a manufacturer who could sell to us a Spring Suit at a price allowing us to offer so good a value at $16. The cloths used in the making are gabardine, poplin, shepherd checks.

The Coat is made semi-tailored, well fashioned and finished to a degree and the oddly shaped little pockets have been used quite effectively in these garments. The Suits are silk-lined and have pretty button trimming on the points at the back and on the skirt. Skirts made semi-full to match the general outline of the jacket style.

Suit of Taffeta Silk $35

Very few of the Silk Fabrics for Spring lend themselves more readily to the fashions of the season than Taffeta Silk, and a Silk Suit is always a dressy garments for Spring. The Coat is semi-fitting, full flaring from the waist line where it is gathered in by a belt of serge with pearl buckle. The bottom of Coat and Skirt have width of serge, adding a distinctly smart tone to the Suit and at the same time protecting the silk from wear. The cuffs are loose, bell shape with opening at the sides and slightly gathered with band of serge. The lining of green silk adds a little touch of color which pokes its way out at cuffs and collar just enough to make it appear as if it were piped.

Shelled Out of a Dugout

Gunner Howard Crowe of Peterborough Describes an Exciting Incident.

The following letter was received from Gunner H. V. Crowe, who is in France with the 17th Battery, Fifth Brigade, as Signaller:

Dear Mother:—I have not received any mail from you for a long time, but I have not been writing regularly myself this last while, but that isn't my fault, as we have been on the move so much lately. But I think we are settled down now or at least till we get "Fritzy" on the move again, and I hope so too as there is always so much to do when we change positions.

"Frits," that is what we call the Germans, gave us a very good send off from our last position, at least the operators. I had some very narrow escapes that day. They started to shell us about two p.m. with high explosive shells. One hit about ten yds. from the front of our sleeping dugout in which I and another telephonist were cooking dinner. The next one lit right at the door but was a blind one and did not explode. It was very good for us as we might not have been here to-day, or we might have only got what we call a "Blighty" (a wound that will send us to England.) They evidently repeated the shot as the next one fell right at the back of us and blew up part of the hedge and knocked the end out of the dugout to pieces. We then thought that it was time we moved out of that and believe me we did not take long. We just gathered up our blankets and put on our slickers, as it was raining, and beat it along the hedge for the battery, about a mile over the hill, leaving all our kit and dinner behind. While crossing the field to the road, a distance of about 50 yards, they were coming like the dickens, and too close to be comfortable. Every time we would hear one we would run faster than ever till it seemed to be right on top of us and then we would fall, the shell exploding about the same time, and off we would go again. When we came to the road we heard another one and we were pretty sure that it was for us this time so we lost no time in crossing, you can imagine, and jumped into an abandoned trench with water up to our hips, and us with only knee-rubber boots on. Oh, but it was cold and wet. It exploded right in the centre of the road about ten feet from us, and then we scrambled out. But then there was another already on its way so we lay close to the ground beside the hedge. That one exploded right at our feet, and how we came away without getting hit I don't know. But we kept going till we got out of that zone. But, I was not a bit scared till afterwards, and then we both were. For when we thought of it we dont' know how we got away unhurt. Those shells when they explode just sound like a large charge of dynamite.

I was over to the 21st Batt. to-day and met Charlie Hardwicke, Len Williams, Walter Batly, Bill Saxby, Bill McKim and Harry Cobb, also Angus McIntosh, and we all had a good long conflab together, and in the meantime one of our aeroplanes was shot down by a German, and there was a little excitement. It sure is great to meet fellows of your old home town out here as there is none of them with me here. Charlie is doing the same work as I am and I wish that you would tell Mrs. Hardwicke that I met him and he is looking fine like all the rest of the boys.

There is all kinds of mud where we are now and we are on the shore of a marshy lake where there has always been heavy fighting. We were at a place where we gained a foot at a time last spring. There is a picture of a famous farm house in the London Illustrated News which is the very likeness of the place. It was where the London Scottish formed after their great charge. We used to go past it every day we went in the trenches, which are not far away. If you ever see it you will know that that is one place I have been.

Well, I guess that is all I can write this time, except Frits is very quiet these days and of course we dont' mind that. Give my love to all.

HOWARD.

Something That Happens Every Day

(Lindsay Post.)

Some wag has pulled a belated April fool joke over the dreamy scribe on the Peterborough Times, as witness the following "scream" which appeared in a recent issue, and which is entirely without foundation:

Lindsay, April 5.— Yesterday was the day agreed upon for the river drivers to assemble in that town preparatory to starting for the lumber camps.

It seems that the recruiting officers and men made frequent attempts to induce woodsmen to enlist, much to the ire of some of the employers. The lumbermen were enjoying a few drinks with friends. The soldiers could not resist the temptation to get the necessary thirty men to complete the 109th Battalion and as a result several clashes took place.

Col. Fee is reported to have issued an order to Inspector Thornbury making all bars out of bounds for the men in uniform last night.

It is alleged that all places were notified except the Pym House, which continues selling.

J. D. Flavelle, the chairman of the License Commission, was home, and an investigation is likely.

The woodsmen left Lindsay for the north country this morning.

WEAK, AILING CHILDREN

Made Well and Strong by Simple Remedy.

Here is another letter that has just come to our attention, showing the power of Vinol to build up health and strength for weak puny, ailing children.

W. A. Smith, of Shanesville, Ohio, says:—"My little child was puny, weak and ailing, could not rest at night and would not eat. I learned about Vinol and tried it, and within a week noticed an improvement. The child's appetite improved, it slept well, strength and health were soon built up. We think Vinol is excellent for weak, puny children."

Vinol is a delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, containing beef peptone, which creates an appetite, tones up the digestive organs, enriches the blood and creates strength, children love to take it.

We ask all parents of weak, sickly, delicate children in this vicinity to try Vinol with the understanding that we will return your money if it fails to benefit your little ones.

McDermid & Jury and E. L. Payne, Druggists, Peterborough.

Fruit growers claim that currants pay as high as $300 per acre and that the average price is around $9 per bushel, and that 100 bushels to an acre is an average crop.

Tributes To Late Private Rogers

hardly believe it, for he was still standing up when he said it. Then he said again, "I'm hit; get the stretcher bearers. With that he dropped and died very shortly afterwards. I know it will be very hard for you, his mother, to bear it; but one thing to remember is, that he died in a very noble cause and he was grit through and through even to the last.

Lieutenant's Sympathy.

Lieut. W. O. Funk of the 21st Battalion, also wrote Mrs. Rogers, expressing his sympathy adding his tribute to the late Private Rogers, and referring to the loss the Battalion felt.

Sorrow of His Pal.

Corporal Walter Batley, Chamberlen Street, No. 3 Co., 21st Battalion wrote the following letter to a sister of the late Pte. Rogers:

"You will no doubt be surprised to hear from me, and I am more sorry than mere words can express that I am writing on such a sad subject. I sympathize with you all from the bottom of my heart over the loss of dear old "Scottie." I had learned to love him as a brother. He was always the same; merry and bright all the time. He was the life of our platoon and he has left a blank here that can never be filled. He was liked by the whole Battalion, always willing to do his share and as an N.C.O. I can say that if we ever wanted anything done "Scottie" was always willing. I was with him when he was killed, the night of March 16th, and I am glad to say he suffered but very little, dying a few minutes after being hit. The bullet went in his chest from the side, and it must have touched his heart. I was nearly crazy with grief and I swore right there that I would avenge his death. I wish I were a girl and could cry. It would relieve me. He slept by my side and it is hard for me to sleep and not dream of him. But we know he is in heaven. I am sure of that, as he never did a mean action all the time he has been with us. He was buried on March 17th, by our Chaplain, and most of our platoon saw him buried. We are going to look after his grave and keep it in good condition. I am writing to-day as I know your faith is a little different from my own and I thought you would be glad to know that the priest said the Catholic ceremonies over his grave to-day, and buried him as all the Catholics are buried. Is there anything I can do for you or your mother and father? It would do me good to do something. It would seem like serving "Scottie." My heart is too full to write more.

Yours in Sorrow,
WALTER BATLEY.

PLAYGROUNDS ASSOCIATION MAKES A GOOD BEGINNING

At Public Meeting Last Night--Nominating Committee Will Meet on Monday Next in the Public Library--Will Endeavour to Open Ground at King Edward School in Addition to That at Central School.

The first steps in the organization of a Playgrounds Association were taken last night at a meeting held in the Council Chamber attended by a number of enthusiasts in this movement. A nominating committee was appointed consisting of Mr. D. W. Dumble, Mr. W. H. Hill, Mrs. Hugh Waddell, Mrs. F. C. Neal and Mrs. Arthur Stevenson, to meet in the Board Room of the Public Library on Monday next at 7:30 p.m. They have been entrusted with a rather comprehensive commission of drafting a constitution, nominating officers, suggesting membership fee, considering the committees necessary, and of presenting any other ideas that may be in the interests of public playgrounds for Peterborough.

Because of its successful establishment and operation of the supervised playground at the Central School last midsummer, the Women's Council was well represented, and Mrs. A. Mowat, its convenor, presided.

The genius and energy in children's work as exhibited by the women who are pressing this movement before the public's attention was fully recognized and commended by the gentlemen present. However, Mr. Dumble declared that the ultimate object of the Association should be the gradual emphasizing the necessity and possibilities of playgrounds in the development of the city's boys and girls, that the municipality will have no alternative but to assume the whole responsibility of the project and enlarge its scope.

Mrs. Mowat, Mrs. Neal and Mrs. Stevenson spoke of the initial accomplishment last year in the opening of the Central School playground with equipment costing about $200, and two months' supervision in which $250 was expended. Altogether the Women's Council had spent $400 which they had collected in various ways.

City Improvident.

Lack of vision and a mean contemptible spirit among the citizens were responsible, Mr. Dumble said, for the unwillingness to make some sacrifice for children's grounds. The city fathers of past years were largely to blame. They had twenty half-acre lots in the south end and sold them at every opportunity. Mr. Dumble was glad the ladies were so interested in the children's future welfare and promised whatever assistance he could lend.

Chief Thompson agreed in the need of directed play as a civic asset. His experience in Peterborough had proved conclusively that this city is ill provided with playgrounds, and the proposed Association was decidedly in the right direction. He mentioned the corelation of public bathing places. There wasn't a city in the Province wtih facilities such as Peterborough possesses that was without a bathing place, properly supervised, for boys and girls.

Mrs. Jas. Kendry, Mr. A. Mowat, and Fire Chief Howard also discussed the subject of the meeting.

An effort will be made to reopen Central School grounds and establish a new one at King Edward School. The absence of many fathers who have enlisted presents an extra duty to the mothers which the Playgrounds Association feels it can help to relieve by the fruition of its plans to provide supervised playgrounds. And to this end an appeal will probably be made to those citizens who realize the problem of protecting the children, and are in sympathy with it.

A CHECKER EXHIBITION

Mr. Philip Sanders Will Play at the Armouries To-night

There will be a checker exhibition at the armouries to-night at 8 p.m. Philip Sanders, juvenile champion checker player of the world will meet from 20 to 30 of the best exponents of the game this vicinity can boast of. Mr. Sanders played recently at the Belleville armouries, military Y.M.C.A. at Kingston and other places throughout Canada, and has found quite a lot of interest displayed in the game. The checker board is sometimes called a mimic battlefield, as attacks and counter-attacks are made and much strategy must be displayed to bring the men to a winning position. The contest will be a civilian as well as a military event. All lovers of the game are invited to attend. Sanders, besides playing a number of men at the same time, plays blindfolded also. All contestants are requested to bring their own checker outfits.

CHINESE BABIES GUARD FATHERS.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 7.—Babies are all the rage in Chinatown since the tong war began. There is an unwritten law among Chinese high-binders that a father with a child in his arms shall not be shot. The police say this accounts for the number of babies getting the air on the streets these days.

TERMS ON WHICH GERMANY WILL CONSENT TO ENDING OF THE WAR

Chancellor Von Bethmann Hollweg in His Address Before the Reichstag Outlines His Country's Terms For All the World

Special to The Examiner.

BERLIN, April 7.—Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg laid before the world the terms on which Germany will consent to the ending of the war in his address before the Reichstag Wednesday.

This was the interpretation to-day of the Lokal Anzeiger, Vossische Zeitung and the Tageblatt, three of the most influential newspapers of Germany.

The newspapers pointed out to-day that for the first time the Chancellor made a statement of Germany's intentions regarding Belgium. He demanded no annexation of Belgium, but asked only that an independent Belgium be set up after the war, free of Allied influence.

In one respect the Chancellor increased Germany's previous demands, declaring that not only Poland, but all Russian territory from the Baltic to Volhynia, now held by the Central Empires, be freed from the rule of the Czar. In previous utterances only the independence of Poland had been referred to.

On the other hand, it was emphasized to-day that the Chancellor made no reference to a demand for indemnities at the conclusion of the war.

TOOK POSITION FROM CANUCKS SAYS BERLIN

"British Crater Position, South of St. Eloi and Defended by Canadian Troops, Conquered After Careful Preparation and Tenacious Fighting," Says German Official Statement.

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, April 7.—A Berlin statement to-day says the repulse of French attacks north-east of Avocourt and north-east of Verdun in Galliette is reported.

The German have conquered British crater positions in fierce fighting with Canadian troops south of St Eloi.

"German troops, after careful preparation and tenacious fighting, conquered British crater positions south of St. Eloi, defended by Canadian troops," said an official statement from the War Office to-day. "In the Argonne the French sprang mines north of Four de Paris, and brief combats ensued.

"On the eastern front Russian violent local attacks south of Narj.ch Lake failed."

TORONTO, April 7.—The German claims that they have captured "crater" positions from Canadian troops does not necessarily mean a very large engagement, though the assertion that the fighting was tenacious indicates that the Canadians held on to their posts to the last moment, and were probably overcome by superior numbers or weight of metal. A "crater" is merely a hole made by a bursting shell or mine, seized upon and improvised into an entrenchment. As a rule these craters are in no man's land, and used as listening posts or observation posts.

TO RELIEVE GERMANY FROM THE PRUSSIAN

Special to The Examiner.

ROTTERDAM, April 7.—In a counter blast to the German Chancellor's Reichstag speech, the so-called "German Humanity League" to-day issued a manifesto urging all Germans in neutral states to strive to the uttermost to deliver Germany from the domination of the "savage and brutal militarism of Prussia."

The manifesto charges that the German Government has broken "every rule of civilized communities, diplomatic honesty and international obligations," and is responsible "for the colossal carnage of domestic grief, financial ruin and economic misery which, like a nightmare from hell, distracts the German people."

Eleven Asiatic Members of Crew Drowned

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 7.—Eleven Asiatic members of the crew were drowned when the Peninsular and Oriental liner Simla was sunk in the Mediterranean, but all other persons aboard vessel were saved, according to Lloyd's despatch this afternoon.

SAVE YOUR OLD RAGS DURING COMING HOUSECLEANING TIME

The Same Will Be Collected by the Playgrounds Committee About the End of May---In Aid of the Playgrounds Movement

"Gather up the fragments that nothing be lost." John 6:12.

We would draw the attention of every woman, who is interested in the best welfare of the children of our city to the effort being made at this time to enlarge the playgrounds movement commenced in the city last summer by the Woman's Council, to include a supervised playgrounds at the King Edward School. In order that this be accomplished private funds will be needed and our mothers and housekeepers are asked to co-operate with the Play Ground Committee, by carefully collecting and saving all worn-out garments, old linen, whether towels, table cloths or collars, and all cotton or woollen rags (not silk), during the coming house-cleaning time. If such rags could be washed and placed in bundles, a complete canvas of the city for collecting them will be made towards the end of May. All such rags are getting scarcer and of higher value every day. The Playgrounds Committee makes this appeal with every confidence that the public will respond generously all over the city. Tell your neighbours about it and help in this way to get others interested. Now that so much is being written and said about conserving all our resources, we point out this simple way of helping the children of the city to happy, healthful, supervised play.

INVESTIGATION INTO $200,000 DREDGING SCANDAL

Resumed Before Public Accounts Committee This Morning

OTTAWA, April 7.—The Public Accounts committee resumed this morning its investigation into $200,000 dredging scandal at Victoria, B.C., with G. E. Mallory again on the stand and F. B. Carvel as chief examiner. Mallory told the committee that he had made out July estimates of work done by MacDonnell, a sub-contractor, fixing the amount of rock excavated at 47.83 cubic yards, for which $9.10 per cubic yard was to be paid. No such quantity of rock was taken out, but he had made up the estimate on instructions from J. L. Nelson, government superintendent of dredging.

Asked if any money was ever paid to Nelson, Mallory produced a receipt for two thousand dollars received by Nelson from MacDonnell. Witness told the committee that up to the end of September no less than 25,-288 yards of soft rock had been entered, whereas only about six thousand yards had been removed.

SUGAR ADVANCES ANOTHER TEN CENTS

Not only is the market firm, but there is no end in sight yet to the upward movement.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

SPORTING COMMENT

A VETERAN OF THE DIAMOND

John Ganzel, the veteran pilot who was hired late last summer to lead the Brooklyn Tip Tops, will pass his 41st milestone to-day. Soon after the close of the season Ganzel made a trip to Hawaii where he remained for several weeks, and it was not until he returned to San Francisco that he learned that the Federal League had dropped out from under him. When Ganzel relinquished the helm of the Rochester International League Club last August to join the independent forces, the Wards entered into a contract for three years at an annual salary, it is said, of about $8,000. It is likely that he will lose little by the failure of the Feds, as his contract is said to be of the ironclad variety. Ganzel did not jump organized ball to go over to the Feds as he had the consent of Owner Chapin when he left Rochester t go to Brooklyn. Later he got in bad with the International moguls by luring away several players to the Feds.

Ganzel was born April 7, 1875, in Racine, Wis., and was one of five brothers who played professional baseball. Next to John, the most distinguished of the Ganzel quintet was Charley, who was a backstop with the Boston Nationals from 1889 to 1897. John started his professional career in Kalamazoo in 1895. The next year he was with New Castle, Pa., and from there he went to Grand Rapids, then in the Western League. He made such a good showing in "Grand Rabbits" that he was sold to Pittsburgh in 1898 but illness prevented him from making good on his first chance in the big show. Pittsburgh turned him over to the Detroit Western League Club and from there he went to Kansas City. In 1900 Chicago got him in a trade but in 1901 the Cubs swapped him to the Giants. He remained in New York one season and then went to Louisville in the American Association. At the end of the season he landed with the Chicago White Sox but was turned over to the New York Americans before the season commenced.

Ganzel covered the initial bag for the New Yorks a couple of seasons. In 1905 he decided to become a magnate and bought the Grand Rapids Club, but Frank Farrell was peeved and got out an injunction to prevent him from playing. The matter was finally settled by Ganzel paying $3,000 for his release.

As a pilot Ganzel made a great reputation in Grand Rapids, winning two pennants, and in 1908 he returned to the National League as manager of the Cincinnati Reds. The club finished fifth, a notch higher than that attained by Ned Hanlon, the preceding year. Clarke Griffith, Ganzel's former boss in New York, succeeded John at the Cincinnati helm, and Ganzel went to Rochester, where he won three pennants.

FORT WILLIAM WANTS EX-CANADIAN LEAGUER.

Port William, April 5.—The Fort's ball team management has forwarded a contract to a pitcher named Boiting, who made a name for himself in the Canadian League with Peterborough. This pitcher is said to have made a good record with the eastern team, for out of 21 games played he won 17. His contract has not been returned signed as yet, but every effort will be made to land this new man.

TWO MEATLESS DAYS EACH GERMAN WEEK

BERLIN, April 7.—Meat cards will be introduced in Bavaria and Saxony on April 15, permitting consumption of 150 grammes (one-third pound) per capita daily except on two meatless days each week.

Bavaria has forbidden sale of canned meats, whole hams, whole sausages, etc., to individuals, to prevent the accumulation of stocks in advance.

Individual meat cards probably will not be issued in Berlin. Regulation of distribution will be effected by limiting the supply for each retailer.

GERMAN CLOCKS TO BE ADVANCED

BERLIN, April 7.—A bill has been passed by the German Federal Council directing that after May all clocks shall be advanced one hour.

This measure is intended to advance hygiene as well as to promote economy by lengthening the working time during daylight and diminishing the use of artificial light.

"The Bachelor's Club seems to be utterly deserted these days. I wonder what is the trouble?" "Leap year, that's all. The boys are afraid to hang around where the women would be sure to look for them."

OWNS BIBLE 332 YEARS OLD.

Has Been in Possession of One Family Over Three Centuries.

A. P. Fleckenstein of Ionia, Ind., is the possessor of a Bible which has been in his family for 332 years. Most of the time it has been in Germany. It was in Hoerstin, Bavaria, until 1883, when it was brought to America. In 1893 it was exhibited at the World's Fair.

The flyleaf at the beginning of the New Testament contains the following tribute to the translator:

"A true translation into the German language according to the old translations, used in the Christian church and enlightened with many wholesome annotations by the Rev. Dr. John Dietenberger. To the praise of God and the most gracious pleasure of the Roman imperial majesty and to the good of the common German nation and now embellished with illustrations and put into this grand form. This book was printed at Cologne, Germany, in the year A. D. 1534 by Servin Calenium and the heirs of John Quentel. With the grace and liberty of the Roman imperial majesty."

time has come when politicians must submerge their political differences and rise to the occasion.

What Hinders Recruiting?

"What hinders recruiting?" asked Mr. Parsons. Speaking as a private citizen I would say that recruiting is hindered by the foul blot that rests upon this fair Dominion. We know we have had that in public life which makes us hang our heads in shame. That is what hinders recruiting. Men who have been intrusted with positions of responsibility have abused the trust. What about the fathers of the country reaching their hands out to the public chest. The day for graft and extravagance has passed. When we think of our politicians we think of the Dutchman who had a boy, and was wondering what he would make as a test. The father placed on a table a silver dollar, a bottle of whiskey and a Bible. The boy came in, picked up the silver dollar, took a drink of whiskey and walked off with the Bible. In his mind the father concluded that if the boy selected the dollar he would become a rich man if the whiskey a drunkard, and if the Bible a good man. To the father's astonishment the boy took possession of the dollar, the whiskey and the Bible, whereupon the father concluded the boy would become a politician.

Time may come when public life and governmental life may be purified and above reproach.

Skilled Men Needed.

While we needed skilled men in the factory we also need them on the farm. If we do not see that there are skilled men in these places we will fall down and will be unable to meet our obligations. The prosperity of this country has been brought about by our immense production.

There is a feeling in the minds of a great many young men that our voluntary system of recruiting is optional. I do not so understand it. I believe that the call of duty should be pressed home upon the young men. I am inclined to think there are many thousands of men who buy a newspaper in order to peruse the sporting news. That is one instance where I think that the newspapers have gone too far. The sporting news is something that should be relegated to the back page. There is no harm in good clean sport, but professional sport is something that should not be tolerated under present conditions.

In conclusion Mr. Parsons urged those who felt that they were not doing their part to do it now. Men who go into the trenches represent those who remain at home. In the words of Sir Walter Scott:

"The wretch.
Double dying should go down to the vile dust from whence he sprung, unwept, unhonoured and unsung."

Lieut.-Col. Wright.

In his opening remarks, Col. Wright said he was glad to see the ladies present. They were largely responsible for the many comforts that were sent to the boys in the trenches. When you see a successful man, if you will look you will usually find a mighty good little woman pushing him along. Col. Wright paid a glowing tribute to the 93rd Battalion, which included eulogistic references to the officers and also the brass and bugle bands. There was only one other that was any better and that was the 169th Battalion, to which I have the honour to be officer commanding, said the speaker, jocularly.

A Great Democracy.

Boys, said the speaker, is there any better thing you can do to-night than get into khaki? There is no greater democracy worth fighting for. There is no greater or more freer country worth fighting for except it be the country across the line. There is no use telling you what caused the war, you know that. Great Britain gave her pledge to a little nation, and she is keeping it to-night. Great Britain is not the aggressor. She is satisfied to conquer the world in trade and commerce. British men have gone all over the world to fight these battles. In Canada we have the highest type of citizenship the world has ever seen. Up to the present Canada has not done her part. In Britain one man in six has enlisted, in Austria one man in eight has heard the call, while in Canada only one man in thirty has answered the call, and twenty per cent. of those enlisted here are British born. In number three military district the quota required to make up the 500,000 men needed, was 44,000. Out of this 22,000 have been secured. There is a part of Canada that has not done its share and that is the Maritime provinces, and they have more to fight for than we have.

200 Years of Peace.

The reason Canada has not done her share is that we have had 200 years of peace, and war is not bred into us the way it is into the European. People, we are British. We haven't much to cheer for yet. It is because we haven't got enough men. We have got to have men and more men. When we read of the way the Canadians held the lines at the second battle of Ypres a nice little feeling went up our backbone. That is if our backbone was in the right place. In some of us our wishbone is where our backbone ought to be. The call of the present is the call for men, and the answer that went back was the authorization for 500,000 men. Then we have the call of the Lusitania and Edith Cavell. The best monument you can give to Edith Cavell is to go into khaki and avenge the death of that brave English nurse. No British submarine commander would have carried out the order to sink a vessel with 1,200 helpless souls on board. Then we have the call of the future. Men that are physically fit will hesitate to look into the faces of the returning heroes. If you don't want to.

The Popular Colour.

You can go to a drug store, said Col. Wright, and buy a nickle's worth of moth balls and put your civilian clothes in pickle. Come up to the armouries, strip off, let the doctor pound you off all over and you will get a suit of the popular colour. Besides they feed you. I believe that every eligible single man should be in khaki. I emphasize the single men because so many married men are enlisting. It may be the married men are more used to fighting, but I doubt it. I believe that we should have conscription. One thing that we should do and that is form a conspiracy on sports. The government should be asked to enact a law banishing the sporting page from the newspaper. I went to the big arena in Toronto one night to give a recruiting speech and was drowned out by over six thousand fans. When things like that happen it is time we had conscription. Men who are indispensable should be supplied with a distinguishing badge. "Fighter or slacker which am I? is the question each of us must face. I don't like calling men slackers, and I don't. You have got to answer that question. Never disgrace the grand old flag and it will never disgrace you.

McGRAW'S BIRTHDAY.

The village of Truxton does not make a very big splash on the map of New York, but the little Cortland county community has one enviable distinction—it is the birthplace of John J. McGraw. This is the day when Truxton celebrates in honour of the scrappy leader of the Giants, for it was on the 7th of April, 1873, that McGraw was delivered to Truxton by the stork. Not since "Cap." Anson's years of glory as the leader of the White Stockings has any baseball manager attained such widespread fame as Muggsy McGraw. His personality is the sort that appeals to the popular imagination and last year's inglorious showing of the Giants has dimmed but little the lustre of his fame.

"Mr. Brown, you are twenty minutes late this morning," remarked the boss with a frown. "Couldn't help it, sir," replied Brown. "The 7.36 was up to time this morning so I missed it by five minutes."

OBITUARY

ALEXANDER HERD.

The death occurred last evening in the Isolation Hospital of Alexander Herd, the seven year old son of Mr William Herd, 292 Dalhousie street. The funeral took place this morning at eleven o'clock to Little Lake cemetery. Rev. Mr. Pogue officiated.

G. H. SHERWOOD.

A former resident of Peterborough passed away at an early hour this morning in Vancouver in the person of G. H. Sherwood, 1929 fifth avenue. The late Mr. Sherwood moved to the west from this city about twenty years ago. The first ten years were spent at several places in the prairie provinces and the latter ten in Vancouver, where he had resided. Mr Sherwood was well known in Peterborough. He was born here sixty-four years ago and will be remembered by many of the citizens. His wife and three sons in Vancouver survive him, also two brothers, Fred of Vernon, B.C. and Mr. J. H. Sherwood, 551 Bethune street, and one sister, Mrs Lithgow, of Maple Creek.

MANUEL SEEKS DIVORCE.

Differences Over the War Climax, of Domestic Difficulties.

PARIS, April 6.—It is reported from London that now that Portugal is formally at war with Germany, former King Manuel has asked for a commission in the English army, and that he will be divorced very soon from his wife, formerly the Princess Augustine Victoria of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen.

It is no secret that there has never been great cordiality in the former royal menage. On the very morrow of the marriage the Princess left Manuel and began to talk of a divorce. It was only the Pope who was able to calm her fire. Since the war the truce has been an armed one. Manuel has not dissimulated his sympathy for the Allies, while the Princess has declared herself more Hohenzollern and more Prussian than the Kaiser.

The 109th Battalion list of officers reads like the roster of a School of Infantry. The 109th had no less than 28 attached officers in addition to some 36 appointed officers according to the last figures published.

The following is an extract taken from a letter written by a Peterborough member of the 21st Battalion. It refers to Private J. H. Rodgers whose death was announced a few days ago. The letter in part follows:

"Young J. H. Rodgers was the first Peterboro casualty in the 21st Batt., and you may believe I feel pretty bad about it. He was one of the best boys in the company. He was popular throughout the Batt., and more so in his company, and we miss him so much. He was willing, ambitious and never grouched, and was always bright and happy, and I was always pleased to have him around. He was a credit to his town, to his father and mother. If all the boys in Canada turn out and prove the ability that young Scotty did Canada will never be afraid of anything. Young Rodgers will forever live in my mind. He lies out here in the cemetery that belongs to the Liverpool Scottish with a good many of his old comrades on each side and as we paid our last respects tears fell on the grim faces of his pals. I shall pay homage to his little lot whenever I am near, and will you kindly convey to his mother my deepest regret and sympathy and tell her from me he died like a hero and a man.

"I detailed him to a section which was under a sergeant's supervision but the place that they were ordered to was continually strafed with machine fire and young Scotty was standing on the slope of a small hill when he got hit right through the heart, and another was only two feet from him and directly in the rear and had the bullet gone through him it would have got him in the stomach. He died almost instantly and lost but little blood, and died with a smile on his dear face, and now he rests with the One that made him. His platoon officer is writing his mother and father, also is the major."

The many friends of Mr. Geo. W. Allen, Chamberlen street, was invalided home from the front, and who re-enlisted several months ago, will be glad to learn that he has been promoted to the rank of Sergeant-Major in the 49th Battery, C.F.A., Toronto. Sergt.-Major Allen was at the front with the Canadian Field Artillery, having enlisted in the first draft from the 24th Field Battery here, and returned to Peterborough with the rank of sergeant. His promotion is a tribute alike to his ability and to his gameness in signing on again after long months in the hospital after being blown into the air by a shell.

It is published for the information of all concerned that a course of instruction will be organized at District Headquarters, Kingston, for the purpose of instructing applicants in the clerical duties required to be performed at Headquarters and in orderly rooms. The date on which the course will commence will be decided later. Applications to attend this course should be forwarded at once to the A.A.G. Military District No. 3. Commanding officers must exercise care in the selection of candidates to attend this course; only men with good educations and of high intelligence should be recommended. The length of the course will be approximately three weeks.

Sergt. Gower, of the 98rd Battalion, has been removed to the hospital suffering from a severe cold.

So far this week the 98rd Battalion has added twenty-five recruits to its strength, and the parade state this morning showed 931 of all ranks. A big effort will be made to reach the 1,000 mark as soon as possible.

The roads will soon be dry enough to allow the 98rd to take long route marches into the country. Daily marches around the city are now being held.

The outside detachments of the 98rd at Lakefield, Apsley, Indian Village, Havelock and Norwood, will be brought into Peterborough some little time before the battalion goes into camp. The total in these detachments is now over 200 men, while there are a few over 700 stationed in Peterborough.

The latest addition to the Sporting Organizations of the 98rd Battalion is the Bantams Soccer Club, fathered by such doughty little footballers as the trio of Scotties, McKinlay, Shaw and Temple. They're terrors for their size, and have already taken on a battle with an eleven with the formidable name of "Calithumpians." "Chef" McKinlay says the Bantams are the guys who will put the "thump" in "Calithumpian."

After a winter of curling, not to speak of the debates of the Kickers' Club, Skip Herb Martin is doubtless by this time a member of the Sportsman's Battalion, Toronto. He went up a couple of days ago with the intention of joining Col. Greer's boys and hasn't been heard from since, hence the conjecture by his friends that Herb. has lined up with the Sportsmen. He should make a good soldier after Bob Sturgeon's instructions in the goose step. Besides, he has been hacking all winter, "shooting them" and making things generally lively, apart from the military wisdom he must have picked up as an auditor in the rink's council of military strategists. Certainly, Skip Martin was a live member of the club, which will spend its best wishes with him.

PASTOR URGES SPARKING.

Give Young People a Chance to Become Mated, He Urges.

The Rev. H. M. Hancock of the South Meriden church in Hartford, Conn., has qualified as a master cupid and authority on love, courtship and marriage. The principal articles of the new connubial creed are:

"Lovemaking should be encouraged by parents with proper restrictions. Young people should not be teased about being in love. Many girls should be careful to differentiate between love and fascination.

"No man should court a girl during the best day of her life, unless he loves and intends to marry her. Second marriages sometimes prove to be more successful than the first. A man should make a home for his wife and not risk her to live with older or younger people during the first stages of her wedded life.

"It is becoming more difficult every day for a woman to catch a man, for men are not marrying like they used to."

ITALY NEEDS NO CHARITY.

Rome Newspaper Resents Statements of Duchess Elsie Torlonia.

ROME, April 7.—The Giornale d'Italia publishes a long articles in the form of an open letter to Duchess Elsie Torlonia, daughter of Charles A. Moore of New York, relative to her recent interview in The New York Times. It urges her to disavow the statements therein describing Italy as being in a condition of pauperism, and to dispel the painful impression the interview has produced.

The Giornale d'Italia says it does not know whether assistance from America has really come, but that if it has it would be better to refuse it, as was done at the time of the earthquake at Avezzano, as Italy has energy and resources sufficient and has no need to hold out her hand to other countries in order to alleviate the inevitable sufferings caused by the war.

Engineer Crushed; Instantly Killed

Wm. Fenner, Tilbury, Caught Between Fly Wheel and Belt.

Tilbury, Ont., April 7.—At Hallatt's brick and tile factory yesterday morning the engineer, William Fenner, was caught between the large fly wheel and the belt and instantly killed. No one witnessed the accident, but an employee of the fatory saw Fenner with an oil can in his hand about a minute before the machinery in the factory suddenly stopped. Upon investigating, the other employees were horrified to see Fenner lifeless, and flattened out between the large wheels and the belt. The belt had to be cut before the body could be removed.

Deceased was about forty-five years of age, and leaves a wife and seven children. The eldest son, Gerald, is now in England, a private in the 33rd Battalion. Mr. Fenner was a brother-in-law of E. G. Odette, President of the Canadian Top Company, and H. H. Hallat, proprietor of the tile plant. The family removed here from Ruscomb about three years ago.

TURKS ASK PREMIER TO VISIT LONDON AND PARIS RE SEPARATE PEACE FOR TURKEY

Acting Minister of Militia, Hon. A. F. Kemp Has Not Yet Received Word About Canadians at St. Eloi

OTTAWA, April 8.—"I have made special inquiries but haven't yet received word about Canadians at St. Eloi," said Hon. A. E. Kemp, acting Militia Minister, yesterday.

PETROGRAD, April 8.—It is reported from good authority that the young Turks have asked the former Turkish premier to visit London and Paris re a separate peace with Turkey.

LONDON, April 8.—War Office reports that the Archives captured in East Africa show that the Germans tried to suppress Mohammedanism in African Colonies before the war. Complications for the Kaiser in Turkey are expected.

CHICAGO, Ill., April 8.—State's Attorney Hoyne stated yesterday that a plot was discovered in Chicago to assassinate several crowned heads of Europe.

AMSTERDAM, April 8.—A Belgian woman was executed in Brussels as a spy. Several others were sentenced to long terms.

LONDON, April 8.—Two Danish steamers were sunk by the Germans or Austrians in twenty-four hours, also a French steamer. Several lives were lost.

BERLIN, April 8.—German Foreign Office yesterday delivered to the United States Ambassador, the German reply on the Sussex. The nature of it is unknown.

LONDON, April 8.—Canadians made a brave stand against the Germans at St. Eloi. It is understood the casualties are not many.

LIST OF CARGOES CONDEMNED BY BRITAIN PADDED

Estimate of £30,000,000 Greatly Exaggerated, English Treasury Returns Indicate

LONDON, April 8.—The estimate of £30,000,000 worth of cargoes condemned by prize courts is shown to be greatly exaggerated by returns just completed by the Treasury for the consideration of Parliament.

Figures in the reutrns, which include only courts in the United Kingdom up to the end of March, show that condemned cargoes brought a total of £485,667, while proceeds from cargoes of freight uncondemned and still awaiting adjudication and release represent a total of £2,112,267. Much of this, according to the returns, represent perishable cargoes, which had to be sold, and therefore a large proportion of this sum may yet reach the original owners.

It is expected that the figures in the returns show a considerable increase when reports are received from colonial prize courts, especially those from Alexandria, where many German ships have been condemned. There is not the remotest possibility, however, that the grand total will reach the estimate of £30,000,000.

The total net tonnage of blacklisted neutral shipping on the latest list reaches 115,000, as against 80,000 on the previous list. The present issue represents the fourth list, which cancels all previous issues. While exemptions prevent the total withdrawal of this tonnage from allied trade enough has been withdrawn to form a serious factor in the existing shortage of tonnage.

TREATMENT FOR TUBERCULOSIS

JOHN A. THIRTYACRE.

TESTIMONIAL.

I swallowed a large tack in April, 1909, and it lodged in my lung. This developed into tuberculosis. Four doctors treated me but I gradually became worse. Then my sister learned of Nature's Creation and got the medicine for me. When I began taking Nature's Creation, I was having night sweats continually, pains in my chest and both lungs. Several physicians said I could not live over 30 days. After taking the first bottle of Nature's Creation, a wonderful improvement was noticeable and I continue to improve. Weighed 167 pounds; now 185, and never have had any return of the old trouble.

RUSH SHELLS ON SMALL RAILWAYS TO VERDUN ATTACK

Cyril Brown, the New York Times correspondent with the German Crown Prince's Army at Verdun, writes on March 31:

The keynote of the battle for Verdun is ammunition, and the race against time of the German ammunition fleet down the Danube to get the supplies to Constantinople, which I had the privilege to witness in November, was no more absorbing and perhaps was far less important than this relay race from the munition factories of Germany to Verdun.

On the way to the front I passed a continuous procession of ammunition trains, some rolling through Germany, others crawling over the border into France. I saw some of them later, unloading their deadly freight at little shot-to-pieces way stations, on strategic branch lines, well within the range of the French guns, apparently in the faith that the superior German artillery would keep down the fire of the French batteries.

Hundreds and hundreds of field labourers are straining are nerve and muscle to unload the dangerous merchandise quickly and pile it up into vast mounds in comparison with which the great quantities of Russian ammunition found by the Germans in Kovno and Novo-Georgievsk seemed like ant-hills. Other gangs, stimulated by officers, are reloading ammunition into toy cars pulled by toy engines. There are a dozen delivering branches of mobile narrow gauge field railways, coiling snake-like among the batteries. Some of these toy trains puff deep into the fire zone and leave their loads of ammunition at advanced points where there will be battery positions next week perhaps.

Hitched to the miniature ammunition trains are half a dozen little cars, loaded with sections of tracks, all bolted to tiny crossties which simply need to be laid and fastened together. Thus with an eye to the future the Germans are unremittingly pushing their narrow gauge tracks ever closer toward Verdun, forming a close meshed network of ammunition railways.

Soldiers are engaged in the occupation of road building, for next to the millions and millions of shells, good roads are the most vital prerequisite to a successful attack on Verdun, and the fact that miles of good roads, with beds crushed of stone, must be built before the heavy guns can be brought up any closer, accounts in part for the slow rate of German progress.

Denies Britain Asked Dutch Aid

LONDON, April 8. — A despatch from The Hague states that the Foreign Minister denies the report published in a Dutch paper that Great Britain suggested to Holland that she should allow the passage of an army through Dutch Flanders.

Holland has notified Great Britain that owing to the danger of navigation in the North Sea the Holland government will be unable to undertake the transport of exhanged British and German incapacitated prisoners of war.

CROWN PRINCE USES LARGE FORCES IN EFFORT TO SQUEEZE FRENCH OUT OF BETHINCOURT

Storms of Shells Are Bursting Across Both Sides of the French Salient---Will Make Another Attempt to Take Bethincourt

LONDON, April 8.—The Crown Prince has thrown large forces across the Forges brook in a determined effort to squeeze the French out of Bethincourt, Paris reported to-day.

Storms of shells are bursting across both sides of the French salient. The bombardment is in preparation for another attempt to take Bethincourt and all the positions included in the loop formed by French lines by crushing in the sides of the salient.

The French defence of Bethincourt positions for more than a fortnight under tremendous difficulties, has aroused the admiration of English military men. Almost surrounded and under the searching fire of scores of German guns, the French have maintained their positions with the loss of only 300 yards of trenches.

They have repulsed time and again German attempts to gain a foothold in Bethincourt by frontal assault, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

A German thrust against the western side of Bethincourt salient developed into a powerful stroke delivered on a front of more than a mile east of Hancourt.

This attempt, Paris reported, was even less successful than the effort to crush in the eastern side of the salient, made Thursday night.

The Germans were driven back to their trenches without making any gains.

Prince Poniatowski Declares Verdun Never Will Be Taken

NEW YORK, April 7.—Prince Poniatowski of Poland, was a passenger on board the Espagne, of the French Line which reached this port from Bordeaux on Thursday. Prince Poniatowski is here to care for his private interests. After having carefully watched the German attack at Verdun he told an interesting story of the mistakes of the German troops, and stated that in the early attacks on the French stronghold the flower of the German army was used without satisfactory results.

"I do not care to discuss the war in a manner that would disclose any action that has been or might be taken by the allied troops," said Prince Poniatowski. "But I may be able to throw some light on the first days of Verdun. I am in a position to know that the Germans used the flower of their ahmy during the attacks of the first four days and though the attacks were valiant the result must have been discouraging to the offensive. The first four days marked the most severe fighting. The German attacks were repulsed, the best German troops beaten, and since that time the attacks while determined have been growing weaker and weaker. Verdun will not fall. I might say right here that since the beginning of the war the German soldier was a professional while the Frenchman was more or less of an amateur. But since that time, through experience, the French have become professionals and better professionals than the Germans.

"The French losses at Champagne taught a lesson. The French are now letting the artillery and the machine guns meet the German attacks and the infantry is saved. At present we can make better soldiers out of the French civilians than Germany can out of her civilians in a given time. The Germans pursue their old methods of warfare, sacrificing their best troops, and as they do the odds between the two armies become less and less.

LOSSES OF PRUSSIAN GUARDS.

"As an example of how the Germans have used their best troops I call your attention to Ypres. The famous Prus-Guard was wiped out. There is a new Prussian Guard but the new Guard lives in the name only. Among the prisoners taken before Verdun there were many soldiers of the class of 1916, the best now available. True our best troops are now at the front but we are saving them for the general attack. We find that what might be termed second class troops, protected by trenches and aided by artillery and machine guns can hold of the attacks of the best German soldiers. I believe that the ratio of loss between the Allies and the Germans is approximately four to one with Germany on the losing side.

"I might add a word with regard to the Zeppelins. They have been a rank failure as an engine of war and have acted as boomerangs to Germany. The attacks on England, London in particular, have only served to arouse the anger of the British and caused patriotism to arise to a high pitch. The enormous cost has not been justified by the results for from a military standpoint the result has been zero, and the killing of women and children has aroused the disgust and the anger of neutral nations. Germany argues that the Zeppelin attacks are justified even though women and children be killed, because war is war.

"If this is so and the Zeppelin is a military engine of destruction why have they not been used along the entire battle front where bombs dropped would have killed combatants and not defenceless ones?

SAFER TO ATTACK LONDON

"As for the continued attacks on London it is because the Zeppelins are much safer in attacking that city than they are Paris. In attacking the latter city they must pass over the fighting line and their approach is signalled by wireless to Paris fully 45 minutes before they reach there. They are subjected to the fire of the anti-aircraft guns from the trenches and from the city. Again, on the return they must meet the guns in the trenches. When attacking London, they merely have to cross a body of water and they are upon the city before their approach can be heralded."

LONDON, April 18.—General Smuts won an important success for the British in East Africa.

LONDON, April 8. — Germans are making preparations for a mighty struggle between Ypres and the coast.

LONDON, April 8.— All efforts of the Germans to advance from Haucourt were stopped by the French. The enemy losses before Verdun are estimated at two hundred thousand.

OTTAWA, April 8.—Minister of Finance ras presented supplesmntary estimates for fifty millions needed immediately.

Roumania Sees Bulgarian Coup

LONDON, April 8.—A despatch from Bucharest, filed by a correspondent on March 21, says that in view of the undisguised military preparations of Bulgaria on the Roumanian frontier the government of Roumania is taking "necessary military measures." Premier Bratiano also has prolonged the parliamentary session until the end of April, so as to be ready to deal as quickly as possible with any Bulgarian surprise which, the correspondent says, in the opinion of some persons, is by no means out of the question.

The Roumanian press comments strongly on the despatch of large Bulgarian forces, said to amount to six divisions, for the purpose, the newspapers say, of attacking Dobrudja, which Roumania acquired from Bulgaria after the second Balkan war. The Roumanian press also dwells on what it considers the hostile sentiment created by Bulgarian newspapers, and demands the recall of S. Radew, the Bulgarian Minister at Bucharest, who is accused of stirring up trouble in Dobrudja.

British Beer Output Is To Be Reduced

LONDON, April 7. —A reduction in the output of beer by 28 per cent., as compared with 1913 and 1914, and a curtailment of importation of brewing material by 33 1-3 per cent. will be effected by an arrangement with the brewers, according to an announcement made to the House of Commons by Walter Runchman, President of the Board of Trade.

Last year the output was reduced by thirteen per cent. A further reduction does not mean that the public will spend less for their beer, as the brewers will be allowed to make as much as previously, but the beer will be more diluted.

C. P. R. RETALIATES WITH EMBARGO AGAINST I. C. R.

Alleges Failure of Government Railways to Take Loads, Causing Block

MONTREAL, April 8.—The Canadian Pacific Railway has placed a temporary embargo on loaded cars for delivery to the International portion of the Canadian Government Railways, on account of the failure of the Government road to take loads which the C.P.R. is holding and has held, in some cases for six weeks, resulting in congestion which is seriously hampering movement of traffic through C.P.R. terminals. It is stated that six hundred such cars are lying idle, waiting acceptance by the Canadian Government Railways. It is understood that a considerable quantity of goods manufactured in Peterborough for export have been affected by the inability of the I. C. R. to handle the freight.

HOW YOU MAY REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT

Overstoutness is a very unwelcome condition especially in the present day, when slender figures are so fashionable, and every reader of this paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat.

If you happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, don't try to starve yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form and take one with each meal.

Oil of orilene increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fatty tissue, in many cases at nearly the rate of one lb. per day. Be sure to get oil of orilene in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any good druggist has it, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1249, Montreal, Can.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"Flower of the Gorse"

BY LOUIS TRACY

She obeyed, though in a pitiable state of nervousness. In the cold, clear light of a December day diamonds and rubies, sapphires and emeralds, winked at her evilly as her trembling fingers turned over the contents of the cases, which had evidently been extracted from a larger receptacle so that they might be disposed of in Raymond's clothing without attracting attention by their bulk.

"Yes," she faltered, "I believe that every article is here."

"Now," said Tollemache, turning again to the ashen-faced Raymond, "I've proved my charge in the presence of witnesses. The stolen goods have been found in your possession. I admit that it is sheer good luck alone that swung the investigation my way Had you been searched to-night, we might have whistled for the actual proof, because Mrs. Carmac's property would have been lying beneath the sea on the reef, unless it happned to be picked up by the diver. The facts are simple. You were with Mrs. Carmac in the deck saloon of the Stella during the gale. When Mr. Carmac shouted to his wife that the yacht had broken down, and would be dashed ashore within ten minutes, Mrs. Carmac fainted. Neither you nor anyone on board realised that the vessel would strike on Les Verres and not on the coast.

"Being a thief in heart, you remembered that a small fortune was lying in those two boxes, and you thought you had plenty of time to open them, secure both the money and the jewels, and trust to luck for escape when the yacht was wrecked. If either of the employers was saved, and inquiry seemed possible, you had the plausible excuse that you were safeguarding the most valuable part f their property. You might have found some difficulty in explaining how you came to be in possession of duplicate keys; but you took the chance. I must say that for a man at the very gates of death you displayed a cool nerve which might command admiration if applied to a worthy object.

"As I happened, there was one man who kept an eye on you. Jackson here was below at the time, preparing tea. The sudden racing of the engines, the stoppage of the screw, and the fact that the yacht was drifting told him what had occurred. Then he heard the cry 'All ands on deck!' and was himself running along the gangway when he saw you rush down the main companion and dart into the cabin occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Carmac. Thinking you might need his help he followed you.

"By the time he reached the door you had Mrs. Carmac's box open, and had snatched the jewelcase, which being locked, you stuffed into a breast pocket. Then you turned to Mr. Carmac's trunk, and were about to insert a key, when the yacht struck, and fell on her beam ends. The heavy trunk rolled on top of you, and broke your arm. Jackson thought you were killed; but in the same instant he was flung across the lower saloon, and had his ankle dislocated. When he was lying there you managed to crawl in and join him, and each of you was carried out by the crew later. Is that the correct story, Jackson?"

"True as the Gospel, every word, s'elp me!" said Jackson.

"So you see, Raymond, this poor fellow didn't know what to think during the last few days. He couldn't swear that you actually took the case, because you were kneeling beside the box, and your back was towards him. But you took something, and until the search was made and the robbery discovered he could not be certain what it was. He had his suspicions, but wisely kept a still tongue; though, had he left Pont Aven earlier, he meant to tell me what he had seen. Last night he and Captain Popple and I reviewed the facts carefully. In the first instance, we believed that you meant to drop the jewels overboard to-day, and then cause a careful search to be made in that exact place. I know why you were willing to relinquish your loot. I'll deal with that side of the nasty business in a minute or two. Secondly, I called on Dr. Garnier early this morning, and both he and the nurse assured me that, notwithstanding the physical agony you were suffering when brought ashore, you insisted on removing your coat yourself, placed it on a chair, and stipulated that your clothes should not be touched by anyone. Of course I had to do a bit of guessing; but I guessed right.

Yvonne, now that the shock of an extraordinary and painful scene was yielding to a sense of its paramount importance in view of Raymond's previous attitude, was gazing at Tollemache with new wonder in her eyes. The light-hearted, happy-go-lucky dabbler in art had conducted this remarkable investigation into a crime with the easy assurance of a skilled lawyer. He had marshaled his facts lucidly. He had decided on the one method that would insure complete success, and had adopted it without hesitation. Each trenchant sentence had a sledge-hammer effect on the culprid, who saw his inmost thoughts laid bare mercilessly, yet in a manner wholly devoid of heat or bluster. She could not find it in her heart to pity Raymond; but she was aware, for the first time in her life, of a species of awe with regard to Tollemache.

The man who was judge and jury and prosecuting counsel in this new and thrilling form of criminal procedure had not, however, reached the end of his brief. He nodded to Popple and Jackson.

"Thanks" he said quietly. "We've carried that job almost to a finish without a hitch. I'll join you on the terrace when Mrs. Carmac has settled matters with this chap."

Raymond made one last effort to assert himself. "I have not interfered with your stage effect," he sneered. "It was not necessary. I shall explain to Mrs. Carmac, and to none other, why her jewels came to be in my care."

"Don't think it!" said Lorry, smiling pleasantly into the sensful face raised to his. "I'm not through with you yet. You're dealing with a man now, not with a terrified woman. So long, you two! I'll soon make an end of our unworthy secretary!"

The two men saluted silently and went out.

When the door had closed on them Tollemache drew some sheets of manuscript from a pocket.

"You've heard the evidence and verdict, Raymond," he said, piercing the defeated schemer with unwavering eyes. "Now I shall proceed to pass sentence. I have jotted down here a full confession. In return for my clemency you will undertake never to interfere in any way with regard to Mrs. Carmac's second marriage. You understand exactly what I mean. You and I both know why you were giving up to the vagaries of the sea thousands of pounds' worth of pearls and diamonds.

"This bargain as between you and me. Mrs. Carmac herself is not a party to it. I return her jewels and she asks no questions. So long as you hold your to it, I return her jewels, and she asks will ignore the facts I have made known this morning. Breathe one syllable affecting her private affairs, whether to-day, or next year, or in twenty years, and your signed confession of the theft is handed over to proper authorities. You need not hope to extricate yourself by appeals or threats. Your fate doesn't rest with Mrs. Carmac, but with me, and if the occasion arises I'll crush you as I would a scorpion. Sit down, if you're tired, or feel faint. But keep your wits active.

"It's now or never for you! You either agree or go to jail, and if you choose the latter of course, you'll find French law devilish unpleasant to any scoundrel who tries to bolster up his offence by trading on a woman's bygone history."

CHAPTER XIV
A BRETON RECKONING.

Raymond squirmed, but signed the confession. Tollemache forced the he the proffered terms or concoct schemes of reprisal in a cell. At the last moment Mrs. Carmac intervened.

"I know what it means to be tempted, and to yield," she said sadly, realizing now that her own somewhat checkered record was not hidden from anyone in that room. "You, Mr. Raymond, have only yourself to blame for your misfortunes. Even yur physical injury is the direct outcome of an attempt to steal the few trinkets I prize. But I would never forgive myself if I turned you out into the world penniless and suffering. Please tell me the truth. Have you any money?"

"Very little" came the sullen answer. "I have spent a good deal during the last few days."

"But how?" she cried, genuinely surprised. "You are under no expense here."

"Since candor is in the air, I may as well acquaint you with the facts," said Raymond bitterly. "You blurted out your own secret, and I thought I saw a way of improving my position. I should have won too if it were not for a piece of cursed ill luck in the finding of those boxes. I employed Duquesne to ferret out your early history in Paris. If I disappear, you had better pay him well, or he may take it into his head to go to Rupert Fosdyke with the story. Of course I don't expect you to place much credence in anything I say; but mere commonsense should show you that the only safe course is to send me to Paris with sufficient means to secure Duquesne's silence .That is a fair offer. Take it or leave it, as you will. Let me point out, however, that the Madeleine Demeret affair supplies a reasonable excuse for my journey, and, if you are as generous as you can afford to be I promise to devote myself wholly to the task of diverting any suspicions Duquesne may have formed as to the motive behind my previous instructions."

Tollemache, with a wisdom beyond his years, seemed to know when to strike and when to hold his hand. Raymond's suggestion was eminently reasonable. The evil spirit that had raised all this commotion could best allay it.

"Come Yvonne," he said. "Let us leave Mrs. Carmac to determine this matter as she thinks fit. I offer no opinion. Mrs. Carmac has not compounded a felony,—that responsibility rests with me,—and, if she chooses to employ Raymond in a personal undertaking, I cannot interfere. He knows the penalty if she is troubled by any future act of his. I'll hunt him round the globe!"

Yvonne never knew what terms her mother made with Ramond. That they did not err on the side of parsimony may be taken for granted. Long after the tornado that swept through Pont Aven that Christmastide was forgotten by all save a few, the ex-secretary was able to buy a share in an automobile agency.

Lorry was hugely amused as the two descended the stairs. "Socrates believes there isn't any guile in my composition," he grined. "I wonder what he'll say when he reads the screed to which that beauty has just put his left-handed signature?"

"Dad will agree with me that you carried a very difficult mtater through with great skill, Lorry," said Yvonne.

"But the joke is that if Raymond stuck to his guns I was done for. Who cares tuppence whether a skunk like him goes to prison or not? Not a soul! But the whole press of Europe would stand up on its hind legs and roar if the Carmac millions were thrown into the melting pot of the law courts. Don't you see, Yvonne, I had to rush Raymond off his feet. I've broken about twenty statutes made and provided. If he had shown one quarter the nerve in that room which he displayed when the Stella was drifting on to the reef, he could have laughed at me."

"For all that, Lorry, you were very clever, and I think you're a dear," said Yvonne quietly.

Neither her father nor her lover should ever be told now of the sordid compact that Raymond had put before her during that memorable walk by the side of the Aven. She would simply erase the hateful record from her mind; but she could not close her eyes to the certain fact that Raymond's daring project had shriveled into nothingness because he saw that, no matter what the consequences, Mrs. Carmac's daughter would never marry a common thief. That phase had passed like the stupour of a nightmare. The vital problem presented by her mother's future remained insoluble as ever.

Dreadful Horrors of the Turkish Cholera Camps.

The scenes of death and desolation and despair which are part and parcel of the kingdom of the god of battles have been brought so vividly minds of peaceful people as in terribly realistic pictures of the Turkish cholera camps and in the dis- of hardened war correspon- whose souls sickened at the horrors they witnessed. There were several cholera camps, but the most dreadful examples of irremediable suf- and wholesale deaths, under conditions that made death a welcome were seen in the main camp Hademkeni, a short distance be- the headquarters of Nazim the Turkish commander-in- on the Tchatalja lines.

The horrid scenes in the villages in rear of the army pale altogether in insignificance when compared with the horrors of Hademkeni," wrote correspondent of The London Daily "where the remnants of army defeated at Lule Burges finally rallied. Three days ago over the hills from the place I was encamped, intending to Hademkeni. I mounted the last which hid the valley in which lies, and then I was brought to a standstill by the awful chaos of which arose from beneath me. I was gazing into the valley of the shadow of death. There is a station Hademkeni, and a train was in the station. It was black with the wretched specimens of sick hu- vainly seeking to escape from the dread spectre. The large square in the centre of Hademkeni resembled a mammoth fly-paper in midsummer. was covered with the corpses of the dead and the writhing bodies of the in all attitudes—some prone, some sitting, some kneeling, some con- shifting, some with hands as if in supplication. In parts of the area the dead were piled in heaps; in others those still living were almost as closely packed. The shrieking lake of misery was be- constantly fed by rivulets of bearers, bringing in fresh from the camps and forts, by others who crawled in of their own accord, seeming to prefer to end their days in the company of their fellow men, or else expecting to find

TRUE IRISH BULLS.

They Have a Flavor All Their Own, "the Effect of Climate."

BRANDS FROM OTHER LANDS.

The Best of the French Bulls Are Acted, Not Spoken—Some Droll Examples of the Italian, Portuguese, Dutch and German.

Sir Richard Steele explained why his countrymen made bulls: "'Tis the effect of the climate, sir. If an Englishman were born in Ireland he would make as many," said he. It is not every one who knows a bull when he sees her. It may be no bull, but merely a blunder—a betise, as the French have it. To make sure that we have the true criterion let us first set down a few of the genuine, orthodox Irish kind:

He built the wall wider than it was high, so that when it fell down it should be higher than it was wide.

Two weary and footsore Irishmen come to a milestone, ten miles to Dublin. "Arrah," says one, "'tis but five miles apiece."

Disputing of the date of St. Patrick's birthday, "He couldn't have had two unless he was twins."

An Irish sailor reported that in Philadelphia they copper bottomed the tops of the houses with sheet lead.

Give me the loan of a hatchet to saw an empty barrel of flour in two to make the dog a pigpen.

His estate is divided by impenetrable furze ditches made of quarried stones set on edge.

An Irishman, describing a glorious fight, said, "There was only one whole nose in the house, and that was the taypot's."

In these and in hundreds like them we have the true flavor of the Irish bull.

There are genuine bulls in French, but they are rare. The genius of the language does not lend itself to anything less than neat precision. A French bull is usually nothing more than a betise. Still, French bulls exist.

Leon, Bishop and Count of Lisieux wrote to the Duchess of Brissac as follows:

"Madame, knowing how fond you are of red partridges, I send you herewith half a dozen. Three of them are gray, and one is a woodcock. You will find this letter in the bottom of the basket."

A Frenchman used a large stone jar for a pillow, explaining that it was not hard because he had stuffed it full of hay.

The very best French bulls are acted, not spoken. The Duke de St. Simon relates that a lady, lying ill, was much disturbed by the ringing of the church bells. To deaden the noise her lover had the street in front of her house laid with straw.

A spoken bull in French is apt to be something different from the Irish variety, something more like a betise, as has been said. And it is difficult to retain the flavor in translation. "Ce sont toujours les memes soldats qui se font tuer," says Marshal Bugeaud of his army. This loses a little when one translates, "It is always the same soldiers who get themselves killed."

"En fait d'inutilites il ne faut que le necessaire" is more highly colored in the French than in its translation, "Only so many useless things are required as are strictly necessary."

Here is the translation of part of an Italian letter:

"We have had a most famous earthquake. If by the mercy of God it had lasted for another half hour we should all have gone to paradise, from which may God deliver us. Whether you receive this letter or not, please advise me in either case."

Here is a Portuguese bull. In offering a reward for the recovery of the corpse of a drowned man his relatives remarked that the deceased might be identified, if found, by a slight impediment in his speech.

After much research it has been so far impossible to discover a genuine Spanish bull, but here is a Dutch bull:

"The pig had no marks on his ears except a short tail."

And here is a German bull:

"Der Zahn der Zeit, der alle Thranen trocknet, wird auch uber diese Sache Gras wachsen lassen" ("The tooth of time, that wipes away all tears, will permit grass to grow over this matter also").

Blunders in English speech are not uncommon. The orthodox bull of Ireland has scarcely crossed the channel.

A fellow of the Royal society speaks of "the earthquake that had had the honor to be noticed by the Royal society."

"The West Indies will now have a future which they have never had in the past" sounds promising until one sees that its bullish quality is a mere blunder by which the word "opportunity" was omitted. There is none of the flavor of the famous definition of salt by the Irish schoolboy. "Salt is that which makes your potatoes taste nasty if you don't put it in."

Even the best of the foreign bulls in Latin tongues evoke the suspicion that they are mere translations from Irish originals. The Dutch, the Germans and perhaps the English may have the genuine article at times. No distinctively American bulls have emerged from the long research that is the foundation of these few paragraphs.—New York Sun.

Skeleton of Child Found In An Attic

OWEN SOUND, April 7.—The skeleton of what is believed to have been a new-born child was found yesterday morning in the attic of the home of Mr. J. Sloan at 1,064 Third Avenue east here, when the attic was explored for the first time by Mr. Sloan.

There are no stairs to the attic, entrance being secured through a manhole. Doctors who examined the skeleton say it may have been there one year or perhaps even several years. There have been several tenants in the house within the past few years. The Sloan family has been at the dwelling only a short time. Mr. Sloan promptly notified the police of the discovery.

Coroner Dow is investigating but it is thought that nothing would be gained by holding an inquest at this time.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to flush Kidneys neutralize irritating acids

Kidney and bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter the acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation, and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders, caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

MEREDITH AS A CHILD.

When Only Two Years of Age He Had an Air of Superiority.

As is generally the case with an only child, brought up entirely in the society of his elders, George Meredith developed early and always had something of contempt for juveniles of his own age. He was a reserved and acutely sensitive boy, afraid of ghosts and being left alone in the dark, and was perhaps a trifle spoiled by his mother, a refined woman, whose love and care he lost before he reached his sixth birthday. There is still living a gentleman who well remembers George Meredith at the age of two years. This was about 1830-1, and Mr. James Price relates of his visit:

"I went up to the large front drawing room, where I found the boy and a lady who must have been his mother. The boy did not seem to care much about playing with me, and I was rather shy. He brought me his toys and picture books to see, and I was mightily pleased, I remember, with a horse and cart (not like the many cheap ones that I had seen), a beautiful, lifelike white horse, and the cart of superior make, and as George drew it along it made music as the wheels went round. What I remember of the child's appearance is somewhat hazy—a boy in white frock and blue ribbons tied up his sleeves, but he was certainly a pretty child. I spent the afternoon with him, but we did not get on much together, as he assumed a sort of superiority."—Fortnightly Review.

MAKING WATCHES.

Wonderful Feats That Are Performed by Modern Machinery.

The rapidity with which watches are nowadays manufactured has been made possible by the ingenious machinery designed within recent years for the making of all parts of a watch. The speed with which these various parts are turned out is little short of marvelous. Great sheets of brass and steel are cut and rolled into ribbons and punched out into wheels at the rate of 10,000 a day from each punching machine. Workers drill the thirty-one holes in the roof of the watch as fast as they can count.

Brass wire glides into a machine that measures off the length of a part, turns it, puts a screw thread on each end and actually screws it in at the rate of 2,000 a day.

The screws are of such tiny size that fifty gross of them may be put in a woman's thimble, while of others there are a thousand gross to the pound.

Balances are cut from the solid steel, ground down, worked up and drilled with their twenty-five screw holes apiece at the rate of 100 wheels a day from each machine.

Wheels have their teeth cut, a couple of dozen at a time, some with from sixty to eighty teeth, at the rate of 1,200 wheels a day from each machine. —Harper's Weekly.

The Physiotype.

This is an English invention for making pictures by impression of leaves, ferns, lace, feathers and various other objects. It depends upon the chemical action of a fine powder. The object of which a representation is to be made is placed upon white paper and pressed, either by the hand or by other means. When the object is removed no impression is visible on the paper, but upon sprinkling the powder over the paper the picture at once appears, sharply defined, and remains permanent. Sections of wood and designs of coins and medals can thus be represented, and the prints can be transferred to lithographic stone, zinc or aluminium, thus producing records from which any number of copies can be taken.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Very Much Happier.

A boy reading the verse, "And those who live in cottages are happier than those who sit on thrones," startled the crowd by reading thus: "And those who live in cottages are happier than those who sit on thorns."

Heard of Him.

"'Man wants but little here below,'" quoted Blank.

"I've heard of that man," said Tank, cutting him off. "But did you ever know anybody that has ever seen him?"

THERE IS HEALTH IN RICH RED BLOOD
ANAEMIA
Disease germs take advantage of every weakness of the human system. Their greatest enemy is rich, red blood, but when the blood gets thin and watery they increase rapidly and easily gain the upper hand. In this way grip, pneumonia, consumption and other germ diseases get a foothold on the system almost before you know it.
Anaemia or poverty of the blood makes itself known by pallor of the gums, lips and inside of the eyelids, you feel weak and languid, the heart's action weakens, you are easily tired out and find yourself short of breath.
The blood is thin and watery, and is lacking in the red corpuscles which represent the nutritious element of the blood. Because Dr. Chase's Nerve Food increases the number of red corpuscles and thereby enriches the blood, it is the most effective means available of curing anaemia and fortifying the system against the attack of disease.
On account of the weakened condition of the blood from anaemia, there is always danger of developing Dropsy or Pernicious Anaemia, from which there is small chance of recovery.
With the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to build up the richness of the blood, the color is soon restored to the pallid skin, and you find yourself gaining in health and strength. The heart's action is strengthened and gradually the muscular weakness is replaced by new vigor and energy.
Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is truly doing wonders for many thousands of anaemic men and women and puny boys and girls, whose blood has got thin and weak. Put it to the test and you will better understand why so many people are enthusiastic in its praise.

AN ANCIENT DISCOVERER.

Gold Came Before Silver in the Early Use of Metals.

It is not known just when gold was first used by man as ornament and coin, but 4,400 years ago the people of the far east and in the countries of northern Africa made most exquisite jewelry out of gold and precious stones. In fact, the art of their hand wrought ornaments has never been excelled, and modern man has learned from them in technical skill. Gold as used in the early times was probably found in the form of nuggets, as the ancients would hardly have noticed it in any other form. They hammered it by hand and gave it a most beautiful polish.

Silver was not discovered for a long time after gold was in use in many countries, and when at last some one did discover it he thought it a form of gold, and it became known as "white gold." The discovery of copper soon followed that of silver, and then in succession came tin, zinc and lead. An ingenious savage who lived in upper Egypt succeeded in making brass by fusing copper and zinc, and later he manufactured bronze by a mixture of copper and tin. This occurred about 4500 B.C., and the inventor's name was Anubis.

And Anubis made the first metallic axe, knife and chisel, and also he gave us the original saw, taking for his model, so we are told, 'the ohán bepe of a snake.' Like the teeth of a snake, the first saw's teeth inclined backward.

Anubis also invented the first musical instrument of which we have knowledge. He used for a sounding board the empty shell of a tortoise across which were strung four tortoise sinews as strings. Afterward this instrument was enlarged and a goat's horns used for posts. It still had four strings and a bridge and brace. This crude musical instrument became known as the lyre, and from it developed all known stringed instruments. Of this instrument a historian says:

"Horns afterward enlarged and improved the lyre by increasing the number of strings to seven, though two of them had the same pitch. He also provided a strap to support the increased weight of the instrument. It was then called by the Greeks a cithara or kithara, and in central Africa it is yet called a kasar. The Greek Terpander added an eighth string, called octachord, from which comes our word octave.

"Anubis seems to have composed a song and sung it to the accompaniment of the harp. He was also the first songster and poet of whom we have any knowledge."

Thus it will be seen that metals are very old in the uses to which man has put them and musical instruments also of very ancient date, though for countless generations there was no written music and the player composed his own melodies as he went along, which were exceedingly simple.

When the sermon is good we need not much concern ourselves about the form of the pulpit.—Ruskin.

Charged With Theft of Narcotic Tablets

Leamington Youth Held in Windsor —Said to Have Robbed Drug Store.

Windsor, April 7.—Ray Schneider, eighteen years old, of Leamington, is being held by the Windsor police on a charge of stealing 1,500 tablets of a narcotic drug, said to be valued at $300, from the drug store of Dr. J. Doyle, Essex.

Schneider was arrested by Traffic Officer Broderick, as he stepped from the Detroit ferry this evening. It is said he admitted being in Essex Friday night when the robbery took place, but stoutly denied any knowledge of it. Schneider said he had been a victim of the "dope habit" until four months ago, when he cured himself, he declared, by will power.

Schneider was taken to Essex tonight. He will be given an examination to-morrow.

WAR NO NOVELTY THERE.

Conflicts Have Cut Population of Diarbekir From 300,000 to 40,000.

One of the important cities of Asia Minor lying in the region in which the Russian and Turkish armies have been in contact for some time is Diarbekir, situated on the upper Tigris, which, at this point, is a stream flowing through a deeply-cut open valley.

Few cities of the earth have undergone greater vicissitudes than Diarbekir. Roman and Persian, Armenian and Parthian, Arab and Turk have disputed its possession. In one of its many changes alone, more than 80,000 of its people were put to the sword. So heavy has been the toll that war has levied upon it that where once it was larger than the capital of the United States, to-day less than 40,000 people dwell there.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

THROAT TROUBLES One of the most trying winters for many years has just passed into history. Throat troubles, La Grippe, Pneumonia and other difficulties of the respiratory organs have been numerous and severe in nearly all parts of the country. Whooping cough has added to the other ailments and has seemed to be scattered everywhere. Some schools had to be closed and many of the little folks failed to survive the combinations of indifferent treatment, severe weather and contagious diseases. Even now, as the warm weather approaches some of them still look pale and thin and severe coughs with inflamed throats are common.

The Home Health Club, of course, gets prompt reports from its various members as they do in all parts of the world. I find, however, that their reports nearly all are about families living near them who do not have access to the Home Health Club articles and therefore do not know how to avoid such ailments

Not all of the Club members are exempt, for no matter how careful a mother may be, the little fellows get out in he snow, which is alright and proper, but they do not always tell mother their feet are wet and cold. They play around the room possibly go to sleep on the floor, and mother does not discover the dangerous condition until she begins preparing the child for bed. Then she finds that the trouble is already started, and if she is wise she will soak the little feet in hot water, dry them thoroughly and then rub them with olive oil when she puts the little one to bed. A cold compress should be put around its throat if there is the least sign of inflammation, and over the compress a dry flannel should be safely pinned. All this should be left on all night and removed before the morning bath. The chances are that there will be no further trouble and no more sore throat, because the right treatment is applied at the right time, but where the little one is put into a cold bed in a poorly ventilated sleeping room, without any attention whatever the chances are that before morning there will be an attack of either croup, tonsilitis, bronchitis or pneumonia, and the least trouble to expect would be a very sore throat and a bad cold. A very little of the proper treatment in the beginning will save a vast amount of trouble later on and possibly may save the little life.

It does no ood to scold the little one for getting wet. You did the same thing when you were the same age and can no doubt thank a kind and thoughtful mother that you are alive to-day to have and care for children of your own.

I find that the great number of families who depend upon the instructions given i nthese lectures and the Home Health Club books is increasing daily and many write me that since they began observing the Club methods of living their doctor bills have been a minus quantity while the health of their families has been at par and plus.

For a simple cold affecting the lung a tea made from four ounces of the powder of asclepias tuberosa and one pint of water is highly recommended. It shold not be given in teaspoonful doses. It restores the normal secretions of the skin.

The use of asparagus at this time of the year is beneficial in helping the kidneys to throw out accumulated waste matter. Rhubarb also which is plentiful, should be used freely. It makes a very appetising sauce and delicious pies and while appealing to the palate affords medicinal properties of no mean value.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S THREE-GORED SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

In a number of the skirt models for practical wear the practical points are brought out in a charming way and we are made to feel that the designer had heart and head in the work. However, there are those among us who have to practise economy to such degree that we want a practical looking skirt with just enough novelty to it to make it fit for wear on any occasion with a dainty waist. Precisely this blend is seen in the illustration:—

No. 7,663.—Showing the sensible, smart lines of the practical garment, this three gored skirt has the right front lapping over the left where the invisible closing is made as the tailored seam might suggest. The gores are arranged so that the utmost grace is given to the fall of the garment. Beginning at knee depth, covered buttons one inch apart trim in the manner of fashion to-day. Strikingly novel is the feature of the outside belt with tab ends; buttons also trim these. If preferred this belt with tabs may be omitted, the effect being as shown in the smaller illustration.

This pattern is cut inseises 24 to 32 inch waist measure. To make in size 24 waist will require 3⅛ yards of 36 inch material

You may obtain the pattern by sending 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

RIBBON AS TRIMMING ON FROCK AND BLOUSE

All Widths and Kinds Favoured in Wonderful Colourings

For Girdles, Panniers, Bodices and Bandings

NEW YORK, April 8—"Suivez-moi, jeune homme," gaily invite the ribbons floating from the brim of a dainty, French garden hat. And "suivez-moi," teasingly repeat the bons floating from every conceivable point on the dainty lingerie, or silken frock this summer, for ribbons are the trimmings favoured by Fashion for hats, frocks, bouses, petticoats and parasols. Many a frock slightly passe, has been given a new lease of life by this ribbon fad. If hopelessly worn around the lower edge, a width of ribbon, wide or narrow, according to the need, is added making the frock more attractive if anything, than when it was in its first youth.

Ribbon Bodices on Evening Gowns

The entire bodice of many of the dainty net and taffeta frocks for dancing or evening wear, is formed of wide satin, taffeta, or one of the fantastic, beautifully embroidered or metallic ribbons. To fashion one of thes ribbon bodices is simple enough, the ribbon is merely draped about the waist, well over the bust in front and brought down in back to form a V, finishing in a large, softly-tied bow. The transparent material of the frock itself usually veils the ribbon, adding a still softer, more graceful effect.

The Ribbon Pannier or Farthingale

Many of our skirt draperies which carry out the demand for the bouffant effect about the hips, constituting the new silhouette, are effected with ribbon. On a most attractive model of dark gray taffeta, with the new Premet collar was a drapery of wide black moire ribbon, pleated over the hips to stand out stiffly, coming down front and back in straight lengths, lapping at the bottom to form a panel. The ceffect was most attractive, and it was a touch which any woman with clever fingers can apply to almost any frock with equally good results.

7041—6773

Girdles of all widths, and kinds of ribbons, are being made up and sold in the shops as accessories to be added to the tub-frock of voile, linen, or other of the summer cottons. For silk and net dresses, there are metallic ribbon-girdles finished with long sash-ends weighted with metallic tassels. Ribbon flowers add a touch of effective contrast, or the one needed bit of colour to the somber frock; and narrow satin, taffeta, or picot edged faille ribbon is used to band a cuffe, edge a collar, or add just a bit of trimming to a straight, full skirt of a simple summer dress.

How Ribbon is Used on Hats.

It would be quite safe to say, in many instances, that the hat is fashioned of ribbon and trimmed with straw, for such is really the case. Many of the summer hats, both large and small, have the crown and most of the brim fashioned of taffeta, satin, or moire ribbon, edged perhaps with a band of two of hemp, Milan or angora braid. A particularly pretty hat of Maria Guy's is a wide brimmed black hemp sailor, with crown of wide gray taffeta ribbon crossed and brought down under the brim to form a large loop on each side of the head, trimming the face.

The HOME CIRCLE COLVMN

ROAD THAT LEADS TO HOME.

It's hol for the road that leads to home
When my toil is done and the night draws near;
What matter if bones and muscles ache
When I go to the refuge dear?

The welcoming lights from the windows gleam,
And a chubby face at the pane I see
As I hurry my steps, with a quickened heart,
To the dear ones who wait for me.

And when I arrive — how they close me in!
I am showered with love, as the needs require,
And laughingly led to my easy chair
In the glow of the open fire.

There's a smile and a kiss from my chum and wife,
And a love that she can't conceal
Comes shining out of her eyes to me
As we sit at our evening meal.

Then we read and chat of the day's events.
Till sleep comes to the eyes of blue,
And someone says, with a drowsy kiss,
"Good night, daddy, I love you!"

So it's hol for the road that leads to home,
Dear land of the heart's desire,
To the loyal and loving ones who wait,
And my easy chair by the fire.

Children in a family should be treated as a gardner cares for his flowers. He realizes that they require different lights, soils, moisture, shade and attention The treatment that would make a rose win a gold medal at a horticultural show, might kill an orchid. He studies the plants, their nabits, needs, peculiarities and individuality He seeks to discover how each grows naturally. He does not force his process on nature; but seeks humbly to follow her guidance and revelation. He realizes that Nature not only deals but leads. Parents do not always learn this lesson; they do not always realize that in showing us how children grow most naturally Nature is revealing to us the best method of training them

God placed somewhere in the heart of each one of us a tender memory which enables us to touch with a gentle hand or soothing word the heart of the afflicted. What a comfort to know that for every heartache there is somewhere in the universe a heaven inspired soul to comfort those downcast. Let us make our words as dew from heaven, touching with gentle hand the withered flowers, thus giving new vigour to the hardy

The great American sin is profanity. The use of profane language is not confined to the street loafer, the thug and the sot; men who move in good society, business men of standing and reputation, young men and old men, and even boys of tender age, are adicted to this unexcusable habit and sin. There is nothing more disgusting than to hear a man punctuate his every utterance with lurid oaths.

If you have a home and are out of debt, don't fret and worry yourself and your good wife into the grave for the sake of making money. You have but one life to live and it is brief at best. Take a little pleasure and comfort as you go day by day and try to do a little good to others A morbid, insatiate desire to possess the earth, to grab everything in sight is at the foundation of more misery than almost any one thing. Wealth alone will never keep your memory green after you are gone, a good life and kind action will.

Nevr choose a friend who would urge you to pull out a single thread from the warp of character. Never choose for a friend one that you feel you have lowered your standard of purity and right one single inch to gain. If you cannot step up in your friendships you need not step down. Raise your standard and stand by it.

The best society for the oppression of pernicious literature is the family The best legislation that can be passed for the prevention of the sale of vile literature can be passed by the father and mother. Daily teaching to love and study good and useful things will bring the boys and girls to detest the opposite.

A man may do many things well, but by concentration he will probably be able to do some one thing better than anybody else can do it; and that is his duty as well as his privilege.

A Social Hireling

Story of an English Gentleman Down on His Luck.

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

A young man whose clothes were of fine texture, of an English cut and beginning to show signs of long wear stepped into an office on an upper floor of a skyscraper on Fifth avenue, New York, and approached a sleek, gentleman-like man sitting at a rosewood desk.

"Beg pardon, sir," said the man who entered, with a smooth English accent. "I have understood that you desire persons for social purposes."

"H'm! I sometimes have occasion to recommend a young man to fill a— to— Do you dance?"

"I do."

"There is also need for dinner substitutes."

"Beg pardon?"

"You are not familiar with New York society methods?"

"I have recently come from London, where I have had the entree to the smart set."

"Very good. We have here a number of families who have recently become enormously rich and who are desirous of getting into society. We call them social climbers. They must begin by inviting the few persons in the swim they can get to their functions, filling up with those who are not in the swim, gradually increasing the number of the former and diminishing the latter. It is essential that the fillers should be familiar with the customs of swelldom. I perceive from your manner that you will make an excellent filler."

"What are your terms?"

"In the beginning I can pay you $5 for a dancing party and $25 for a dinner."

"Why is the greater work paid the lesser price?"

"Because the dancer uses his heels and need not betray himself by saying anything. The diner must talk."

"I see. One must have intellect to be a dinner companion."

"Not at all. He must be able to talk well about nothing. Can you do that?"

"I can only assure you that I have been in society all my life. Only being out of funds induces me to offer my services for what you call a filler."

"Very good. Mrs. Barnaby Ritz gives a dinner tonight and needs several young men. The number has been made up with one exception. Have you evening dress?"

"My evening dress is all I have. It is in fair condition."

"I presume you will need a little something for carriage and other trifles," handing the man five five-dollar bills.

"But, my dear sir, you don't know me. What is to prevent my pocketing this money and not seeing you again?"

"Excuse me for contradicting you. I do know you. What you say is by no means complimentary to my discernment. I know a gentleman when I see him and would know him if he were in the garb of a huckster."

"Thank you very much."

The agent, Mr. Pulsifer Short, took the man's name and address, the name given being Ralph Plummer.

"Assumed?" said Mr. Short dryly.

"As you like," was the response.

When Mr. Plummer appeared at Mrs. Ritz's—he was directed to be on hand in time to be looked over—she brought a lorgnette to bear on him and after asking him a few questions said:

"My most blueblooded guest for the evening is Miss De Witt. She is a descendant of John De Witt, a great something or other of Holland. I don't mind telling you that I secured her because my son saved her from being run over by an auto. You are the only man who is to dine here today who will be up to her high stepping gait. Do what you can to entertain her. I'll send you something substantial tomorrow."

Mr. Plummer was shown into a room where the guests were assembled. They were not all unrefined, and Miss De Witt was evidently high bred. But she was not as Mrs. Ritz had described her, being unassuming and ladylike. Though she was not among persons of her own set, she did not indicate by her manner that she was out of place. When her dinner companion was introduced to her she looked at him with an expression that he could not well define. It might have been curiosity; it might have been surprise.

"Mr. Plummer, did you say, Mrs. Ritz?"

"Yes. This is Mr. Plummer, an old friend of ours."

The filler passed one of the pleasantest evenings of his life, feeling from the first an rapport with his companion. Mrs. Ritz conducted herself quite well, considering that her husband had started his career as a foundryman, but several of her guests made serious breaks. At such times Miss De Witt either went on with what she was saying to Mr. Plummer or listened attentively to what he said to her altogether ignoring the breach. Plummer was too much engrossed with her to even know that a case of ill breeding had occurred.

When the hour for departure came Miss De Witt did not wait for Mr. Plummer to ask permission to call upon her. It is well she did not, for he would not have made the request. He was, however, much pleased when she said, "Come and see me," though he felt that had she known that he was a filler she would certainly not have done so. As he was passing out Mrs. Ritz drew him aside and slipped a bit of paper into his hand, saying that he had done so well that she would not wait to send it to him. He glanced at it and handed it back to her.

"Excuse me, Mrs. Ritz," he said, "but Mr. Short has settled with me."

"But this is extra."

Plummer winced. What! Accept a tip for entertaining his dinner companion? Poverty had brought him to hiring himself out for a social purpose, but to be paid for the pleasure Miss De Witt had given him—this was more than he could bear. Seizing his hat and coat, he bolted for the door.

He had no idea of accepting Miss De Witt's invitation. Being a gentleman, he felt that to do so while he was thus making his living would be an outrage. He had no choice but to proceed, for the present, in the only occupation that was open to him and must use it or starve. Mr. Short gave him all the employment he would accept, which was barely enough to keep body and soul together. He did not meet Miss De Witt again at any of the places he danced or dined, for she did not know the persons who gave the entertainments.

But one morning he received a valuable invitation—not a paid one—to a musicale given by a Mrs. Yearsley. Who Mrs. Yearsley was or why she had invited him he did not know. Curiosity led him to accept. What was his surprise, after greeting the hostess, to be led up to Miss De Witt.

"You two have met before, I believe," said Mrs. Yearsley. "I leave him with you, Catharine; see that he is properly taken care of."

"Am I indebted to you for this invitation?" he asked.

"I am indebted to my friend Mrs. Yearsley for inviting you. But you don't deserve it. You have been very rude to me."

"In what way?"

"You have paid no attention to my request that you should call on me."

Plummer hesitated in replying to this, finally saying that it would not be proper for him to accept an invitation to call upon a lady into whose social circle he had no entree.

"Your excuse is not accepted."

"Very well; I will do myself the honor to call very soon."

"I shall expect you."

"I must impose one condition."

"What is it?"

"That you ask for no more invitations for me."

"Certainly," replied the lady, "since you do not wish it."

She asked for no reason, which somewhat puzzled Mr. Plummer. Did she know that he had been present at Mrs. Ritz's as a filler? He thought not. Those who hired such persons were not likely to tell of their action.

He made the call and continued his acquaintance with Miss De Witt. One day a letter was handed to him by a young man, who said to him:

"Are you Mr. Ralph Plummer?"

"I am."

"I am from Elkins & Elkins, attorneys. They have been hunting you for some time."

Plummer tore off the envelope and uncovered another addressed to Sir Ralph Trevor.

"Is that you?" asked the lawyer's clerk.

Plummer's only reply was to open the second envelope. A letter contained in it announced to him that an uncle in England had died childless and he was heir to his title.

Plummer, or, rather, Sir Ralph Trevor, leaving the messenger to take care of himself, went out, called a cab and directed the driver to take him to Miss De Witt's home.

"I have come," he said to her, "to make a confession. Poverty and an unwillingness to be dependent on those in England who"—

"Call it rather pride."

"Call it what you like, my position in America has been contemptible. But there has been a change. I am going to tell you who I really am."

"There is no need to tell me that. You are a gentleman, for I once met you in London society."

"You met me?"

"For only a moment. I don't wonder that you have not remembered me."

"Why have you not told me this?"

"Because you seemed to prefer to remain incognita."

"And you know how I have been keeping myself from starvation here?"

Miss De Witt prevaricated. She knew, for Mrs. Ritz had told her. But she wished to make it easy for him. She said that was none of her affair. He informed her that he was an orphan; that his uncle had led him to suppose that he would be his heir to his fortune, as well as to his title, and had thereupon undertaken to direct his every action. The young man had rebelled and gone away. Death had brought a great change and he was going back to England.

Among the American born ladies prominent in English society is Lady Trevor, who was Miss De Witt of New York. When she comes to America she comes alone. Her husband does not relish being reminded of the period when he was a social hireling.

But in this Sir Ralph is oversensitive. In America there are no titles. Consequently Americans—that is, the social climbers—place very high value upon them. It would not matter among such if a title were smirched all over; it would still be coveted. Arms quartered with prison stripes are still arms, and the social climber would prefer any bar sinister to no arms at all. It is quite likely that if Sir Ralph returned to the scene of his operations as a social filler the fact that he was capable of being a filler would redound to his credit.

NEGLECTED COLDS VERY OFTEN TURN TO CONSUMPTION.

Never neglect what at first seems to be but a slight cold. Your head becomes stuffed up; you start to cough; an irritation in the throat follows; it gets lower down; settles on the lungs; you start to raise phlegm of a greenish, yellowish color sometimes streaked with blood, and you cough persistently.

You think perhaps you are strong enough to fight off this trouble, but colds are not easily fought off in this northern climate. Colds if not attended to will sooner or later develop into some serious lung trouble.

Mrs. Willis H. Monk, Lower Ship Harbor, N.S., writes: "Last winter I took a severe cold on my lungs, and I would cough and spit up phlegm and blood. I had the cough for nearly a month, and I got medicine from the doctor, but it did me no good. I thought I had consumption. My friends advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I did, and it gave me great relief. I am the mother of ten children, and I always keep a bottle of 'Dr. Wood's' in the house. I will highly recommend it to all, especially to all who have little ones to care for."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the best cure for coughs and colds. It has been on the market for the past twenty-five years. It is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

JELLICOE WAS COMING.

But War Interfered with Formulating A Naval Policy.

OTTAWA, April 7. — Replying to John Sinclair's query as to whether the Government, as stated by the Premier after the defeat of the naval bill in 1912, proposed to take over three Dreadnoughts being built in England, Sir Robert Borden submitted a lengthy written report.

He stated that confidential inquiries in the autumn of 1914 satisfied him that the naval bill if re-introduced would have the same fate in the Senate as did the original bill. For this reason no action was taken.

In 1914, with the view of formulating a permanent naval policy, it was arranged with the Admiralty that Sir John Jillicoe was to come over to give the Government the benefit of his experience and knowledge.

While arrangements were in progress the war broke out, and the Imperial authorities advised that Canadian efforts should be concentrated on raising military forces.

THE GUNS

THE guns of the BIG CITY have been raking the country with deadly fire for more than forty years. The guns are Bossed by the mail order kings. The bombs are the catalogs.

Many a fine community, many a thriving town, has been ruined by this constant hammering. But deadly as this catalog siege is, WE have weapons in our OWN possession that are able to beat back the siege guns. The trouble is we DON'T USE these weapons. We have allowed ourselves to be bombarded without retaliating. Yet OUR weapons, if USED, mean victory to US. Reason, Knowledge, Common Sense, Community Pride, Co-Operation—THESE are our weapons. OUR town can beat back any siege from the outside. But it is up to each one of US to KNOW this, to USE this knowledge. And, having learned it, we must work at it. Then, let every man, woman and child ENLIST in this Trade-at-Home campaign. Let us beat back the siege guns.

A DECALOGUE OF LAW.

Bavarians Urged to Avoid Meshes of the Courts in War Time.

In the Bavarian courts a novel attempt is being made to suppress the national passion for going to law by display of the following "Ten Commandments" in the court houses:

1. Avoid lawsuits, especially in this grave time of war.
2. Thou knowest perhaps the beginning, but thou canst not divine the end.
3. Thou savest much money, time, and anxiety.
4. Before starting litigation try to compromise amicably.
5. Let thy prospective opponent tell his side, and then perhaps thou will thyself see new light.
6. Listen to the judge when he proposes a settlement the means it well.
7. Always draw up thy agreements in writing. Read them carefully before thou signest, then thou will avoid obscurity and possess thyself of proofs.
8. Remember that only that which thou canst prove counts in court.
9. Drive not thy opponent to extremes. Thou mayst some day need him.
10. Run not to the counts with thy petty squabbles.

HERE AND THERE

A New York woman, sued by her modiste for $135, the price of a costume, refused to pay on the ground that the suit did not fit. The case went to court and the defendant was asked to put the suit on. She did so and the male jury decided that it was a perfect fit and that the dressmaker should get her money.

According to the Schoolmaster, 11,400 men teachers are serving with the Forces, and about 9,000 have attested under the Derby scheme. In addition there are 147 serving with naval forces, and 236 women acting as nurses. Teachers have already gained five Victoria Crosses, while 232 have been killed, 118 wounded and nine are missing.

A rumour comes from Spain that the German Emperor after the war intends to become a Roman Catholic At present his religion is supposed to be that of the Lutheran Church. The statement of the predicted change is made in the current Churchman, an organ of the Protestant Episcopal Church, published in New York.

It has been estimated by statisticians that more than 200,000,000 small clay marbles are used by the boys of America every spring time. It is a known fact that 125,00,000 marbles are made every year by one clay marble manufacturer whose plant is in Summit County, O., and these marbles are made or rolled by young girls.

The city of Verdun, now the target for so many German shells, was for twelve years practically an English settlement. It was there that Napoleon, in 1803, interned the greater proportion of the English tourists in France, who were suddenly arrested on May 23 of that year, on the rupture of the Treaty of Amiens, as a reprisal for the seizure by the British Government of all the French ships in our ports. From 1803 until the Allies entered Paris in 1841—some thousands of British tourists lived in compulsory exile in France. Verdun became, temporarily, an English town. English shops sprang up in every street. The exiles established their own clubs, including a Jockey Club, and regular race meetings and a pack of harriers were organised. There was also an English Church, and one of the sights of Verdun for the French in those days was to watch the exiles leaving church after Sunday morning service.

SPRING BLOOD IS WATERY BLOOD

How to Get New Health and New Strength at This Season

Spring ailments are not imaginary. Even the most robust find the winter months most trying to their health. Confinement indoors, often in over-heated and nearly always badly ventilated rooms—in the home, the office, the shop, and the school—taxes the vitality of even the strongest. The blood becomes thin and watery and is clogged with impurities. Some people have headaches and a feeling of langour. Others are low-spirited and nervous. Still others are troubled with disfiguring pimples and skin eruptions; while some get up in the morning feeling just as tired as when they went to bed. These are all spring symptoms that the blood is out of order, and that a medicine is needed. Many people take purgative medicines in the spring. This is a serious mistake. You cannot cure yourself with a medicine that gallops through your system and leaves you weaker still This is all that a purgative does. What you need to give you health and strength in the spring is a tonic medicine that will enrich the blood and soothe the jangled nerves. And the one always reliable tonic and blod purifier is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills not only banish spring weakness but guard you against the more serious ailments that follow, such as anaemia, nervous debility, indigestion, rheumatism and other diseases due to bad blood. In proof of this Mrs. D. E. Hughes Hazenmore, Sask., says: "About a year ago I was badly run down, my nerves were all unstrung, and I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest. As I was a long ways from a doctor I determined to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and in the course of a few weeks I felt like a new person. As an all round restorative I can heartily recommend this medicine."

If you are ailing this spring you cannot afford, in your own interest, to overlook so valuable a medicine as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. Brockville, Ont.

HIS MICE "NEARLY HUMAN"

Joliet Convict Implores Warden to See Tricks of Rodents.

Warden Zimmer of Joliet penitentiary has received a letter from "Blackie" Simpson, one of the oldest negro convicts in the institution, imploring him to "come out in the chair shop and see my pet mice perform." Simpson claims to have the most wonderful aggregation of trained mice in the world and has convinced himself that he can get enough in royalties from motion pictures to assure his comfort for life when he is released from prison. The mice were caught and trained with infinite care and patience by Simpson, and come at his call.

ANIMAL ETIQUETTE.

They Have a Well-Defined Code of Action All Their Own

Every animal lover can tell numerous stories illustrating the devotion of animals to their human protectors. Anecdotes of one animal risking its life to save another are rare, but still sufficiently numerous and authentic to leave no doubt as to the occasional existence of deep love between animals. But any close observer of nature will know that there exists throughout the brute creation a sort of moral system which, in the case of domestic animals, translates itself into what really amounts to a code of etiquette.

The old proverb, "The dog with a bone has many friends," is nothing else than a recognition of canine etiquette. It does not matter how small is the dog with the bone. It may be a Pomeranian surrounded by mastiffs. The mastiffs will still remain friendly. They will hover round the Pomeranian, perhaps whining for a morsel (which is never offered), and eagerly picking up any splinter that may be dropped, when nothing would be easier than to bowl the little dog over and seize the bone.

You will notice, further, that the little dog becomes filled with new courage, presumably in the moral consciousness of the justice of his claim, and will growl and even snap at a dog he otherwise fears if the latter should come too close.

But the moment a dog drops his bone a new rule of etiquette operates, for it becomes the property of the first dog who cares to pick it up. True, a dispute will sometimes arise as to whether the bone has actually been dropped "within the meaning of the Act." But once this is clear the law of the bone will be observed by all save the exceptional "hooligan" dog, met with occasionally, who outrages all the laws of dogdom, even to the biting of his master.

Another rigid social law is that no gentleman dog must ever in any circumstances, offer violence to a lady dog. It is not the slightest use to plead that "she began it." If a female should so far forget herself, as not infrequently happens, the mere male has no alternative to enduring her snaps save seeking safety in flight.

Of course, a dog, being only canine after all, will sometimes, under severe provocation, break this law. But if he is one of a pack it is ten to one that the other males will set upon him and mete out severe punishment for this grave offence.

Moreover, although a dog is quite entitled to rush suddenly upon a foe and take him unawares, he may not do so if the other is eating or drinking.

Dogs are by no means the only animals that have a distinct sense of property. The squirrel regards his tree much as the dog regards his bone. He has a definite right to it, both as a dwelling and a means of subsistence; and on the rare occasions when another squirrel disputes the right or blunders accidentally on his tree, he will fight fiercely in defence of that which the law of the woods allows him to regard as his own. If he wishes to forage afield, he must choose a tree that has not been appropriated by one of his tribe.

Romance of Modern Explosives.

To Sir Frederick Abel, then Mr. Abel, was due the solution of the problem which had so persistently baffled the efforts of his predecessors and contemporaries—that is, a process for the purification of gun-cotton. Indeed, its utility as a disruptive agent may be said to date from Sir Frederick's discovery in 1865, a discovery by which gun-cotton is thoroughly purified, and the material converted into thoroughly compact homogeneous masses.

Cordite is much more powerful than gun-cotton, and is composed of nitro-glycerine, gun-cotton, and vaseline, which are dissolved by so many parts of acetone. These, says Chambers' Journal, are mixed together until they form a soft, putty-like paste. It is then forced through holes in a metal plate, and emerges in long strings, whence its name "cordite" comes. A smokeless powder, cordite is commonly used in firing our big guns.

Lyddite is probably the most powerful explosive known to man. It is largely composed of one of the derivatives of coal-tar, namely, picric acid. To convert and develop the explosive properties of this new discovery to the purposes of war was only a matter of time and experiment for the expert chemists. They did not labor in vain, for they found that by melting the picric acid crystals until they turned into a fluid of the consistency of cream, and then combining this fluid with gun-cotton melted in alcohol, they got an explosive more terrifying and tremendous in its destructive powers than anything else known before or since.

Keeping an Eye on the Foe.

The prisoner was charged with so trivial an offence that the judge told him that if he would plead guilty he would let him off with a fine.

"Before we plead guilty," replied the man's lawyer, "we'd like to know what the fine will be."

"Isn't it rather unusual to attempt to bargain with the court?" asked the judge.

"Perhaps it is, your honor," replied the lawyer, "but in this case it is important. You see, the prisoner has only $12, and as my fee is $10 we can't afford to plead guilty if you intend to fine him more than $2."

The Great Jenner.

An Englishman had occasion to go often to an eminent physician and said to Jeames, "You will be tired of opening the door for me." "Not at all, sir," was the gracious reply. "You are but a hunit in the hocean."

Another Jeames was accustomed, to say during his master's occasional absences: "You had better try hopposite. There's a very respectable man hopposite as we often sends to when Sir William is habsent. His name is Jenner."—London Mail.

Tommy, You and I

(After Kipling.)

When you've finished making bandages and through with knitting socks,
When you've done your bit for China and Japan;
Will you kindly drop a dollar in my missionary box,
For another, who's a "brother and a man."
He ain't no "bally Heathen," and he ain't no "Plaster Saint,"
But he likes his pipe as well as you and I;
Perhaps it's wrong to want it, and then, perhaps, it ain't
That's a matter we can settle bye-and-bye.

Tommy is not at a picnic, and he is not at adance,
But where'er he is he likes his little joke;
And the other day he wrote me from a place "somewhere in France"
That "the only thing he wanted was a smoke."
"And he said the shots were humming just like a swarm of bees,
And the shrapnel shells were singing overhead;
And the gasses they were floating along upon the breese,
And the stench was just delightful" so he said.

"For it reaches right up to Heaven; he could cut it with a knife;
That's the time," he says, "that eating was a joke,
But the ONE fly in the ointment of this 'sweet, pastoral life,'
Was, he'd like to have the makings of a smoke."
So I put it to you plainly, just as a pal to pal,
And I'm going to give it to you good and strong;
Tommy sends—TO YOU—a message out of that infernal hell,
Are you going to keep him waiting very long?

INGERSOLL GETS PROPERTY.

Carroll Bequest May Now Be Disposed Of.

By the decision yesterday of the Private Bills Committee the corporation of Ingersoll was given the right to accept the properties devised by the late Dr. D. W. Carroll for a sick children's hospital and a park. The corporation asked the right to sell the properties, which, they claimed, were unsuitable for the purposes, and use the money for the erection of a wing to the present hospital and other property for a park. It was decided, however, that the will must not be varied. The properties are valued at $20,000.

MOTHER! GIVE CHILD "SYRUP OF FIGS" IF TONGUE IS COATED

If Cross, Feverish, Sick, Bilious, Clean Little Liver and Bowels

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is, they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother. See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs," because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

Twelve Blind Pig Keepers Are Fined

Wife of One Accused Slaps Informer Soundly Outside Court.

WELLAND, April 7.—Up to last night thirteen of the twenty-three blind pig cases have been disposed of and in all but one a conviction was registered against the accused. In each conviction a fine of $300 was imposed, with costs, or three months in jail. The other ten cases are to be heard to-morrow. The accused are Austrians, Russians, and a few of other nationalities.

There is a very bitter feeling among the foreigners against the spotters who have for the past month been in that section securing the necessary evidence. These special agents, as they are termed by the authorities, are young foreigners sent here from the department at Toronto. Mrs. Wm. Peters, wife of one of the accused, soundly slapped one of the informers in the hallway outside the court room.

T. F. Correy and Inspector Sarvis are assisting in the prosecutions, along with G. H. Pettit and County Inspector George House. H. W. McComb and L. B. Spencer are defending the accused. This is the largest of a number of big raids made here in the past couple of years.

25 CENTS DESTROYS YOUR DANDRUFF AND STOPS FALLING HAIR

Save Your Hair! Make It Thick, Wavy and Beautiful—Try This!

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxurience which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance, an incomparable gloss and softness; but what will please you most will be after just a few week's use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair —new hair—growing all over the scalp.

Willow View, a small settlement in northern Manitoba, has a unique record. Every man there, married and single, has enlisted in the 78th battalion.

DE LAVAL Cream Separators

Buying a Cream Separator is a good deal like hiring a man to work on your farm. A hired man that does poor work, and is lazy, is an expensive proposition, no matter how little you pay him. A cream separator that is hard to turn, hard to keep clean, and doesn't skim close would be expensive, even if you got it as a gift.

CREAMERYMEN AND DAIRYMEN ALL OVER THE WORLD RECOGNIZE THE SUPERIORITY OF THE DE LAVAL.

About the only reason why any one ever buys any other cream separator is because they can get it a little cheaper. Then they soon find out they have lost ten times as much from separator inconvenience, poor skimming, and a machine that quickly wears out, as they saved in the beginning.

Remember that a De Laval will soon pay for itself, and if you have no separator now, or an inferior machine, you can buy a De Laval on such terms that it will pay for itself while you are using it.

The best cream separator is the cheapest. Let our nearest agent call and prove it to you on your own farm, or write us direct.

SOONER OR LATER YOU WILL BUY A DE LAVAL.

21st Battalion Bombers Do Good Work

FOE MAKES SLIGHT PROGRESS IN BETHINCOURT ASSAULTS

Heavy Attacks Preceded by Vigorous Artillery Bombardment Gives Them a Foothold on Two Small French Field Redoubts But They Are Repulsed Elsewhere, the French Having Advantage in General Fighting.

GERMAN REPLY TO UNITED STATES

PARIS, April 8.—(French Official Communique).—The Crown Prince made slight progress last night in the thrust to batter in the French salient at Bethincourt, eight miles north-west of Verdun.

After heavy bombardment the Germans launched an attack against the western side of the salient. They gained a foothold in two small French field redoubts, between Haucourt and Hill 287, but were repulsed elsewhere.

On the west side of the salient, the French had the advantage in grenade fighting, south-east of Bethincourt.

On the east bank of the Meuse, a German grenade attack near Fort Vaux was repulsed.

WILL LAY BLAME ON THE SUB. COMMANDER

Germany's Reply to United States in Regard to Submarine Activity Will Take That Form in Connection With the Sussex Case

Special to The Examiner.

BERLIN, April 8.—While not given out officially, it is understood here that Germany's reply to the United States, now on its way to Washington, regarding submarinings is substantially as follows:

"If a submarine, without warning, sunk the Sussex, with Americans aboard, he was acting contrary to his instructions, as the Sussex was a passenger vessel, and the submarine commander will be disciplined." In regard to the other three cases mentioned by President Wilson, Germany regarded them as freighters, and not subject to the warning promised by Germany.

THREE MORE BRITISH STEAMERS ARE SUNK

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 8.—Three British vessels, including the liner Ohantala, have been sunk or blown up without the past twenty-four hours. In each instance the crew was saved.

The Ohantala was a five thousand ton liner, plying between India and English ports. The others were the five thousand ton steamer Braunton and the small Faversham schooner Clyde.

The fact of the cable suggests that the liner Ohantala was sunk by a submarine, and the Braunton and Clyde destroyed by mines.

FRENCH SUB. SINKS AUSTRIAN TRANSPORT

Examiner Special:

PARIS, April 8.—A French submarine sank an Austrian transport in the Adriatic.

LONDON, April 8.—The German War Office claimed the capture of French positions two kilometres wide, about one and one-fifth miles on the ridge of Termiten Hill, near Haucourt, with the capture of 714 prisoners. A French counter-attack was repulsed, Berlin reported.

PARIS, April 8.—An Austrian transport has been sunk. The first official announcement from the Ministry of Marine gave no particulars as to loss of life. This is the first heard of any operations of French submarines for several months.

OTTAWA, April 8.—Sergeant-Major Whitfield, of the First Western Ontario Battalion, has been awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal for gallantry in Flanders.

ROTTERDAM, April 8.—Despatches to the Norwegian Consul to-day confirmed the report that the Norwegian steamer Arona, sunk last Sunday, was torpedoed without warning.

Another Capacity House Greeted The "Y" Circus

The second night of the Y.M.C.A. circus attracted a larger crowd than was present at the first performance. Every available seat was filled and standing room to the full capacity of the gymnasium was sold, and dozens of people were turned away through lack of accommodation. The programme carried out was the same as that given the first evening with several additions. In view of the fact that many ticket holders failed to secure admissions to either performances and the demand on the part of the many friends of the boys that they be given an opportunity to witness the performance of the circus, the programme will again be presented this evening. From an standpoint the programme will again be presented this evening. From an artistic standpoint the programme will be an improvement on the first two performances so another capacity house is expected. There will be no advance canvass for the sale of tickets previously to the performance tonight, and there will be no seats reserved, but tickets will be on sale at the office at the usual prices.

The inside inn will again be a popular feature and the ladies in charge reported all refreshments sold out. However there will be a new stock for this (Saturday) evening.

The circus management would express appreciation to their patrons of the first two performances who doubtless experienced some inconvenience due to the unusual rush for seats, for their patience and forbearance.

As this will positively be the last performance of the circus it is hoped that the friends of the Association will be in attendance at this evening's performance. The usual street parade will take place at 7.00 o'clock with the elephants and funny clowns in evidence.

CARING FOR THE BOYS WHO ARE NOW BACK FROM FRONT

Soldiers' Aid Commission Met Last Night to Discuss Details—More Places Offered Than There Are Men to Fill Just Now

MONEY WILL BE NEEDED

Last night, at the Patriotic Fund office a meeting of the local Soldiers' Aid Commission was held. Of the members there were present Messrs. E. A. Mason, G. Logie, J. W. McDermid, R. J. Kingan and C. Hammacott.

General inspection was made of the local records and of correspondence with the main Association, at Toronto. Detail was given of what has been accomplished in securing men to fill the many positions turning up from day to day.

Places are offering in good number, quite many more than it is possible to find men to fill. Of course the first care is for the man, partially disabled but able to take up some form of employment. But behind it all is the reluctance of men to go into active service before a final fixture is made of the pension or allowance for the future. This view is not unreasonable. There may, and possibly always remain some inability, due to wounds and exposure that must militate against a personal efficiency as before the man enlisted. Present employment might be construed as an almost permanent recovery, when the facts fall short of such a state.

Names have been secured, by personal interview, from those willing to take up the work of inspection of munitions, in factories at Quebec, and forwarded to Ottawa. Replies received indicate that these applications will be favourably considered and that presently appointments may be looked for.

Local manufacturers are very kind and willing to be helpful. The office has openings for several men and is trying to find those to fill the places. Of course a great many people think that once the returned man gets work that his affairs, as a public concern, is closed. That is not enough. He had work before he went abroad and fought on the field. He is now much more than a mere workman. He has given the most critical public service, heaps more than many are giving, and is in a class that we have never had before. He now should have employment and in addition employment with a preference. Which means, if it means anything tangible, that the doors of the shop or factory should swing wide open for him in preference to any other man, so long as he measures up to a fair efficiency. That will come as he adapts himself to new conditions, and the employer in his turn does his share of the adaptation.

For instance. Here is a situation to go into a hardware store and take up the handling of the lighter forms of goods. Who will have it. Possibly, on trial, the applicant will find that the activity required is against his holding the position. In such case some other form of work must be found, possibly one in which he

NO MEETING TO-MORROW WAR PICTURES TO-NIGHT

There will be no recruiting meeting at the Armouries to-morrow (Sunday) night, in view of the meetings held this week. Instead, there will be a display of war pictures to-night on Simcoe Street, between George and Water Streets, that should prove highly interesting. Pictures of Canadian soldiers in the trenches will be shown, and there will be many fine views. A week from Sunday the recruiting meeting will be in charge of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Speakers' Patriotic League, who are arranging the programme.

93rd BATTALION FOR BARRIEFIELD SAYS A KINGSTON REPORT

Lindsay, Ottawa, Perth, Port Hope, Cobourg, Kingston, Cornwall, Belleville and Brockville Battalions Are Also to be Located at Kingston Camp--Promotions Announced--To-day's Orders and General Military News

Kingston War Garrison, April 7.—It has been officially decided to send the 77th Battalion of Ottawa to Barriefield Camp and the news has created quite a stir at the capital. It has been freely circulated that the 77th would go to Bermuda and take the place of the 38th Battalion, which would be sent overseas. A few days ago Lt.-Col. Street denied that it was the intention of the military authorities to send the 77th to Bermuda, and stated that when the Battalion moved it would go to England. The militia authorities at Ottawa have some good reason for sending the capital battalion to camp for a period of training, and they will be welcomed in Kingston as an excellent battalion.

It has been decided to send the R.C.H.A. Depot of "C" Battery to the big camp in Petawawa, together with the Royal School of Artillery, as well as the batteries of the 12th Brigade Field Artillery, now in the city. These consist of the 50th, (Queen's), 51st and 52nd at the Dry Dock barracks, the 53rd at the Rideau barracks.

The infantry at Barriefield in addition to the 77th Battalion, will be composed of the 93rd Battalion, Peterborough; the 109th, Lindsay; the 130th, Perth; 136th Battalion, Port Hope; 139th Battalion, Cobourg; 146th Battalion, Kingston; 164th Battalion, Cornwall; 155th Battalion Belleville; 156th Battalion, Brockville. The present strength of these units is now 8,991 men, and when recruited to strength wil be 11,500. These battalions with the departmenal corps, staff, instructors, and all necessary for the conduct of the camp will make a total of fully 12,000 men under canvas in Barriefield Camp for the summer.

Once in a while you'll hear a loud noise from Lindsay about the hundreds of recruits that have gone out from that burg to fight the battles of the Empire. You know Sam Hughes' home town is a good deal like Cobourg in that respect. The other day, however, one of the Lindsay papers rather gave the game away when it published all the honour rolls of the different churches. The sum total including former Lindsay residents who had enlisted elsewhere and everybody else who could be claimed, packing the Minister of Militia in for good measure was only 900 men or only one in every 27 of the population. On that basis Peterborough would only have raised a little over 700 men instead of nearly three times that number. Lindsay boosted her average a year ago by buying in hundreds of recruits from Toronto and rumors has it that some of the 109th men are not altogether strange to the Queer City.

The Bantams Soccer club of the 93rd Battalion made their first appearance yesterday when they tackled an aggregation known as the Calithumpians. The little fellows scored the first goal and looked dangerous for a while but the "callies" came on and won out by 3 goals to 1. A match between the Bantams and a team of six footers picked from the Battalion is promised for the near future.

In answer to inquirer it might be stated that 32 members of the 93rd band are residents of Peterborough.

Lt.-Col. Brown, G.S.O. No. 3 Military District will be here on Monday to put the non-coms of the 93rd Battalion through the third part of their examinations.

Capt. Marling, Lieut. Sexton, Co Quartermaster, Sergt. Williams, Sergt E. Brown, Sergt. D. Loomis, Corp. W. Hartshorn, Corp. B. Carpenter and Corp. W. Miller of the 93rd battalion leave to-night on the midnight, C.P.R. tarin for Montreal where they will take a special course in physical training and bayonet fighting which begins on Monday. They will be away a month.

The 93rd band turned out with the battalion this morning for the first time in four days, the members returning to duty after three days leave.

Pte. Jack Foster a Peterborough member of the mounted Rifles now at the front sends the following original poem.

Somewhere in France.

Out in a war stricken country,
Shattered by shot and shell;
Thinking of home and loved ones,
And wondering if all is well.
With those we have left behind us,
Who are thousands of miles away;
Oh, what would we give for a letter,
That would bring the good news and say,
That all is well in the home we left,
And every one feeling O.K.
Out in the rain-sodden trenches,
Watching by night and by day;
Watching for Germans but thinking
While our chums in their dugouts lay,
The shrapnel may burst all around us,
And bullets whiss close to our dome;
But these things all count as trifles,
When we get a letter from home.
So mothers and wives and sweethearts,
And sisters and brothers as well;
Just think of the boys who have left their home joys,
For a life better than Hell.
And when you have time at your leisure,
Around our fair city to roam;
If there is not much in it, just spare then a minute,
And send on a letter from home.

Armourer Sergt. Howart, of the 80th Battalion, C.E.F. is home for a few days on final leave before going overseas. The 80th expect to leave Canada in a short time.

ATTACKS DRIVEN OFF

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 8.—Offici eye witness reports considerable a tivity among the Ontario battalion in the neighbourhood of St. El during the past week. After Can dian working parties had connecte up the Canadian left with the ne British line, the Germans made de termined attempts to secure mi craters in that neighbourhood.

The eye witness says:

"On the afternoon of April 1, th left of the new British line was sev erely shelled and the officer in com mand called on our 4th Infantry Br gade for assistance. Squads of bom ers from our 13th Western Ontari Lieut.-Col. E. S. Wigle, Windsor, commander, and the 21st Easter Ontario, Lieut.-Col. W. S. Hughe Kingston, battalions,—under Lieut Speer and Brownlee, were at one sent out by Brigadier-General Re nie.

"By dusk our men had reached an taken over the advanced bombin posts.

"Four bombers of our 21st Battal jon, Ptes. D. Brooklin, R. C. Smith J. Nicholson and R. L. Sprong, dis played exceptional enterprise an gallantry. Going forward from the captured positions, they bombed the enemy back for fifty yards and dro him from another fortified point.

"They remained out until their supply of bombs was exhausted and then rejoined our main party. Pri vate Smith was slightly wounded.

"The German casualties on the first night were heavy. One German officer and four men were taken prisoners during the fighting. Our casualties were one killed, two dangerously, and four seriously wounded. Our success was due to the superior training of our bombers, who outthrew the Germans at every point.

"Twice on the night of April 1st, second German bombing parties attempted to raid the Canadian trenches, under cover of heavy machine gun and rifle fire. On each occasion the raiding parties were driven off by our bombers and the accurate fire of our artillery.

"The positions charged by our bombers proved valuable as a base of operations against the Germans holding the crater. Starting from this line on the following night the British troops assaulted and captured the crater. Four officers and eighty other ranks were taken prisoners and handed over to our troops for safe keeping. The new British lines were then joined and consolidated."

ENGLISH PEOPLE NOT OBJECTING TO THE NEW BUDGET

Instead of a Tragedy, as Was Expected, Taxes Were Hailed as a Screaming Farce, Says T. P. O'Connor

REVIEW OF THE WEEK

By T. P. O'Connor

LONDON, April 8.—Among the many discoveries of the war the most marvellous is a new method of rousing Englishmen from their usual sombre seriousness. To make an Englishman laugh uproariously you apparently must tax him almost out of existence. The gigantic budget, with an income tax up to 35 per cent. of ordinary large incomes and 77 per cent on war incomes was received this year, at last, with almost uninterrupted roars of laughter.

What was expected to be received as a tragedy was hailed the next morning as a screaming farce. Except by some persons who dislike annoying taxes like those on matches and railway tickets there was not a single objection made to the enormous demands on everybody's purse.

Two classes were disappointed. The protectionists hoped that their favorite nostrum would be pushed forward by the financial necessities of the country but there was no tariff. Even a more disappointed crowd were the Irish factionists.

THE COMING BUDGET

For weeks past an agitation has been maintained by factionists, lunatics, supported by the German money, against the coming budget as another foul injustice to Ireland. Special attempts were made to frighten the vast body of farmers who now own their own land, by repeated rumors that it was the Ministry's intention to put a big tax on land. The alarmed farmers asked how tht new tax would be levied. Other factionists sought to cause alarm concerning another crushing burden on Irish industries by an increased whisky tax and an increased tax on tea and tobacco, very vulnerable points in the budget.

The Irish poor, it was reported, would be sacrificed by another and bigger tax. Needless to say this campaign was not political but factional and intended to fill up the pro-German movement, which has transformed paupers into visitors at the best hotels and dying newspapers into prosperous concerns.

Mr. Redmond riddled this campaign

ONLY A BEGINNING.

With the formality of a third reading the Ontario Temperance Act becomes the law of the Province. This marks the beginning of a promise of better days. But even if it is a good beginning it is only a beginning. Of the expected fruits of prohibition will still have to be fought for and they will be well worth fighting for. Great Britain's annual drink bill is nearly a billion dollars. If prohibition in Ontario will prevent a proportional money waste, and the attendant misery and suffering and waste of human energy, moral and physical, it is well worth fighting for. As passed, it is only effective for three years; and to be made permanently effective it must be made effective; that is, effectively enforced. Without that it stands in danger of being discredited and repealed when submitted to popular vote on the first Monday in June, 1919. Public opinion, which was the driving force of prohibition, must continue its backing; not in a loose, abstract way, but in the way of concrete organization and cooperation. The government must lend bona fide aid in the matter of enforcement, upon which, especially in the beginning, the value of prohibition depends. Under the most favourable conditions it will be some time before the full benefits of the sobriety that should come from prohibition can be obtained. At the beginning there will be the influence of fixed drinking habits to overcome; for the drinkers' thirst will stimulate the ingenious of illicit means to obtain drink, necessitating extreme vigilance in the matter of enforcement of the provisions of the act. It must be remembered, that prohibition is only good when it prohibits—prevents illicit access to strong drink.

DOUBLE EDGED ACTION.

The ladies of the Women's Council are doing good within good. In their ways and means of giving effect to their excellent enterprise of providing Supervised Play Grounds at the King Edward school, they are helping to do a greater good than that represented by the establishment of the playgrounds. They will be impressing the lesson of avoiding waste and the possibility of utilizing waste. They ask householders to save for future collection, worn out garments and linens or woollen rags during the approaching house cleaning period. These can be converted into money for the purposes of the ladies in equipping the play grounds. This appeal will, besides, have a moral effect, it will help to focus public attention upon the possibility of using what is waste and emphasize the importance of avoiding waste and at the same time arouse a spirit of thoughtfulness. In almost every household in the city there are discarded garments and other articles thrown aside or stored unforgotten in attics, that might be used to clothe all the naked of the city. There are articles of food thrown in the garbage tin, that, with a little care, could be saved and used to feed the hungry; and in this process some housewives will be brought to a consideration of the fact, that due to bad buying, lack of culinary versatility, as much food is wasted—goes into the garbage tin—as would feed another family of the same size. Especially in the cooking and management of meats, more is often wasted than is properly consumed. Comfortable living does not so much depend upon the amount of income as upon the wisdom of its expenditure; and good feeding does not so much depend upon the amount of food purchased as upon its economic exploitation in the kitchen. The ladies of the Women's Council builded better than they knew when they made their appeal for rags. They not only made an easy way of getting money, but they set [illegible] ideas working under a thousand thinking caps, that may lead to better results than even

"HELPING THE CHILDREN OF THE CITY TO HAPPY, HEALTHY, SUPERVISED PLAY."

MUTUAL HELP; MUTUAL ADVANTAGE.

The subject of buying at home, has perhaps, been worn threadbare, but it is not as thin as the civic morality (or immorality) that makes reference to it possible, and, if heeded, profitable. The cry of the hour, in war and in peace, in home enterprise and international butchery, is cooperation, which, in effect, means mutual help as the condition of the highest success. We have too many in our population that live in the city; have all their interests here; who derive their means of living from the city, who do a good deal, if not the bulk of their buying, out of the city. Prominent in this class are the city bakers. Of all of these there is only one that patronizes—buys his flour from—local mills. We have flour mills in the city that make as good, if not the best, flour in the world; yet all but one of our bakers buy their flour from abroad, and only use home flour in case of shortage through delay of shipment. Aside from the interests of the local bakers to buy the best flour made at home—properly "aged" and delivered as wanted—there is the consideration of fair play. The local mills employ hundreds of hands who have to buy the bread made from flour milled by outside competitors. Wouldn't it be the most elementary fair play to use their product in meeting the demand their patronage creates? The bakers would soon have to "shut up shop" if the citizens, generally, would imitate their unpatriotic example and buy their bread abroad. These comments do not apply to bakers alone; they apply to all of the many who ignore the spirit of fair play in sending the money they make in town out of town; who ignore the spirit and fact of cooperation as the prime motive force of successful development of civic and community interests. We need to practice more the motto of Dumas' noted Musketeers—"One for all and all for one." What an ideal city we should become if we all practiced cooperation — coordination of effort and mutual help in which every individual citizen lives and acts with the interests of all his fellow citizens in view. Each one would be a beneficiary of such mutual loyalty of citizenship.

BACK TO THE LAND.

With Canada's almost uncountable acres of good soil, it is a strange thing that after fifty years of Confederation we have only eight millions of population—a little more than two persons to the square mile. Doesn't a good deal of the explanation of this condition consist in scarcity of capital available to the possible farm seeker? The immigrants that come to us from abroad are, for the most part, without funds, and many in our cities and towns who may be inclined to get back to the land are in a similar plight. In this connection the action of the Ontario Government to assist settlers to set themselves up in the farming business in New Ontario, where the chief part of our vacant lands of good quality and available for settlement, are situated is an excellent one. It is proposed by legislation introduced yesterday to provide loans not exceeding $500 to one person, to assist the settler in clearing the land. While this is a step in the right direction it seems the assistance does not err on the side of excess. Five hundred dollars is a small part of the sum a settler needs to become well established—to clear his land and stock it, and maintain himself and family till crop returns come. Hon. Mr. Ferguson in explantion of the proposed legislation, said that 4,000 farmers, last year, had taken advantage of the Government's advance of seed grain to the value of $80,000 on the security of the land; and although the money had become due only at the beginning of the month it was being paid back at the rate of nearly $2,000 per day. One hundred and sixty acres of land, with its great productiveness, would be ample security for a much larger advance than $500 per man, and there would be no risk in being generous in an enterprise that means much more than the question of the repayment of the loan. Such an advance in liberal amount would be a good investment beyond the mere advantage of settling the land. Every farmer helped would become not only a praducer, but a consumer, and one of a large army whose requirements would mean demands that would promote commercial interests to a very important extent. Every settler helped to comfortable conditions of productiveness, and living would create demands upon every commercial and industrial agency whose business is the supply of the many requirements that go to equip and maintain a farm and a farm home. The idea of assistance to settlers is a good one, one good enough to be made better by increase of the amount of the advance proposed. It commends itself to both parties in the House. Mr. Rowell promised the support of his following to the proposal since it is something the Liberal Opposition had been urging for years. Canada is an agricultural country by nature, but not as great an agricultural country as it could be made. To achieve our greatest possibilities we must have our land occupied, and almost any reasonable amount of money expended to promote such an object would yield ample returns and hasten the achievement of making Canada the granary of the Empire.

Each man is a hero and an oracle to somebody, and to that person whatever he says has an enhanced value.—Emerson.

THE SOLE CONDITION OF ENDURING WORLD PEACE

In his speech before the Reichstag two days ago, declaring with authority the policy and purpose of the Emperor and his war-lords, the Imperial Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, spoke these words, at once a complaint against injustice to Germany and a consequent appeal for sympathy:

"Of all the nations in the war, only Germany has been threatened by her enemies and by their responsible apologists with annihilation, with partition of her realm, with destruction of her essential political and economic forces, no matter whether they call them Prussianism or militarism or barbarism. To these peace conditions only one answer would be left, and that answer our sword must give."

If by these words the Imperial Chancellor means that Great Britain and all the nations of the British Empire, and all the nations of Europe allied against the Germanic Powers, have highly resolved among themselves and pledged each to the others, and before all the world, their most sacred word that this war shall not end and the sword of the Allies shall not be sheathed unless and until the power of Prussian military autocracy is broken and the instruments of Germany's mad ambition for World-Power are utterly destroyed—if that is what he means, then the Imperial Chancellor rightly interprets the "threatenings" of the nations now in alliance against Germany.

And that certainly is what Canada means by her partnership in this most frightful and costly war. The annihilation of Germany? No! That were an impossibility. The destruction of the German people or their institutions of learning or of government? No, a thousand times No. That were a crime as well as an impossibility.

Canada's desire would be for the restoration of the German people to opportunities for even larger industrial achievement, for even broader commercial activity, and for even more splendid educational progress. And all that it would be to Canada's interest for the German people to regain, but only on one absolute condition. That irreducible condition is that Germany should utterly and forever renounce and repudiate the vaunted alternative of World-Dominion or Downfall pressed upon her by her Prussian war-lords; and should break the Prussian bow and put its spear in sunder and burn its chariot in the fire; and should be willing and ready to take her own place in the sun, but not to interfere with other nations, even the smallest and least powerful, in the free enjoyment of their rightful share of needful sunshine. For Canada that condition is an essential of peace.

Because Germany denied the rights of all small nations when she violated the rights of Belgium, and set her Will to Power above her most sacred treaty obligations, and made her own Prussian sword of higher authority than the sanctions of international law—because of that Canada entered this war against Germany in 1914. For this cause, too, and until the authority of law is restored and the freedom of the weak nations against the encroachments of the strong is secured, Canada, in self-protection, must remain in this war. British connection is Canada's excuse; Belgium's devastation is Canada's cause.

And Canada's cause is the cause of every other nation, great and small, that has joined in the "threatening" against Germany of which the Imperial Chancellor complains. They love freedom. They desire the right to govern themselves. And because autocratic militarism in Germany to-day, as in other nations in the past, is and must always be the deadly enemy of freedom and self-government there can be nothing for it but "annihilation"; or for the world there can be no peace.

But the Imperial Chancellor and the German Reichstag must not suppose that this attitude of "threatening" against Germany is confined to the nations of the Allies now in the war. It is the mental attitude of every free people on every continent of the globe. And there is not in any neutral nation of the world a free newspaper or magazine or journal of public opinion—not one free from pro-German control or from direct or indirect pro-German influence either in its editorial office or in its counting room—not one that, after all these months of war and of war's propaganda, defends Germany's conduct and justifies Germany's policy and approves Germany's world-programme, and hopes Germany will win. Not one!

What a fool the world must be—a fool, a hypocrite, and a rogue—all the world but "only Germany"!

But the world is beginning to know that in the world-neighborhood of nations there can be no world-peace until the wild beast from the war-jungle is put under restraint, its teeth pulled and its claws cut. And not "only Germany," but every nation, Allies and Neutrals and all, must receive that "new knowledge," must cultivate the international mind, and must cherish the spirit and ideals of world-brotherhood. Along that way, and along that way alone, can peace come for the world—the peace that will not sheathe the sword, but break it—the peace that can and will endure.—The Globe.

Defy Dyspepsia!

Among the symptoms of Dyspepsia or Indigestion may be mentioned a heavy, cutting pain soon after eating; a distended, full feeling of the stomach and bowels; belching of wind and flatulence; a burning sensation in the stomach, which indicates acidity; heartburn; palpitation of the heart; oppression of breathing; pain under the ribs and shoulder-blades; headache through the temples and eyes; dizziness, coated tongue and constipation; sometimes nausea or vomiting.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt is the natural specific for all these conditions. Being an antacid, it immediately relieves the acidity of the stomach and stops the fermentation. It stimulates the secretion and muscular action of the stomach and bowels, and overcomes the constipation. When its use is kept up the normal action of all the organs of digestion is re-established.

BERLIN MARRIAGE RECORD.

Lowest Point Reached Since Franco-Prussian War.

When war broke out in 1914, the registry offices and churches of Berlin were for a short period stormed by couples eager to have the knot tied; but owing to the stress of war to the number of deaths and to various economic causes the number of marriages in 1915 sank to the lowest level on record.

In 1912 the number of marriages in Berlin was 28,000; in 1913, 21,196; in 1914, 23,701.

But in 1915 the number reached only 16,623, the lowest figure since the foundation of the German Empire in 1871, when Berlin had little more than half of its present population.

Kitchener's Army in the Making "The First Hundred Thousand"

First Real Description of Its Personnel and Training in An Officer's Book—Its Joys and Hardships

The war has already discovered its historian on the British side. Not the man who will set down scientifically its strategic moves and diplomatic contents, but the man who interprets to the world the experiences, the sensations and motives of the soldiers who volunteered at their country's call and went through all the trials of life in the trenches.

Naturally enough he is a soldier himself and has won the military Cross. He has the further qualification for his task that in the days of peace, under the nom de plume of Ian Hay, he was a novelist of reputation.

Captain Ian Hay Beith of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlands was one of the first who answered Kitchener's call for recruits, one of the "first hundred thousand," and in a collection of short sketches labelled "The First Hundred Thousand" described how a mob of Scottish ironworkers and miners were drilled and disciplined until they became a fighting unit, and what they found when they first stood guard in the French trenches and then took part in the assault on Loos. His sketches were written while on active service under every conceivable discomfort. One of them, a note in the book describes, was put together by the author, lying on a stone floor in a French farmhouse.

The first sketch tells of the early days of drill when the battalion was but an unruly mob. It pictures the barrack yard where a thousand men in little groups are learning the elements of soldiering.

And so the drill goes on. All over the drab, dusty, gritty parade ground under the warm September sun similar squads are being pounded into shape. They have no uniforms yet even their instructors wear bowler hats or cloth caps. Some of the faces under the brims of these hats are not too prosperous. * * * Is it possible! Can that awkward, shy, self-conscious mob with scarcely an old soldier in their ranks be pounded within the space of a few months into the Seventh (service) Battalion of the Bruce and Wallace Highlanders—one of the most famous regiments in the British Army?

The Colonel's boyish figure stiffens. "They're a tough crowd," he murmurs, "and a tough crowd; but they're a stout crowd. By gad! we'll make them a credit to the Old Regiment yet."

"Labour" Put in Khaki.

Captain Beith tells of their first struggles and the great triumph it was when one platoon marched round the square without going through another platoon, losing any part of it... on the veranda of the married quarters. But the men found the discipline at first very irksome.

At home they were persons of consequence with very definite notions about the dignity of labour. They had employers who trembled at their frown and trade union officials who were ever impressing on them their omnipotence in the industrial world. But in the army they appeared to be nobodies. They were expected to stand stiffly at attention when addressed by an officer. They might not spit; they might not smoke a cigarette in the ranks nor keep the residue behind an ear. They might not take beer to bed. And they must shave every day.

But gradually fresh air, hard training and clean living wove their spell. They even began to criticize the slovenly habit of the Eighth Battalion, just three weeks younger than themselves.

But the "fatigues" still came hard on them. Captain Beith draws a picture of the orderly room, where Private Dunshie is up before an officer for refusing to scrub floors.

"I joined the airmy for tae fight they Germans, and no fer tae be learned tae scrub floors—"

"Sir-r!" suggests the Sergeant Major in his ear.

"Sir-r!" amends Private Dunshine, reluctantly. "I was no in the habit of scrubbin' the floor myse' where I stayed in Glesca', and ma wife would be affronted—"

But there the Captain broke in and taught the excellent Dunshie the lesson that the soldiers' first duty is to obey.

The Amateur Nurse.

How the officers looked upon some of the amateur nurses is told in the words of Major Kemp:

"I'm not talking about the Florence Nightingale" he said. "The young person I am referring to is just intelligent enough to understand that the only possible thing to do this season is to nurse. She qualifies herself for her new profession by dressing like one of the chorus of 'The Quaker Girl' and getting her portrait, thus attired, in The Tatler. She then proceeds to invade any hospital that is available, where she flirts with everything in pajamas, and freezes you with a look if you ask her to empty a basin or change your sheets. I know her! I've had some, and I know her! She is one of the minor horrors of war!" * * * What such a girl wants is a good old-fash ioned mother who knows how to put a slipper to its right use."

So the regiment trains. Its historian tells how it learned to shoot, to skirmish, and above all, to dig. He pictures its officers—a master from a famous school, a young doctor from Harley Street, a lawyer aspiring to Parliament, a Scottish laird, more proud of his $2 a day pay than all his rent roll. He tells how McSnape, the Boy Scout, earned his corporal's stripes by his love of field work, and Private Dunshie sought constantly a "soft snap" even volunteering to be the company chiropodist, when a chiropodist was called for, but had to confess he didn't know the meaning of the term. He describes how "Wee Peter" Carmichael died, worn out from voluntary hardships his frail frame could not bear, and Mucklewame and the rest of the ordinary run of privates gradually learned to be soldiers, in fact as well as name. After seven months, he writes of the battalion:

We can endure hail, rain, snow and vapour, we can march and dig with the best; we have mastered the first principles of musketry; we can advance in an extended line without losing touch or bunching, and we have ceased to regard an order as an insult or obedience as a degradation. We eat when we can and what we can get, and we sleep wherever we happen to find ourselves lying. That is something. But there are certain military accomplishments which can only be taught us by the enemy. Taking cover, for instance.

Cultivating an "Ally."

The battalion, like Kipling's ship "found itself." It goes to France at last, and this is how Private Mucklewame compiled with Divisional Orders to "lose no opportunity of cultivating the friendliest relations with those of our allies whom you may chance to encounter." He came across a French sentry.

The two gallant fellows regarded each other with shy smiles, after the fashion of two children who have been introduced by their nurses at a party. Presently the sentry, by a happy inspiration, proffers his bayonet for inspection, as if it were a new doll. Mucklewame bows solemnly and fingers the blade. Then he produces his own bayonet, and the two weapons are compared—still in constrained silence. Mucklewame nods approvingly: "Verra goody!" he remarks, profoundly convinced that he is speaking the French language. "Olrigh! Tippararee!" replies the sentry, not to be outdone in international courtesy.

Human Touches in the Trenches.

The battalion goes into quarters a little back of the line to get acclimatized. Captain Beith pictures the scene when a German shell falls into that little French town. He describes the trenches in daytime, "full of men mostly asleep, for the night cometh when no man may sleep," but some are cooking, and others, cleaning their rifles.

The proceedings are superintended by a contemplative tabby cat, coiled up in a niche, like a feline flower in a crannied wall.

"She used to sit on top of the parapet," explains a friendly lance-corporal; "but became a casualty, owin' to a sniper mistakin' 'er for a Guardsman's bearskin. Show the officer your back, Christabel!" and the healed scar is duly inspected.

Not every time the soldiers get out of their trenches are they shot at by the enemy. Captain Beith tells how the Germans climbed out to cut the long grass which had grown in "No Man's land" between the lines and how the Highlanders let them alone.

"Let 'em by all means," explains Captain Wagstaff. "If they don't we must. We don't want their bomb throwers crawling over here through a hayfield. Let us encourage them by every means in our power."

For it is the bombs that are the very latest things in modern warfare. Rifles were intended for proper, gentle, manly warfare, but in the hand-to-hand butchery which calls itself war to-day, the rifle is rapidly becoming demode. For long range you require machine guns; for short bombs and hand grenades. Can you exterminate twenty Germans in a fortified back parlour by a single thrust with the bayonet? Never! But you can do both these things with a jam-tin, stuffed with dynamite and scrap-iron.

Bombs and Snipers.

The Highlanders' historian describes the four types of bomb, the hair-brush, the cricket-ball, the policeman's truncheon, and the jam-tin. The hair-brush, instead of bristles has a solid block of explosive. The truncheon is gay with streamers of cause if you look over the top of the The cricket-ball has a fuse timed for five seconds, while the jam-tin has a ten-second fuse.

Then there is the sniper. A German specimen is dubbed Zacchaeus.

We call him by this name because of pollarded willows standing parallel to our front, a hundred and fifty yards away. Up or in one of these lives Zacchaeus. We have never seen him, but we know he is there; because if you look ove rthe top of the parapet he shoots you through the head. We do not even know which of the trees he lives in. There are nine of them, and every morning we comb them out one by one, with a machine gun. But all in vain. Zacchaeus merely crawls away into the standing corn behind his trees and waits till we have finished. Then he comes back again and tries to shoot the machine gun officer. He has not succeeded yet, but he sticks to his task with a gentle persistence. He is evidently of a persevering rather than vindictive disposition.

Gas and Trench Mortars.

There is an excellent description of an alarm raised for a supposed gas attack at early morning when the mist is rising and how the men met it:

Next moment every man is hurriedly pulling his gas helmet over his head, while Lieutenant Waddell beats a frenzied tocsin upon the instrument provided for that purpose—to wit, an 18-pound shell which, suspended from a bayonet stuck into the parados (or back wall) of the trench, makes a most efficient alarm gong. The sound is repeated all along the trench, and in two minutes every man is in his place, crowded like a member of the Holy Inquisition, glaring through an eye-piece of mica, and firing madly into the approaching wall of vapour.

But the expected attack did not materialize. When some particular German battery or machine gun becomes too annoying, word is passed by telephone to the artillery and they play for a while exactly on the spot indicated. A chapter on trench mortars brings out the fact that "the most unpopular man in the trenches is undoubtedly the trench mortar officer. His apparatus consists of what looks like a section of rainpipe, standing on legs. Upon its upturned muzzle is poised a bomb, having the appearance of a plum-pudding on a stick. This he discharges over the parapet into the German trenches, where it causes a comforting explosion. He then walks rapidly away."

A trench mortar officer, with his apparatus, made his appearance in the Highlanders' trenches, and Major Kemp meets him:

"No, you don't, my lad!" announces the Major. "Not if I can help it! Take it away! Take your darned liver-pill out of this! Burn it! Bury it! Eat it! But not here! Creep away!"

It's an Ishmaelitish existence, the trench officer's, the writer comments.

The Letters of T. Atkins.

A chapter deals with the letters of the soldiers—which the officers have to censor—with their "wistful references to old days; tender inquiries after bairns and wems; assurances to anxious wives and mothers that the dangers of modern warfare are merely nominal." Sometimes, also, there is such a "terse, masterly" letter as this.

Dere wife, if you could make the next postal order a trifle stronger I might be getting an egg to my tea.

Your loving husband,
Jas. Mucklewame, No. 70,077.

There is also the army's view of "things at home" as expressed by an officer who has been on leave, and describes London as he saw it last September:

One's own friends are down in the dumps. Of course it's only natural, because mos tof them are in mourning. Our losses are much more noticeable at home than abroad, somehow. People seemed quite surprised when I told them that things out here are as right as rain, and that our troops are simply tumbling over one another, and that we don't require any comic M.P.'s sent out to cheer us up. The fact is some people read the papers too much.

Nothing to Worry About.

The returned officer discusses conscription and how the side that wanted it "represents that the British Army on the western front is reduced to a few platoons and is allowed to fire but one shell a day," while the opposition "states quite simply that if the personal liberty of Britain's workers—that doesn't mean you and me, as you might think; we are the Overbearing Militarist Oligarchy; a worker is a man who goes on strike—they say that if the personal liberty of these sacred perishers is interfered with by the Overbearing Oligarchy aforesaid, there will be a revolution. That's all! Oh, they're a sweet lot, the British newspaper bosses!"

He is asked what the country at large think of it all, and replies:

The dear old country at large is its dear old self as usual. It is not worrying one jot about conscription or us or anything like that. The one topic of conversation at present is—Charlie Chaplin.

"Who is Charlie Chaplin," inquired several voices.

Captain Wagstaff shook his head.

KEEP CHILDREN WELL

To keep little ones well the bowels must be kept regular and the stomach sweet. Nine-tenths of childhood ailments are caused by derangements of these organs. Baby's Own Tablets never fail to regulate the stomach and bowels—that is why thousands of mothers would give no other medicine to their little ones. Concerning them Mrs. Chas. A. Turner, Marie Joseph, N.S., writes: "We have been using Baby's Own Tablets off and on for the past year and a half and have found nothing to equal them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Liberal Ideas and Advocacy Adopted

TORONTO, April 7.—Important legislation in connection with the development of Northern and North western Ontario, providing for Government loans to settlers not exceeding $600 to any settler, the appointment of a Commissioner, the distribution of pure seed, the encouragement of live stock grazing and dairy farming and a closer supervision of settlement with a view to developing the social life of the settlers, was introduced by the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, in the Legislature yesterday.

The legislation is practically the legislation the Liberals in Ontario have been urging for the last five years. Only last session the Government turned down a resolution introduced by Mr. Sam Carter (Liberal member for South Wellington) asking for the very action the Government is now taking.

In this connection it is interesting to note that this makes the fourth policy advocated by the Liberal party that the Government has adopted during the present session of the Legislature, the other three policies being: "abolish the bar," the establishment of a trades and labour branch and the policy of submitting to the Legislature itemised statements of proposed Timiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway expenditure.

$70,000 ASKED FOR

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Secretary of war Baker transmitted to the House a request for an urgent deficiency appropriation of $70,000 for engineer troops and civilian employes, much of the amount to be utilized in the expedition against Villa. The letter set forth that 10,000 of the sum asked is to be used in 'acquirement of data," and the employment of photographers, draftsmen and other civilians in connection with the march into Mexico.

ROSY CHEEKS.

The Ambition of Every Woman—Pale People Read This

Hollow cheeks with dark lines, sallow complexion—how a woman hates them.

But rosy cheeks, clear skin, bright eyes—give them to a woman and she is happy.

In the blood is found the first sign of trouble.

It grows thin and watery, its color fades, and increasing pallor and sallowness give the outward evidence of the change within.

Soon the nerves weaken, the heart easily tires and palpitates, strength declines.

The delicate mechanism of the womanly functions is interfered with, and pleasures, activities and even duties are loaded down with the burden of declining health.

Why is it that women neglect the first warnings?

Usually she waits until she is ready to drop—often then it is too late.

These conditions are easily checked, easily cured at the beginning—but even when long established Ferrozone will remove the cause and cure the trouble.

Ferrozone's action aids the three principal functions of the body—digestion, assimilation, elimination.

To Speak at the Annual Meeting of the Ladies' Mission Circle of Murray St. Church on Tuesday Next

Miss Harriett Stratton Ellis, B.A., D.Paed., is to be the speaker at the annual meeting of the Ladies' Mission Circle of Murray St. Church on Tuesday, April 11th. The business meeting will be held at 3 o'clock, and the open meeting at 3:30 o'clock. In answer to inquiries we are asked to state that all the ladies of Peterborough are welcome to attend this service. The subject of the address will be "Women— and the need of the hour."

Miss Ellis is the Principal of Moulton Ladies' College, Toronto, and is a woman of unusual talent as a platform speaker, as well as a specialist in Paedagogy, and should be heard by all who can possibly arrange to attend.

Realizing that many young ladies and men who cannot attend in the afternoon, will wish to hear Miss Ellis, the Young Ladies' Mission Circle has arranged to have her address a "rally" at 8 o'clock in the evening. To this meeting men and women of all churches, and all interested in the part women are taking in important world movements are invited.

A FRIGHTFUL DEATH SUFFOCATED IN ASTHMA ATTACK

Every sufferer from asthma knows the terror, the abject fear that overcomes them when struggling for breath. The old fashioned remedies may relieve but never cure. Best results come from Catarrhosone which cures asthma after hope is abandoned. It's because Catarrhosone kills the asthma germ that it cures. Choking spells and labored breathing are relieved, suffocating sensations and loss of breath are cured. Every trace of asthma is driven from the system, and even old chronics experience immediate relief and lasting cure. Equally good for bronchitis, throat trouble and catarrh. The large one dollar outfit includes the inhaler and lasts two months. Sold by all dealers or from the Orrath,bo the Catarrhosone Co., of Kingston, Canada.

LITERARY RAMBLES

To the minds of those not much given to thinking or reading, but who imbibe what little knowledge they possess from the conversation of those about them, a public library appears in the light of luxury rather than of a necessity or a convenience. To people of this stamp a shelf-load of books is nothing more than a shelf-load of books, just as a primrose by the river's brim was a simple primrose and nothing more to the character in Wordsworth's poem.

There is nothing that opens the eye of mentality and broadens its scope like the reading of a book. The child revels in a new world every day and fairies frolicking in fields of Asphodel can be pictured as not one whit happier than the boy or girl curled up in a cosy corner or under the shelter of some friendly hedge, devouring a good tale of adventure or romance. The bed-ridden cripple can fight his battles o'er again in the pages of many a rousing tale of derring-do, and travel, in spite of his infirmity, with the strongest and most robust of the heroes who have braved the poisonous African swamps or Himalayan heights, or imperilled life and limb in the quest for the Poles. But reading does more than this. It acts as a corrective to the body politic and is the very salt of civilization, without which all our love of the heroic, all our regard for law, all our sentiment, all our loyalty, all our idealism, all, in fact, that makes life endurable and enjoyable, would be cast away to rot in the slough of grossest materialism.

We know that eminent men have occasionally said that there is nothing more depressing than the sight of old books. To them they are the outward and visible signs of dead personalities, conjuring up sad visions of cemeteries and tombstones and disappointed hopes and ambitions. Well, there are many thousands of insignificant mortals who prefer to look at books in a different light; to whom books symbolize not death, but life; for whom, whether the covers be torn and frayed and the pages greased by long usage, their influence is potent, in a measure far greater than that exerted by the lives of countless millions who roam this planet, unconcerned about anything but their own welfare. I am not ashamed to confess that I am in the ranks of those who reverence old books, and I find nothing so interesting as the life of a man or woman who has written a great work. The history of literature is one of the most interesting in the whole range of reading, and if I can induce anyone who reads these few lines to turn away, for a brief period, from the perusal of fiction to that of the history of literature, I shall feel that a good deed has been accomplished. Fiction cannot compete with it in any of the elements that make for a delightful story. Every phase of character is there embodied. Prince and pauper alike have contributed to its wealth and prince and pauper are honoured in equal measure in its pages. One fleeting glance backward will serve to show its absorbing interest. Two hundred years ago literature had arrived at the time of almost its greatest glory and its greatest shame. We see Shakespeare and his wonderful co-tempararies, Greene, Ben Johnson, Beaumont, Fletcher, and others, twinkling far off in the darkness and in the nearer distance what a splendid galaxy of stars! All the mighty authors of Queen Anne's time, and the four Georges. How well they wrote, how miserably by far the greater portion of them subsisted. Living in garrets, lying in bed till their garments were returned from the wash, borrowing everywhere, begging and even starving, the noble profession of literature held out no hope of a crown for them save the crown of posthumous glory. Yet, they wrote on, and who that loves reading, who that has had his brain enkindled by the thoughts and words of the great of days gone by but must hold each book that bears the imprint of such fenius in loving and reverent regard?

WHOLE FAMILY MURDERED; HOUSE AND BARNS BURNED

Diabolical Crime in Wakaw District Evidently Madman's Work.

SASKATOON, April 8.—A whole family of six was annihilated in the Wakaw district Wednesday night, when Prokop Manchure, his wife, a brother-in-law and three children were murdered, the house burned over their dying bodies, and their animals shot down and left to perish in the burning buildings.

The crime was evidently commtited by a madman, in whose hands the rifle found in the ruins had been used to terrible effect.

Among the buildings burned were two barns, in one of which six head of horses perished in the fire, and in the other two head of cattle. Three oxen were shot dead outside of the barn. No trace of the murderer has been discovered.

STUDENTS SERVE KAISER

Fully 83 Per Cent. of Males Enrolled Are in War Service Now.

Of the 53,300 students enrolled in German universities for the Winter season of 1915-16, only 10,460 men and 4,600 women actually are pursuing their studies at these institutions. The rest are serving the Kaiser, either as soldiers or in the hospital corps. About 1,000 of them entered the ranks during the current season, bringing the percentage of male German students in the army up to 83, according to an estimate contained in the Berliner Tageblatt of February 14. The percentage for the Summer semster of 1915 was reported as 81.81.

Among the students at the universities this season are 1,400 foreigners, of whom 300 are women. Of the 4,600 women enrolled, some 220 are in the hospital service. The proportion of students in the various departments of knowledge is about the same as in times of peace, with the exception of a sharp falling-off in the number of those studying medicine, political science, and agriculture, the favourite subjects of the foreigners.

STREET PARADE NEXT TUESDAY

Uncle Tom's Cabin Will Have a Monster Procession—Two Bands

Uncle Tom's Cabin will visit Peterborough on Tuesday next, and the children of the city are assured of an attractive street parade at noon. There will be donkeys, ponies, and the proverbial blood-hounds of Uncle Tom's Cabin fame. There will be two bands, one composed of white musicians and the other of darkeys. Also little Eva's chariot will figure in the procession. Every child in the city should be out to see it.

INTERESTING DEBATE ON AGRICULTURE

Special to the Examiner:

Parliament Buildings, Toronto, April 6.—One of the most carefully thought out, best prepared and most intelligent debates which have occurred in the Legislature for a long time, was the one on Agriculture, organized by the Liberal members under the leadership of Thomas Marshall of Lincoln, C. M. Bowman of West Bruce, Nelson Parliament of Prince Edward, G. A. Gillespie of West Peterborough and J. C. Elliott of West Middlesex.

The government did not accept the Opposition's proposals but the country is undoubtedly indebted to the initiative of these men in presenting to the House such a comprehensive and constructive progarmme of agricultural progress.

Each of the members took up some definite phase of the rural problem. Mr. Bowman in one of the most solid and striking speeches of the year dealt with the relation of war and finance to agriculture; Mr. Parliament, in his customary keen and breezy style, pleaded the case for rural credits; Mr. Gillespie, who is an ex-President of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, put forward the claims of the dairy industry; Mr. Elliott devoted himself to agricultural education, and Mr. Marshall himself, with insight and vigor, summed up the whole case.

The chief significance of the debate is that it gives an indication of the aggressive policies being taken by the Liberal party now that the temperance question is being settled so greatly to their satisfaction.

A Real Flesh Builder For Thin People

This men and women—that big, hearty, filling dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and stick, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are probably sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and fussy mawdsut diets. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating and eat with every one of these a single Sargol tablet. In two weeks note the difference. Let the scales be the judge. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, "stay-there" fat may be the net result. Sargol aims to charge weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—to give the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food, to prepare it for the blood in an easily assimilated form. Thin people tell how they have gained all the way from 10 to 15 pounds a month while taking Sargol and say that the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a careful combination of six of the best assimilated elements known to chemistry. They come 42 tablets to a package, are pleasant, harmless and inexpensive and all good druggists in this vicinity sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back as found in every large package.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00 money order or registered letter to the National Laboratories, 76 St. Antoine St., Montreal and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid in plain wrapper.

HASTINGS DOCTOR TELLS OF MURDER OF CHILDREN BY BOMBS

Little Tots Were on Their Way to Sunday School When German Aeroplane Appeared Over Ramsgate—Five Youngsters Were Killed and Nine Injured

Capt. Dr. F. B. Edmison, C.A.M.C. of Hastings, Ont., and now on the medical staff at the Canadian hospital at Ramsgate, Eng., writing home to his wife in Toronto, gives some interesting particulars concerning the recent seaplane raid over Ramsgate.

The doctor writes: "Capts. McLeod and Clarke and myself were walking out on King Street, intending to walk out to Broadstairs. It was a little after 2 o'clock in the afternoon when we sighted two German aeroplanes. We stood for a minute or two watching them, when suddenly the ships and battle cruisers opened fire. There was a terrible racket. Bombs began to drop. Three bombs dropped in Cecilia road, a few rods from where we stood; knocked the kitchen off one house and the verandah off another. The thing sounded as if it had dropped just on the other side of the fence. No people were killed at this spot, although there had been five people in the kitchen a few minutes before.

"As the airships floated over they could be seen to rise slightly as the bombs left the ship. I saw this happen distinctly four times. We went bomb had fallen on a moving motor around the city and saw where a bomb had fallen on a moving motor car, smashing the body of the car, as well as the man. Another bomb knocked the side out of a store.

"When we reached the end of our street we saw a crowd gathered in front of Chatham House, the school now used as our hospital. A bomb had fallen about 12 feet from my room, spoiled four rooms, but, fortunately, no one was injured."

Referring to the killing by one of the bombs of a group of children, the doctor says:

"I do not want to give you the harassing details nor to stir up your feelings. I can't trust myself to say on paper what I think of this slaughter of the innocents." He briefly describes how five children were killed outright and nine injured. They were on their way to Sunday School and had the raid happened a few minutes earlier, there would have been a still greater slaughter, as many more children were on the road. Later the doctor speaks of attending the public funeral of the slain children, and says that a subscription has been taken up and that a monument is to be erected to the memory of the "little martyrs."

Capt. Edmison encloses vol. 1, No. 1, of a new weekly paper called "Canadian Hospital News," printed and published at Chatham House, Ramsgate, by patients and staff. The paper is a delightful little review of hospital life and of Canadian interests in general.

Grain Market Has Advanced

Wheat Jumped Ten Cents Within a Week—This Week's Market Report

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in Canadian Grocer this week:

After a period of prolonged easiness, not to say dullness, the grain market has advanced sharply. This is evidenced in the increased price of No. 1 Northern wheat, in store at Fort William, which has jumped 10c within a week. At the time of writing there is a slight reaction, but this is thought to be only temporary. The better state of the wheat market has influenced business for flour and feeds, both in Manitoba and Ontario. This latter particularly was bullish and advanced 10c. Export business, which was hit pretty hard because of the unfortunate situation in freights, is reviving, and cables are materialising into orders. Ocean freights are somewhat easier and this all helps. Domestic demand is also strengthening somewhat. This applies also to feeds, and in the three major feeds an advance of $1 each is recorded. Oats are strong and Ontario oats have actually advanced during the week. Thus the grain market is in much better shape than it was a couple of weeks ago. That is to say, it has gained more strength all round.

FRESH FISH.

Trade and public will alike be glad to learn that several lines of fresh fish are now making their appearance and are attracting purchasers. Flounders are coming in from New York. Fresh caught sea salmon from British Columbia is arriving in small quantities and white fish from Lake Erie of excellent quality is coming. Roe shad from New York though somewhat high-priced, will appeal to the high-class trade. Fresh haddock and cod, although somewhat scarce, are coming along, so that the fish market has a good deal to offer at this time. Business has been exceptionally good in the fish market during the past two or three weeks. In fact dealers agree that they have never seen better Lenten business.

Another line which has advanced all through the west and which may be expected to do so in the east, is twine. This is not a comestible but nevertheless is an important article in the grocery store. This is the second advance in twine and strong since the beginning of the war.

New-laid eggs are now so plentiful in all parts of the country that prices are sinking and the competition is now not so much between the American egg and the Canadian product as between dealers themselves who are buying eggs from the country. Supplies are coming in amply and although there is a big consumption, there is now sufficient revenue to provide for an easy market. Declines are registered this week in all markets through the country of 1, 2 and 3 cents. Poultry on the other hand is much higher and there is a consistently good demand apparently in the large centres. Naturally, there is not very much stock coming into the market at this time and what is is taken up pretty well. Markets are reported bare of turkey and also finding an exceptionally good demand for chickens.

Rice market is on the up grade this week.

GIRL OF 14 WANTS DIVORCE.

Married by Force in Persia When She Was Only 11.

An unusual spectacle was presented in Judge Kersten's court-room in Chicago, when Mrs. Iater Smile, 14 years old, appeared to obtain a divorce from Samuel Smile, 38 years her senior, to whom she was married in 1913, in Persia. She charged her husband with cruelty and desertion, and Judge Kersten indicated that he would grant her a divorce.

Attorney William P. Meyers, representing the girl, told the court that she had been forced into the marriage at the age of 11 years by her grandfather, in accord wtih the Persian custom.

Ten days ago attention was attracted to Ister when Henri Hornbach appeared at the fruit store conducted by her father, Rupert Thomas, and told him of his desire to marry his daughter.

When threatened by the father, Hornbach took a box of poison from his pocket and emptied a part of the contents into his mouth.

Belgian Relief Poster

Famous Dutch Artist's Remorseless Exposure of German Inhumanity in Belgium

Louis Raemaekers, the famous Dutch Cartoonist, has generously drawn, for the National Committee for Relief in Belgium one of the most remarkable and certainly the most heartrending of all the "War Posters."

The misery of the millions now in Belgium whom the Germans refuse to feed has inspired this notable artist to his finest effort. A Belgian woman, with a ragged red cloak over her shoulders, is holding tightly to her breast an infant in a shawl. Around the child is clasped the mother's hand—a hand which spells starvation. In the woman's face there is the infinite sorrow of motherhood, driven to despair by German inhumanity, and the pitiful, helpless yearning to relieve the child's suffering.

But it is in the face of the child that Raemaekers has told the full horror of the tragedy of Belgium. The staring terror in the eyes that look up at the mother makes one shudder and turn away to think what might have been in England. With remorseless realism Raemaekers, in this infant of pain, has visualised to the world the infamy of Germany.

The poster which is artistically reproduced, has this laconic heading:—"In Belgium." Underneath, appears the one word "Help." Any reader of this newspaper can secure a copy of the poster free of cost by sending a postcard to the Hon. Secretary, National Committee for Relief in Belgium, Trafalgar Buildings, Trafalgar Square, London.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION.

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

"O, Mr. Hunsl, won't you please join our new society for the Amelioration of the Condition of the Unemployed?" "Sorry, madam, but I have not got time. I'm am too busy beating up jobs for people who are out of work."

MAPLE SYRUP AT 45c. AND 50c. A QUART ON MARKET TO-DAY

Butter and Eggs Were Both Fairly Cheap This Morning—Potatoes at $2.00 a Bag Were Rather Plentiful.

Maple Syrup, per qt., 45c and 50c.
Eggs, 20c to 22c.
Butter, 30c to 32c.
Chickens, each, 75c and $1.00.

"I could get more maple syrup this year if I had some help," said one farmer on the market this morning, "but I had to do all the work myself this week, and I couldn't get around as much as I should. I've got a brother and a couple of nephews in khaki; if I had them out with me for a few days it would help a lot."

This is likely to be the keynote for all rural topics this year. Shortage of help. Many of the farmers are complaining even in advance, before they are hurt you might say. However, when they realize that the spring work is going to have fewer than ever labourers possibly their present misgivings are excusable.

There was a fairly plentiful supply of maple syrup this morning, some maple sugar and numerous citizens armed with pails and wide-mouthed bottles. Fifty cents a quart is a tidy price for maple syrup, and one of those milk cans even half full of it would be well worth bringing to town. The farmers do not anticipate a continued run. The season, they say, will be scarcely up to the average.

Eggs were plentiful and sold down to twenty cents. In fact wholesalers bought entire baskets of them, took them outside and crated them, thus relieving the surplus.

Butter averaged 33 cents, but there was quite a quantity that sold all the way down to 30 cents. Poultry was scarce. Potatoes were fairly plentiful at $2.00 a bag. The price seemed none too steady.

CARING FOR THE BOYS WHO ARE NOW BACK

may sit, or rest, while at it. So the committee are studying where to find openings in which a new, or partially new, trade may be gained.

Beyond question, in the near future, the local association must have money with which to carry on the work. Sympathy, talk, bright conversation, praise of bravery and personal pluck are all very well. It is only money that counts. Assistance will be needed, not only because it is deserved, but in order that the man shall retain his self-respect and feel that he, having done his share, is not looked on as a back number. We are only at the threshold of this thing and have a heap to learn as yet.

The committee are casting about for funds. The head office at Toronto, send a word that no appropriations have been made to piece out the local branches throughout the province. So local effort must provide. Manifestedly the City Council have closed the door to any appeal, this year. Other activities have had the field and favour, but a way must be found. The expense is a part of the contingent expense of carrying on a war.

In this connection we print below a circular letter issued to-day from the Head office, Toronto, in regard to changes in the way of remunerating returned and disabled men, until such time as pensions are declared. The arrangements are those for Class 2.

This instruction has been issued by the Department of Militia and Defence, and supersedes arrangements which have been in force since February 1st, also that in force previously, regarding subsistence in lieu of separation allowance to the wives of returned (disabled) members of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, who have been placed in Class 2.

This arrangement places invalided soldiers in exactly the same basis as those in training and takes effect from the 1st of March, 1916.

1. Married men in convalescent homes, hospitals, etc. Separation allowance of $20.00 per month to privates, $25.60 per month to sergeants (usual rates) will be paid to wives. This amount will be credited on pay list and paid out as assigned pay. In these cases the regular assigned pay of at least $15.00 per month should be paid to the wives as well as the separation allowance . . Balance of pay and field pay is payable to the men.

2. Married men at their own homes. Payments, (as per preceding paragraph) will be paid and in addition 60 cents per day subsistence allowance to the men.

3. Single men will continue to be treated as at present, viz., no subsistence if in convalescent homes, etc., 60 cents per day subsistence. It is understood that unmarried men, the sole support of widowed mothers are to be considered as married men.

As heretofore, payment of assigned pay and separation allowance from Headquarters, Ottawa, will be stopped at the end of the month in which the man returns, and transfer of the account together with all necessary information will be made to the Divisional and District Paymaster, (at Kingston, for this district), with the least possible delay.

THE KINGDOM OF THE SKY

This article is just going to be a little story about some of the more interesting facts in connection with our own earth.

The earth is not exactly like a round ball. Astronomers call it an oblate spheroid. Get a soft orange and plane one end on your open left palm, place your open right hand on the top of the orange, press the orange a little between the two hands, the orange will then assume the shape of the earth. A little flattened at the poles and a little wider around the equator.

You would be surprised if you were told that some of our great rivers ran uphill.

The accepted meaning of going up hill, is to go further from the centre o fthe earth. The surface of the earth, at the equator is about thirteen miles of the earth. The surface of the earth than it is at the poles. So it follows that all the rivers running from the moderate latitudes to the equator are running up hill.

At the poles the earth's rotation speed is twice as slow as are the small hands of a clock, while at the equator, the earth whirls around as fast as the speed of a bullet fired from a rifle, 1440 feet per second.

If you want to find out how many square miles there are on the surface of the earth, just imagine the earth to be rectangle, the length of which is equal to its circumference and the width equal to its diameter, multiply the two together, the answer will be the number of square miles on the surface of the earth. The diameter of the earth is 7,917.6 miles. If you multiply this by 3.1416 you will get the circumference.

If you wish to find out the volume of the earth, cube the radius and multiply by 39.23.

How often do you stop to think about how much is the rainfall? The quantity is truly enormous.

Every year there falls to the earth 29,347 cubic miles of rain water. 6,624 cubic miles of this amount drains to the sea. The balance fertilizes the land.

One cubic mile of rain water weighs about four and a quarter billions of tons.

Every cubic mile of rain water that drains to the sea, carries with it about 400,000 tons of solid matter. In this way the elevations of the earth are being gradually lowered.

The weight of the rainfall per annum equals about 1-9000 of the volume of the earth

The volume of the earth is about 270,000,000 cubic miles. The earth weighs about six and a half quintillion tons.

The matter of the sun weighs very little more than the same bulk of water, 1.39.

So though the sun is about 1,300,000 times the bulk of the earth, it is only about 332,000 times its weight.

The earth goes around the sun in an oval circle (eliptical) nearer one end. The earth goes around the end that is nearer the sun about the 1st. January and around the end that is farther away from the sun about Dominion Day. Thus the southern hemisphere, whose summer comes during our winter, receives about 5 p.c. more heat in summer time and 5 p.c. less in winter than we do.

If you notice many of our cold spells just last a few days, also the very hot spells. There is a reason for this.

It was suspected that the heat radiated by our sun was not constant. Some of our astronomers, with delicate scientific instruments carefully measured the amount of light and heat we receive from the sun.

In order that there should be as little error as possible, observing stations were placed both in America and Africa. At both stations in almost opposite parts of the earth, it was found that the heat radiated from the sun varied from 5 p.c. to 10 p.c. in varying periods of from three to ten days.

This is quite enough to make quite an appreciable change in the weather. Our sun is thus an irregular variable star. Just what causes the periodic change has not yet been discovered, or even conjectured.

The development of the earth reads like a romantic story.

After the earth hardened into its present condition and the rocks had formed, vegetation began.

During the period of what you may almost call embryo life. Enormous development of vegetation existed, supported by carbonic gas and the inherent heat of the earth.

The weeds, trees, etc., for thousands of years grew and withered. Then seas rolled over them, sediment was deposited on them and they were pressed into coal for us to mine, and then came the time when earth was suitable for the habitation of man.

Earth has been fitted for the existence of human life for a million years anyway and very likely for a very much longer time. In all probability human beings have been living on earth for a very much longer time.

Just as soon as the sustenance of life was possible on earth it appeared here. Fossil remains prove this.

During the early ages of the earth, population could never have become dense. For ages men were hunters, not for a long time did they become tillers of the soil. For instance when the white men came to North America there were only about three hundred thousand American Indians here.

Local warfare and scarcity of food prevented increase in population.

Somewhere about 400,000 years ago owing to the interior of the earth cooling and shrinking, the outer crust, accomodating itself to the smaller interior, threw up great ridges and thus formed mountains.

You know if a mountain is high enough to get far enough away from the heat radiation of the earth, the snow will never melt, as year by year snowfall after snowfall, was deposited on the tops of these abnormally high elevations. The snow and ice accumulated until great glaciers were formed.

There were three of these very high elevations in Nort America. Two large centres were formed, one in North British Columbia and one in Labrador and a smaller one near James' Bay. These ice centres gradually spread, until the dreary ice and snow extended far down into what is now known as the United States.

These ice sheets were not constant They alternately receded and extended, as gravitation pulled the crust of the earth nearer to the earth's radiation of the sun's heat, or as the adjustment of the crust caused higher elevations to be formed. The great ice age lasted perhaps about 50,000 years.

Among all primative peoples, there have existed traditions of a great flood. This was doubtless caused by some subsidence of the crust of the earth.

Why Spring Brings Out Freckles and Eruptions

The sudden appearance of freckles slight eruptions of fine lines at this season, is attributed by scientists to the "actinic ray," which is unusually active during the spring months. Where the skin is so affected by the influence, if one will procure an ounce of common mercolised wax at any drug store, apply a little of it before retiring, like cold cream, she can easily overcome the trouble. When the wax is washed off the next morning, flaky skin particles come with it. The entire outer cuticle is removed in this way in a week or two, with all its defects. No bleach could so effectually remove freckles or blemishes. The new surface is smooth, clear, fresh looking. No pain or inconvenience accompanies this simple treatment.

In case of wrinkles which sink beneath the outer skin a solution of saxolite, 1 ounce, dissolved in 1-2 pint of witch hazel, makes a face bath which is wonderfully effective.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

In the early stages kidney troubles are known by headache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, stone, rheumatic pains and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. Their thorough action on the liver, kidneys and bowels will clear away the pains and the aches and make you well again.

Announcement From Robert Hicks Co., Ltd. Coal Dealers

A NUMBER of Our Customers have asked at our Office and on the Telephone regarding the advisability of putting in their usual supply of Hard Coal at the present prices. For them and the Public generally, we gladly give such information as we have at hand, in as concise form as possible. In doing so we wish to say, that at the present time the Hard Coal situation is not alarming.

1. The Miners Wage Agreement terminated on April 1st.

2. At the present time a Committee of the mine workers and a committee of the operators are negotiating a wage scale, and an agreement has been entered into whereby mine operations will be continued for the month of April, or until an agreement has been arrived at, or until it has been decided an agreement cannot be arrived at.

3. It is generally conceded, owing to the labor conditions in United States, that an advance in wages is inevitable. The question is as to the extent of the advance in wages to be made.

4. Of all Hard Coal mined about 65% only is for domestic use. The balance, about 35%, is buckwheat, rice and barley sizes, which is used exclusively for steam purposes, and is in direct competition with soft coal, so that almost all of the increased cost of mining will be borne by 65% of the output, which is domestic size.

5. Up to the present time, there has been no notification by the Coal Companies of the usual reduction of 50 Cents per ton for Spring prices.

REMEMBER—We do not advise you to buy Coal now—we simply lay before you the present conditions, knowing that in the past each adjustment of the miners wage agreement has increased the wholesale price of Hard Coal.

REMEMBER—We do advise you that WE are buying Coal now, and that should you decide to fill your bins we solicit your order.

REMEMBER—That by placing your order with us, you will be supplied with the Delaware Lackawanna and Western Coal Coy's Scranton Coal Screened by the Only Modern Screening System in the City.

REMEMBER—The Coal—The Delaware Lackawanna and Western Coal Company's Scranton Coal. Other Dealer's advertis Scranton and Lackawanna Coal, Etc. We regard these imitations as the most sincere form of flattery.

ENGLISH PEOPLE NOT OBJECTING TO THE NEW BUDGET

last week and Mr. McKenna's budget finished it. Except so far as she shares in the general gigantic expense of the war Ireland is free of the additional burdens over last year.

A CONTRAST.

There is the same contrast between foreign and home affairs as last week. Everybody feels that the turn in the war tide has begun. The continuance of the splendid defence of Verdun has given new hope. The situation in the near East is developing on good lines but at home there is more unrest, partly due to Zeppelin raids, though the first success in bringing down one has inspired confidence that the Ministry is at last grappling with the annoying pest.

Intrigue is active in the Commons, seeking a weapon in the demand for universal conscription. Two things are sought: either to get the Cabinet to accept universal conscription ,which means Premier Asquith's retirement, or by a majority vote in favor of conscription, to force Bonar Law to resign. Either would mean the breaking up of the Ministry but though it is possible it is more probable that Sir Edward Carson could not carry even his own colleagues to that extreme and that the common sense of the Commons will resist every attempt to swap horses in mid-stream.

I had an interesting experience the other day when I found myself opposite Mr. Bonar Law and Mr. Hughes, the Australian Prime Minister, at a luncheon where they had both to speak. I know no more delightful experience for one whose business it is to speak at all kinds of public gatherings, than to feel certain that whoever else has to speak, you have not. It gives you an opportunity of watching the other fellows squirm. I may here interject the remark that I have rarely, if ever, known any man however trained to public speaking who is not nervous before he makes a speech, specially if it be on an occasion a little out of his beaten track.

WERE DISTURBED.

At this particular lunch, both Mr. Bonar Law, and Mr. Hughes were visibly disturbed by the prospect of having to make a speech, though bith of course have had years of experience in that occupation. They refused resolutely the tempting wines and the whiskey which were offered to them; both, as a matter of fact, are practically teetotallers; a small bottle of ginger ale—now a favourite beverage in London where teetotallerism has become rampant since the war—is all I have ever seen by the side of Mr. Bonar Law at all kinds of festivities. Mr Hughes rejected the proffered refreshment on the ground, as he humorously put it, that whatever sense he had would disappear if he were to indulge in alcohol.

A DRY CROWD.

At the other side of Mr. Bonar Law sat Mr. Fisher, the late Prime Minister of Australia and now its Agent General in London. He also is a teetotaller; it was, in short a very dry crowd. And here again I may interject another somewhat irrelevant observation as a symbol of the changes brough about by the war. I was present at a lunch given to the Russian journalist. Whatever were the faults of the Russian in the past, he could always be relied upon to take his whack and to complete successfully in carrying his liquor. But to my surprise every Russian journalist steadily refused to touch anything but mineral water; it brought home to one the gigantic revolution which the war and the prohibition of vodka has made in the habits of all the Russian people.

Mr. Bonar Law never puts a sentence on paper, however serious be the occasion on which he has to speak and thus at a certain moment at the luncheon I could see him retire into himself and begin to fashion in his inner mind what he was going to say. I have often told how he sits down in an arm chair when he has a big speech to deliver, remains seated for a couple of hours; and then gets up with his speech ready, but with his body and mind as worn out as if he had been writing for the two hours. When he does speak, with such preparation, he speaks remarkably well. He has the gift of words beyond doubt, and especially when words of tact are required. This is one of the reasons why he succeeded so remarkably well when Mr. Asquith, with great Parliamentary adroitness, appointed him as the chief spokesman of the Government Conscription Bill. This is the reason also why he has advanced so rapidly in Parliamentary favour since he became a member of the present Government. His speech at this lunch was quite excellent; saying the right word, and saying no more ,and pleasing everybody.

WAS STARTLED.

The figure, however, which was more interesting to me than even that of Mr. Bonar Law—largely because it was quite unfamiliar to me—was that of Mr. Hughes. Sitting opposite to him, I was startled by both the smallness of his stature and the apparent fragility of his frame. He seemed just a little man whose head scarcely came above the table, and who was a bundle of tremulous nerves. He felt himself, he said, as he was preparing for this speech, as if he were going to be hanged. His secretary placed before him a large bundle of manuscript, and I saw him laboriously going through this, with every appearance of anxiety making a correction here and a correction there. With such preparations it seemed more than probable that we should have from a halting, a discursive and a ragged speech. Mr. Hughes, as everybody knows, is Welsh and looks typically Welsh. He has the dark complexion, the dark and brilliant eyes of his countrymen. In some respects he reminds one a little of his illustrous countrymen, Mr. Lloyd George, except that there can be no true comparison between the joyous look of Mr. Lloyd George's sparkling eyes and the wondering and anxious expression of Mr. Hughes. I may confess that I was almost as nervous as Mr. Hughes, for I did not know how he was going to solve the problem of being effective and fluent and at the same time of sticking to his terrible manuscript.

WHAT HAPPENED

What happened was quite the contrary of everything I expected. He never looked at the manuscript for a moment; it might just as well not have existed, but in a tide of eloquence with an occasional pause, he burst upon the whole audience with a crash. A few moments after he had risen, he was master of them all; and they listened astounded and spellbound. I was particularly struck with the beauty and distinction of the languages; it was evidently the language of an educated and well-read man. Now and then it had an ironical touch which reminded me of Henry James. But the most astonishing thing was that this frail, pale-faced anxious little man appeared to be a soul on fire. There was inflexible resolution, fiery oratory in every word and especially when he got on the now popular topic of the unscrupulousness and relentlessness, as well as almost diabolical skill, with which the Germans had spreadl their tenacles of trade all over the world. This was followed of course by a revelation of the drastic and prompt measures by which Mr. Hughes and the Australian Parliament had confronted this octopus and strangled it.

A REMARKABLE GIFT

I will say little of the substance of the speech of Mr. Hughes; I was more concerned with the form and manner. He seems to be to belong to the school which exists in Labour ranks in Australia, and one which would set up a whole Tariff system in the British Empire against all German goods—a scheme which I may say at once will meet with the most vigorous resistance from most of the great business men and all the Free Traders of Great Britain. Let that pass for the moment; the great thing was that we had here from Australia a man with a fiercy soul, a resolute purpose and a really remarkable gift of speech.

It was the first time I had seen Mr. Hughes, but I have been hearing all about him lately. He is one of the most remarkable careers in the British Empire. He began life as a schoolmaster and student, but England offered him little prospects, so he emigrated to Australia. There he found his knowledge and love of literature of little use to him, and he had to adopt manual labour. He has not yet told the whole strange story of his life, but when he does tell it, it will be found that he had to descent to the very abysses of poverty, to try his frail and unskilled hands on all kinds of jobs. But amid it all he was a born agitator and politician. He got into touch with labour organisations; with a natural power of command, strange in one of small stature and delicate physique, he became almost a despot in all the rude ranks of labour. In the end he became a member of Parliament and is now Prime Minister. He has already become a popular and powerful figure in Great Britain, he is over-run with invitations to go here, there and everywhere; has been to a Cabinet Council; was made a Privy Counsellor almost in landing, and undoubtedly will have a good deal to say on the question of Imperial reorganisation, which is one of the most certain and desirable results of this war. When Imperial Federation comes to be considered—and it is coming with every hour—his voice will have a large part in the shaping of the future constitution of the British Empire.

Strange, is it not, that a little delicate Welshman who had to work at every trade, to sweat and suffer and hunger, should be thrown up by this revolution of the great war into a position of such prominence and power.

scription in Canada. It is unlikely that his request will be granted by the Government, as public opinion in Canada on this question differs very much in the several provinces as it did in Great Britain, where one portion of the British Isles had to be omitted from the operation of the Conscription Act.

The only real necessity for conscription in Canada is the distribution of the burden of the war more equitably among the people. March recruiting figures show a thousand men a day are enlisting. This is a sufficient response to the demand.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has from the outset of the war taken strong ground against conscription and his supporters in the Province of Quebec have carried on a campaign against the enactment of such a law. It is in Quebec where conscription is needed, if the burden of the war is to be distributed equally throughout Canada. Chief Justice Mather could do his duty equally well by inducing Sir Wilfrid Laurier to arouse his compatriots to the situation. If this were done, all need of conscription for any reason would have passed away.

HARD PRESSED FOR VESSELS.

With the enlistment at the rate of a thousand per day it is very questionable if transportation across the Atlantic could be secured to take men at a greater rate. The British Government is hard pressed for transports. While they desire Canadian troops, yet forty thousand well-trained men are in the Dominion awaiting the opportunity to go to England.

The Toronto Star says: The 108th Sportsmen's Battalion received an addition to their mascots to-day in the shape of a game cock donated by George Graham, the Peterborough hotelkeeper. This old bird has been through many a hard battle, and Mr. Graham says he hates Germans with an undying hate. To keep him in shape for the big doings in the cockpit of Europe, Corpl. Tommy Daly will groom the Peterborough rooster for a few friendly engagements with a squad of Burton's Bantams. A challenge is already on the way.

The ladies of the 57th Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire, intend to hold a sock shower for the men of the 93rd Peterborough Battalion. Just when this shower will be held has not yet been decided; but in all probability it will be early in May. The purpose of the Chapter is to provide each man with a new pair of socks before the Battalion leaves the city for good, as this will necessitate over eleven hundred pairs of socks, the members of the 57th Chapter earnestly request all the ladies of both the city and county to co-operate with them, and especially they invite all the Chapters of the Daughters of the Empire and kindred societies to aid them in this admirable object.

Mrs. W. H. Hill, of 208 Brock street, is the convener of the committee in charge of the shower. Any information in connection therewith may be obtained on 'phoning her at No. 17.

Up to Saturday last over 375 actual residents of Cobourg had enlisted for active service. We hope to publish the honour roll shortly.—Sentinel Star.

SPLENDID MEETING LAST EVENING

At the Evangelistic Campaign by Mr. G. M. Sharpe at the Bethany Tabernacle

Last night's service was a fitting climax to the second week of the live evangelistic campaign being conducted by Evangelist Sharpe in Bethany Tabernacle.

An earnest company of those who confessed that they desired to take Christ as their saviour rushed forward to grasp the preacher's hand and to kneel in earnest seeking prayer at the close of the service.

The big Evangelist was full of wit and humour, as well as pathos throughout his powerful address. One moment his audience would be convulsed with laughter through some sudden outburst of Irish wit, and again they would be welted to silence and tears through a pathetic appeal to the unsaved to accept God's invitation to the "Great Supper."

Here are some of the pointed sayings of the big preacher:

"I don't know anything greater this side of Heaven than to know that we are at peace with God."

Speaking of the excuse of many unsaved that there are too many hypocrites in the church he said: "I would rather spend a few days in this life with a hypocrite in the church than to spend all eternity with hypocrites in Hell."

"You are holding on to some little sin, and it is dragging you down to Hell."

"There isn't any music that touches the ear of the Son of God like the cry of the sinner for mercy."

"It is easier to get into doubt than to get out of it."

"There are people in Peterborough who are just as blind as the two blind men whom Jesus healed—Blind to Christ's Divinity — Blind to His Blood—Blind to His Bible."

"Sin will eat the carpet off the floor. The dress off of your wife's back, and the smile off of her face."

"I tell you it is a glorious thing to have Christ nurse a sinner back to life."

Mr. Sharpe will speak to-morrow at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Special singing by a mixed quartette.

All are welcome.

Whatever possible procure perennials—they are the most satisfactory class of plants and especially adapted to the farmer's garden.

The most pressing problem of agriculture to-day is the question of farm credits. That the answer is not yet in sight must be admitted.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

SPORTING COMMENT

Frank Heffernan, well known to local hockey fans as a member of the champion Victorias, senior O. H. A. team, and this season a member of the Crescent hockey team, of New York, will be one of the Crescents lacrosse team this year. While a student at Ottawa College he was proficient in handling the stick.

This is the eighty-fifth anniversary of the birth of England's last heavyweight champion worthy of the name—the great and clever Jem Mace, master of ring generalship and the most scientific fighter of the bare knuckle era of pugilism. It has been less than five years since Jem passed away, at the ripe old age of eighty. Forty-five years have passed since Mace fought his last important ring contest, and in all that time England, the land of glorious pugilistic traditions, has been unable to produce a heavyweight of true championship calibre. Charlie Mitchell was a good man, and Jem Smith was fair, but they are not to be mentioned in the same breath with old Jem. As for Bombardier Wells and others of the more recent crop, Jem could have licked 'em with one hand tied behind his back.

At that Mace wasn't a real heavyweight. When he was at his best he weighed only 160 pounds, and doubtless could have made the middleweight limit with ease. He was five feet nine and a half inches tall. Yet he tackled the biggest of 'em, and he was never defeated save by men he afterward licked. Some of his greatest battles were fought on this side of the Atlantic, and he held the championship of America as well as of Great Britain. He continued fighting until he was past forty, and retired undefeated.

It is an old coincidence that the three most scientific battlers in the long history of the English prize ring were all named James and called Jem. The first of the illustrious trio was Jem Belcher, a natural fighter, scientific and a punishing hitter. It was considerably more than a century ago that Belcher, a mere boy in years, won the championship and held it until an accident partially deprived him of sight. The other great James was Jem Ward, Belher's equal if not his superior in ring craft.

Jem Mace had gypsy blood in his veins. In his early career he had the reputation of being "yellow," but he disproved this on many a hard-fought battlefield. His most important bout in America was fought in 1870, when he was nearly forty. On that occasion he defeated Tom Allen for the world's championship in ten rounds at Kennedyville, La. He later fought a draw with big Joe Coburn at Bay St. Louis, Miss.

That practically ended his championship career, but he afterward made a tour of New Zealand and Australia which was important in that it resulted in interesting Bob Fitzsimmons in the pugilistic game. During his long career, Mace made about a million dollars, but he lost all of it in unfortunate speculations, and died practically penniless.

England has turned out dozens of small men of championship calibre in the last forty-five years, but Mace was the last of her great heavyweight champions.

The Chestnut Tree.

"That man across the aisle has a powerful face," whispered the lady. "He looks like a man of remarkable decision."

"Oh, he's all of that," replied her masculine companion. "Some day he'll get himself killed for it. He gave a remarkable decision today that sent a mob after him thirsting for gore. You see, the fellow is a baseball umpire."

"MIXED SWEETS" IN SICK-ROOM OF THE WOUNDED

All the world now loves a soldier, and all the world has a number of wounded friends whom it visits in hospital, writes M. Beton-Karr in the London Express. The times have changed and customs with them. We were not used to see our young men friends in bed but conventionality is as extinct as the mammoth, whose reconstructed carcase delighted our childish gaze when in the days of long ago we visited the South Kensington Museum with our nursery governess. We all know this year exactly which coloured pyjamas are most becoming to Reggie and Bertie, and we have all had considerable experience in bedside conversation.

The war-time sick-room has a peculiar atmosphere which is all its own. There are a certain number of wounded heroes who desire visits from all their friends and acquaintances, who clamour for a game of bridge on the counterpane as soon as they can sit up in bed, and who keep their nurses on the run with telephone messages to "Joy Flapperton" and others of her set.

"DON'T MIX MY VISITORS"

A certain frivolous young gentleman was severely wounded in the head not long ago. The removal of the shrapnel entailed a serious operation and the surgeon had grave doubts whether the patient's brain would not be permanently affected. The nurses expected that his first words would be meaningless. He seemed very anxious to say something as soon as he recovered consciousness and the nurses feared delirium. However his utterances were as follows: "For goodness sake, don't mix my visitors. Relations and friends—don't get on." It was subsequently discovered that the patient had a number of serious relatives—of whom he had "expectations" as well as a large acquaintance with the "stage," and he had been in a fever of apprehension lest Uncle Godfrey or Aunt Emily should encounter Flossie Footlights in the front hall of the nursing home or on the threshhold of his chamber.

The trials of the frivolous or slightly dissipated young man who finds that his respectable relations (who used to cut him) now cluster around his sick bed and bore him with good advice, sympathy and affection, are almost farcial, as, being in bed, the victim cannot escape. In fact the reluctant prodigal being received into the bosom of his family is a comical figure, and one which may be contrasted with the man who dislikes frivolous lady visitors and is obliged to endure them.

TOO MANY GIRLS AROUND.

A quiet young man with a badly shattered leg said not long ago with a pathetic smile, "I am never alone for a moment. All the girls I ever danced with come to see me and it is so kind that I cannot always refuse them admittance though I have the massour here as many hours of the day as possible. I really think that I shall have to invent a jealous financee or better still a wife, and then I should be allowed to read in peace, and my room would not perpetually echo to the sound of senseless babble and always be scented with the perfumes of Bond street."

I sympathised with the speaker and suggested that he should advertise in one of the great dailies for a wife to be present, and yet absent, some one who would act as a kind of moral barbed wire entanglement, and yet would never appear in person; but my plan was rejected as the sufferer feared that the entanglement might prove to be permanent.

THE "CRUSTY MAJOR."

Advertisements are a great boon in war-time. The "Personal" column is a pleasing distraction over our breakfast, whether in hospital or out of it. It serves as a medium for jokes as well as for romance—though sometimes the romance may be doubtful, and the jokes are inclined to be of a dangerous character, as in the case of the "Crusty Major."

The "Crusty Major" was one of those men who dislike visitors. He had lived many years in the East, and when he came to London wounded he had no unfortunate friends who sought to cheer his hours of sickness. He was (unfortunately perhaps) sent to a nursing home full of what are known as "cheery" young officers, who decided that a little feminine society would soften the major's temper, and make him less sensitive to noise and music. An advertisement to the effect that a lonely major was incarcerated in such and such a nursing home and would welcome visitors, was inserted in a daily newspaper.

Now, the "Crusty Major" was the only man of that rank in this particular hospital, and when a couple of dashing young ladies asked for the major, they were admitted. The fair flappers were soon followed by two elderly dames, who also gained access to the victim's apartments. These were but the precursors of a mighty flood of callers, and the major's temper, instead of benefiting by the treatment, went from bad to worst, while his dislike and suspicion of the other patients in the home could not be stifled!

Hospitals and nursing homes have their queer stories, their jokes and their absurdities in war time, and there are moments when their inmates suffer from extraneous trials quite other than any caused by their wounds.

The whole glorious fabric of liberty which has been built up by centuries of sacrifice can only be preserved if we are prepared to the last drop of blood to fight for it.—Sir Joshua Reid.

How French Routed Foe at Avocourt

A HURRICANE OF PROJECTILES SWEPT THE FOREST BEFORE ATTACK WAS LAUNCHED.

A Village Northwest of Verdun, April 8th.—Yesterday I saw the most glorious sight a Frenchman's eyes can witness—soldiers of France victorious in battle. Between dawn and noon an important part of Avocourt Wood has been retaken and our troops are solidly established in a redoubt which the enemy thought impregnable.

Late Thursday evening a staff officer informed me that an attack was imminent. As I followed him the night, which had seemed a solitude, became peopled with shadowy figures. From all sides soldiers were thronging. They marched in silence to escape the notice of enemy observers. At a given point the troops entered the sheltered communication trenches and as the miles pass battalions form from the coalescing groups. The trenches are full of men advancing silently in serried ranks. The sky is shrouded in clouds; not a star glimmers. Our movements are hidden in pitchy darkness.

At midnight the concentration is completed and the reserves are in their appointed places. Is the cannonade fiercer or less fierce? I cannot say. The noise is so deafening that I have lost the power to judge its intensity. I cannot even distinguish the explosion of the shells that fall near the listening post where we are sheltered. Only when they burst the post and the earth around shudder like a ship at full speed. Their explosion is but a minor note in the hurricane of sound. The French artillery is preparing. Avocourt Wood, where the German infantry is massed in force.

The searchlights throw patch after patch of trees into bright relief, like the swiftly changing scenes of a cinematograph. Through binoculars one has a frightful vision. Not a yard of ground fails to receive the shock of a projectile. The solid earth bubbles before my eyes. Trees split and spring into the air. It is a surface earthquake with nothing spared, nothing stable. The Germans have abandoned the outlying brushwood and are huddled in to inmost recesses of the woods but the French artillery pursues them pitilessly.

Nearly 300 yards from the rim of brushwood the defenders—Prussians and Bavarians—have constructed a kind of redoubt which they expect to be the rock on which all attacks will break. The searchlights reveal their fortress; it is a wall of earth and tree trunks and seems half buried in the ground. Now and again in the patches of brightness one sees tiny shadows running, falling, rolling over or flitting from trunk to trunk like frightened night creatures surprised by sudden daylight. It is the soldiers of the Kaiser trying vainly to escape from the rain of death.

Dawn breaks and the searchlight beams vanish as the first grayness of morning rolls away night's curtain from the battlefield. We shiver in our blockhouse; is it cold, or nervousness. The officers around me say the moment has come. It is an agony of expectation; the attack is about to break.

A shrill ringing startles every one. The captain springs to the telephone, listens for an instant and then cries "All goes well!" in a firm voice. He hangs up the receiver, murmuring. "They are off!"

Our guns still thunder, but they have lengthened their range and the line of smoke blows opposite leaps forward toward the horizon. Suddenly the mitrailleuses set up a rattle right in front of us. They are firing from our front line trenches in a concave around the eastern corner of Avocourt Wood.

Some one grabs my arm and points northward. Down the slopes of Hill 304 a multitude of nimble figures are rushing westward. Their numbers increase; armed warriors spring from the ground as in the old Greek legend. "Our men," says the officer beside me. It is the soldiers of France at the charge.

For a while they are sheltered from the German fire by a swelling hillock of ground. They mount its crest and pour headlong downwards. Now the pace is slower; they advance singly or in scattered groups — crawling, leaping, running, each man taking advantage of every atom of cover. The leaders have reached the first trench that lies across the path; but see, they pass it without hesitation as though it were a tiny brook.

I learned afterwards that a hundred treetrunks had been arranged like bridges all along the trench.

Now the whole mass is across and we can see what cunning brain has planned the attack. For the charging men go straight forward like runners between strings, leaving open lanes along which their comrades can still fire upon the defenders.

At last the edge of the woods is reached and the rattle of the mitrailleuses ceases. It is hand-to-hand now in that chaos of storm tossed earth and tortured trees. Rifles are useless there; it is work for the bayonet or revolver, for butt and club, or even for fists and teeth. A wounded soldier who crawled back told me what the scene was like.

"Corpses were everywhere; we fell over them at each step—some of us to rise no more—until the bodies formed veritable heaps, among which the living fought and wrestled. How we advanced I don't remember; but suddenly we were storming their redoubt. One moment I was beating against the wall with my fists, the next plunging my bayonet into a red-bearded German whose rifle butt had just brained a comrade. As he fell I shouted but could not withdraw my bayonet. I left it and ran forward.

"Then I found myself in the wood beyond. Some one thrust a spade into my hand, shouting, 'Dig, Dig, like blazes!' I obeyed. Soon there was a line of diggers, each with a group of comrades before him beating off the Boche rushes. When I was waistdeep I began digging sideways to link up with the next man. Suddenly I received a blow on the shoulder which knocked me against the back of the trench.

"'You are hit!' cried a voice. 'Get out of the way and try to crawl back.' I crept behind the tree trunks where I saw a Boche with a bloody bandage around his knee. I forgot that he was an enemy and pointed to my shoulder. He smiled, he was only a youngster, took my bandage roll, put a pad on the wound and fixed me up fine. Then we crawled back together. It hurt him worse than me because the ground was so rough for his knee, but we managed to get out of the woods. Then the brancardiers picked us up. They said that we had won a victory, but I was too tired to ask more."

Ottawa Rugby Ranks Are Greatly Depleted

OTTAWA, Ont., April 7.—Ottawa footballists agree with the Toronto view that unless there is a great change in the war situation by September it is certain that senior Rugby Football will be a blank here for 1916. Last year the intercollegiate suspended and with the interprovincial it was touch and go.

An amalgamation of the Big Four and Ontario Unions would be the only solution to the football situation.

GONE TO WAR

The Ottawa team would be none too well off for material, aside from the big list of players who donned the khaki at the outbreak of war, and the years following many of last year's team have gone. Dorney Adams and Du Stalker have joined the 77th. Don Brophy is with the Flying Corps, and Fred Davis is with the 4th Pioneers.

SOUTH CENTRAL SCHOOL ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

An enthusiastic meeting was held in South Central School last evening for the election of officers for the ensuing year. It resulted as follows:

Hon.-Pres.—Mr. B. F. Ackerman.
President—Mac. Davidson.
Sec.-Treasurer—Mr. A. S. Gilbert.
Captain of Baseball team — Lawrence Medill.
Mascot—Norman Sargison.

WAR BOOM IN NORWAY.

Gain in Millionaires, But Loss in Moral Character.

Idyllic Norway, praised by Bjornson as "Europe's last haven of simplicity and peace," has fallen from its high estate, says the Cincinnati Enquier. Norway is neck deep in a whirlpool of inflation, speculation, luxury and corruption such as Europe has never seen since the South Sea Bubble, or at least since the Vienna Exhibition inflation craze half a century back. War is turning hundreds of millions into beggars, but it is turning Norway's modest two million citizens into millionaires. Fortunes are made without fortunes being lost; El Dorado visions crazy: peasant heads; car drivers dream of palaces; and decent, tedious-middle-class citizens develop the tastes of Lucullus and Sardanapalus. The boom shows no sign of abating. But sour-minded moralists proclaim that a crash is imminent; and those who preferred the old, vanished, idyllic, innocent, hard-up Norway pray that the crash may come.

WAR'S EFFECT ON SUPPLY OF LINEN

Prices Have Greatly Advanced Owing to Shortage of Flax.

The following letter deals with the linen supply of the war:

The principal sources of flax supply for the linen industry are Belgium, Holland and Russia. Belgium supplies the fine Courtrai flax, Holland the medium quality and Russia the course flax — the latter country produces by far the largest proportion of the world's flax supply.

Ireland, which is capable of producing flax of excellent quality, and high tensile strength, has for years been gradually dropping back, till now the Irish crop is almost a negligible quantity in the flax markets of the world.

When war was declared in August, 1914, Belgium was immediately over-run by Germany, and the supported flax, was at once cut off. Owing to German command of the Baltic, the Russian supply was also cut off, and Germany became a strong bidder for available Dutch crop.

Later flax began to dribble in from Russia, at first through Sweden, but pressure by Germany upset this arrangement. Now the linen trade has to depend on what flax can be got through from Archangel, while that port is free from ice during the summer. Obtaining flax by this route is beset by many difficulties, not the least being the long railway journey to that part, coupled with the shortage of rolling stock on the Russian railways.

Ships carrying flax from Archangel have been singularly unfortunate encountering submarines, and quite a number have been sunk.

Materials made from flax are an essential in military equipment, aeroplane cloth, dowlas, hospital equipment, linings for uniforms, and last, but not least, linen thread for tents, boots and uniforms.

The demands of the war office have been enormous, and cotton substitutes have proved the reverse of satisfactory.

Coarse Russian flax is suitable for all these materials, with the exception of aero cloth and linen thread, which require strong fine flax of the highest quality, and for these we are dependent on the Irish crop, and what stocks of Belgian flax were in hand at the outbreak of the war.

Flax has, of course, risen enormously in price, especially in the higher qualities, and all previous records have been left behind.

In the Irish market flax that could have been bought in normal times for 9 to 10 shillings per stone has reached the record price of 28 shillings 6 pence per stone.

In Russian flax, Riga Livonian K, for instance, costing £6 per ton in 1913, now costs £77 per ton.

The cost of bleaching, mill furnishings, coal, freights, in fact everything, has advanced in price enormously, in some cases to as much as 300 per cent.

Under these circumstances, and taking into consideration the demands of the war office, which come first, it is not so surprising that the linen offered to the public is so expensive as that it is so cheap.

CHINESE WARY OF BAKER.

PEKIN, April 7.—Police authorities here have barred poker and will not permit booksellers to deal in playing cards or in books giving instructions how to play the great American game. After investigating gambling conditions, the Pekin police decided that poker is very likely to upset the morals of the Chinese.

The matter was left in the hands of the Chairman of the Committee and the chief of the Department to obtain separate tenders for the uniforms and overcoats.

OVERSEAS CLUB IS ASSURED FOR PETERBORO', SOON

The organization of an Overseas Club affiliated with the parent club in London, Eng., was begun last night at a meeting of members and, others who are interested. Mr. R. J. Soden presided and outlined the project. Capt. Rollins of the Speakers' Patriotic League, endorsed the Overseas Club, and Mr. J. O. Cameron of the Canadian Club, stated that there could be no conflict in the work and object of the two bodies. Both Capt. Rollins and Mr. Cameron became members of the Overseas Club. A committee was nominated to prepare the details of organization and to report at another meeting of Messrs. W. H Dunsford, H. Dearle, R. J. Soden, A. L. Killaly, R. B. Rogers, H. A. Cranfield, J. E. L. Goodwill. The committee has power to add to its numbers. It will also apply to the Overseas Club in London for a charter, select a slate of officers and consider ober details of organization. It is understood that the local club will obtain comfortable quarters here and will largely increase is membership.

THE TRIGGER

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Gun Club was held last evening at the Empress Hotel. There was a fairly good attendance, although the membership is somewhat reduced on account of two of the older members being removed by death during the past year, and others are away serving their country. The secretary's report showed a substantial balance to the credit of the club, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—L. Hall.
Vice-President—S. Coon.
Captain—C. Graham.
Secretary-Treasurer—C. Wood.

Arrangements were made for the shooting during the summer months, as follows: Regular shoots will be held on the first, third and fourth Fridays of each month at 6 p.m., commencing with the first Friday in May. The McGaw Cup and other prizes will be competed for. The club is affiliated with the different clubs of the "Trent Valley Trap-Shooters' Association," and will attend the annual meeting of the association at Cobourg on Friday, April 21st, when arrangements will be made for friendly matches to be held with the several clubs of the association. At the conclusion of the meeting, Mr. C. Graham, the genial captain of the club, very kindly entertained the members to an informal luncheon.

CHARGES WILL BE DROPPED

Attorney General is Not Going to Further Prosecute McCutcheon Bros.

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, April 8.—The Attorney-General of Ontario is not going to further prosecute the McCutcheon Brothers. Mr. J. Russell Snow, K.C., defence counsel, said he had received from the Attorney-General information that the theft charges upon which David, Gordon D., Clarence M. and H. McCutcheon were arraigned March 14th following their acquittal on Friday, March 10, on the charges of conspiracy to defraud, will not be pressed to trial.

There were four counts in the theft charge, including that in August, September and October, 1913, they stole $3,000 from Toronto and English investors.

All the charges against them will now be dropped.

The brothers will likely appear on Monday and when the Crown refuses to prosecute, will be discharged.

The brothers have been out on bail meanwhile of $5,000 each for David and Gordon, and $2,000 each for J. H and Clarence.

Auburn Has Made Thousands of Yards of Khaki Cloth

In regard to the inquiry into the Auburn mills contract the public should understand that the charge investigated was only in connection with the frieze cloth used for making great coats. It was shown that of nearly 300,000 yards of this kind of cloth, only 1,000 yards had been rejected, and this because of a flaw in the shading and not in the material. For the benefit of the public it may be stated that the Auburn has also manufactured probably 600,000 yards of other khaki material, serge trousering and whip cord without the slightest complaint being registered. This material is made entirely of wool.

LATE GEO. W. SISSON

Two years ago Mr. George W. Sisson, one of the best known agricultural men of Manvers, was working in the field on a hot summer's day. Being thirsty he went to the house and secured an ice cold drink of water, the result being that he suffered a severe stroke from the effects of which he never fully recovered. A couple of days ago he suffered another stroke, which culminated in death early Thursday morning.

The deceased was about 68 years of age and the eldest of the Sisson family. BRITISH RE-CAPTURE THE POSITION LOST AT ST. ELOI

GERMAN LOSSES TO DATE TOTAL 2,730,917

Struggle More Furious Now Than Any Waged on the West Bank of the Meuse

Since the German Offensive Against Verdun Began--Losses on Both Sides in Past Thirty-six Hours Have Been Appalling

LONDON, April 10.—With not a moment's lull in the fierce fighting northwest of Verdun the Crown Prince has followed up his minor gains at Bethincourt with heavy drives against the French wings, five miles apart.

The struggle is now becoming more furious than any waged on the west bank of the Meuse, since the German offensive against Verdun began. The losses on both sides in the past thirty-six hours have been appalling. The Germans are attempting to duplicate their Bethincourt gain on a larger scale. Using the famous "nut cracker" tactics that squeezed the French out of Bethincourt the Crown Prince has apparently planned to crush the five-mile French front and force the evacuation of all the strong outer field fortifications of Verdun on the northwest. The battle spread to the whole five miles' line Sunday afternoon, but a lull is believed to be impending. The Germans must pause, it is believed here, while they distribute their infantry and artillery for a violent campaign to squeeze the French out of Dead Man's Hill, Hill 304, and adjoining ridges.

Aliens In Interment Camps To Be Allowed To Work On Farms During the Summer

OTTAWA, April 10.—Aliens in internment camps are to be allowed to work on farms during the summer.

LONDON, April 10.—Considerable heavy fighting has taken place between the Turks and the Russians. All attacks were repulsed by the Russians.

LONDON, April 10.—Suffragette demonstrations occurred yesterday on Trafalgar Square. The meetings were dispersed.

LONDON, April 10.—The British have recaptured the position lost at St. Eloi.

PARIS, April 10.—Terrific fighting continues around Verdun, but the French have gallantly held the ground at all points, except a small portion of the Bethincourt salient.

BERLIN, April 10.—German Government officially denies that any German submarine sank the Sussex with Americans aboard.

LONDON, April 10.—The British steamer Zabra, 3,000 tons, has been sunk.

LONDON, April 10.—German losses to date total 2,730,917. London newspapers figure the same by adding the German official casualty lists. Of these 681,437 were killed.

If houses and farm buildings are not yet erected they should be placed as near the centre of the farm as circumstances will permit.

MOUNT OF OLIVES STRONGLY FORTIFIED BY TURKISH TROOPS

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, April 8. — According to reports received here, 400,000 persons in Jerusalem are now receiving daily rations from the American Relief Fund.

A woman engaged in relief work there writes:

"Everything costs four times as much as before, so you can imagine what a state the people are in. Our poor children look like skeletons. Bread is very dear and the prices are very small. All the fathers have been taken away for soldiers and the mothers are miserable and weak."

An English woman who has arrived here from Palestine by way of Cyprus, states that the Turks fully expect that the Allies will invade the country and are devoting much energy to preparations to repel them. They have constructed numerous military roads. They have fortified the Mount of Olives and believe that they have made it impregnable.

Meanwhile, she says, the economic situation is deplorable. As it is impossible to export the oranges, they have been allowed to rot on the trees.

Public executions are frequent. At Jaffa, Haly Hamis, the chief boatman of a tourist agency and the Kavas (military courier) of the American consulate, well known to all tourists in Palestine, has been hanged on a charge of espionage. Emil Knesevich, a son of the British consular agent at Jaffa, was saved from a similar fate only by the intervention of Dr. Glasebrook, the American consul at Jerusalem. He was accused of having received letters from his father, a refugee in Egypt.

ZEPPELIN RAIDS ON ENGLAND CAUSE JUBILATION IN GERMANY

GENEVA, April 8.—The newspapers of Friedrichshafen and other points near the Zeppelin headquarters express great satisfaction over the recent air raids over England. In their comment, however, the newspapers make no mention of the women and children and other non-combatant victims.

Count Ferdinand Zeppelin at Stuttgart is daily receiving telegrams and letters of congratulations on the success of the air raids.

The newspapers state that the raids will continue throughout the spring with London as their principal objective.

YOU'RE BILIOUS! LET "CASCARETS" LIVEN LIVER AND BOWELS

Don't Stay Headachy, Constipated, Sick With Breath Bad and Stomach Sour

Get a 10-cent box now.

You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, bad taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have a bad cold.

Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil?

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested fermenting food and foul gasses; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular, and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

CAPT. MATTHEWS WAS SHOT BY A GERMAN SNIPER

A Touching Letter Has Been Received by His Widow

How Capt. A. J. Matthews, brother of Mr. T. F. Matthews of this city, met his death, is told in a letter from Major Beattie to the wife of the dead officer:

February 28th, 1916.

Dear Mrs. Matthews,— It was my sad lot to-day to conduct the funeral service of your dear husband. I feel sure you will want to know the last least detail that may bring a crumb of comfort to your sad heart.

Captain Matthews was sitting in a dug out with Major Roger having tea when a minor bombardment began. They both went out to see that the men were "standing to." A sniper evidently saw your husband as he momentarily looked over the parapet. He was shot through the head. Mercifully his sufferings were over in a moment or two as the shot was almost immediately fatal. His body was brought to Locre in Belgium for burial in the church yard. His funeral to-day was with full military honours, with many officers and men present, including two Generals.

After the bugle played "The Last Post," and the band of the Battalion which had played the Dead March in Saul, played "Abide With Me," many tear-dimmed eye testified to a rare esteem and deep sorrow.

We all feel a personal anguish. The loss which we have sustained is nothing compared with yours. Our hearts bleed for you in your sorrow and loneliness.

How proud your husband was of his family and how he loved in his quiet way to tell of the little one he had not yet seen.

He was in my billet on the way back from leave about a week ago, and seemed so happy and well.

What a comfort and joy for you to have known and loved as good and true a man, and I am sure that your knowledge of his goodness will help you bear your loss believing that He who said: "Greater love hath no man than this than a man lay down his life for his friends" will give to him Heaven's Royal Welcome.

Believe me, my dear unknown but sorrowing sister,

Yours with deepest sympathy,

W. Beattie, Major,
Senior Chaplain, Second Division
Canadian Expeditionary Force.

P.S.—It was the 26th that Captain Matthews was killed.

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S.

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Haas, Lanenburg, N. S. "Five years ago three cans of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is as soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

ABOUT 20 DRAW DOUBLE PAY.

Should Canadian Members of Parliament Give Up One?

OTTAWA, April 7.—The Government, it is said to-day, has not yet considered at all the advisability of emulating the British example and giving military members of Parliament the alternative of drawing either military or Parliamentary pay. There are about twenty M.P.'s who figure on both pay lists and who evidence no inclination of relinquishing one of these emoluments.

General Sir Sam Hughes does not draw military pay as such. He gets his salary as Minister of Militia and his sessional indemnity, like other members of the Cabinet, but does not, in addition, pull the allowance of a major-general.

Claims Italian Changed Good Cash For "Stage" Money

MONTREAL, April 10.—Giovanni Canasso, an Italian, who was arrested a few weeks ago by Detective Colangelo on a charge of playing a confidence game on Santo Marto, another Italian, was arraigned before Judge Lanctot and remanded for enquete. The case was postponed twice owing to Canasso's absence and on the day set for the third hearing the complainant did not appear. The case was dismissed owing to a report that Marto had left the city.

Friday the officer located the complainant, a second warrant for the arrest of Canasso was taken out and the alleged confidence man brought to court. It was then stated by Marto that the accused had met him on St. Lawrence boulevard, and told him that a man with all the money he was carrying should keep away from that quarter. The accused suggested, it is said, that they take a walk on Lagauchetiere street west, where there was a church near Beaver Hall Hill. While on St. Lawrence boulevard, Canasso is alleged to have convinced his friend that his roll of $100 was safer with him, as he knew the city and Marto gave up his wad. The men parted near St. George's Church, where Marto received a roll from the accused. When examined it was found to be stage money with a real bill on the outside. Canasso was committed to stand trial at the June term of the Court of King's Bench.

OLD TIME CURES PERSIST.

Much Ancient Faith, for Example, about Mandrake Root.

Superstitions as to the methods of curing diseases once very prevalent, are not altogether extinct yet, says an exchange. Much ancient faith clustered about the mandrake root which was carved in the form of a doll, dressed in fine clothes, and kept in a box or coffin concealed in some corner of the house. Bash mirth it was washed in wine and water and freshly garbed.

Another universal cure was to carry a piece of mistletoe which had been cut from a tree by a golden sickle and caught in a white vessel as it fell.

Metal scraped from a church bell or a piece of the rope was supposed to have a similar protective influence against disease, as also a cloth stained in the blood of a murderer or the rope with which he was hanged.

Plain Horse Sense.

If a merchant or a manufacturer is willing to spend good money for advertising, to ask you to try his store or his product, it stands to reason that he must have something worth offering. Otherwise you would not go back, or you would not again purchase the product, and the first sale would be the last. In that case advertising would NOT pay. It only pays when it brings continuous patronage, and to do that there must be real value given. That is the reason advertised stores or products are almost invariably good. It will pay you to patronize the advertisers.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"Flower of the Gorse"

BY LOUIS TRACY

dot. There was no chance of avoiding him. He had seen them leaving the annex. Before they could join Popple and Jackson beneath the sycamores the fisherman barred the way, cap in hand.

"Pardon, Ma'mselle," he said, speaking with a civility that hardly masked a note of defiance, "have you any news of Madeleine?"

"Nothing definite, nothing reliable," she answered, striving valiantly to convey the impression that the mystery of Madeleine's whereabouts would soon be cleared up satisfactorily.

"Nothink that you would care to tell, Ma'mselle—is that it?"

"No, Peridot. Madeleine said she was going to Quimperle; but I have I know—probably all that anyone in Pont Aven knows."

She had flushed under the fisherman's penetrating, scornful gaze not because of the effort to conceal a scanty budget concerning her wilful friend's flight, but out of sheer sympathy with the man, whom she knew to be consumed with wrath and shame.

"Then I shall be justified in killing any man who calls her a strumpet?" went on Peridot icily. He had used a Breton word which Tollemache did not understand, but Yvonne's gasp of horror was eloquent, and Lorry came to the rescue.

"You must have taken leave of your senses, Peridot, to address Mademoiselle Yvonne in that manner," he said.

The fisherman spat, an unprecedented thing. "Gars!" he growled. "Taken leave of my senses, have I? I'd like to see you if your girl had bolted with the first well dressed dandy who made eyes at her. Scratch a Russian and you find a Tatar, they say. Scratch Monsieur Tollemache and you might find Peridot."

With that he left them, swaggering off among the throng of peasants as though he had not a care in the world. Yvonne's troubled glance followed him. Here was a new Peridot, a man out of whose life was fled the light-hearted gaiety and spirit of good-fellowship that had made him so popular in the village. No sooner, it would seem, was one cloud dispelled than another gathered. Yvonne shuddered with foreboding; for in those gray-green eyes she had seen the lurid light of a volcano.

During some days peace reigned in that small circle of a small community with which this chronicle has dealt so intimately. Mrs. Carmac did not hurry her departure. She promised Yvonne that on arriving in London she would consult Bennett as to her exact position. She neither affirmed nor denied that Walter Carmac had renewed his American citizenship. Ingersoll, when the girl brought a faithful record of the discussion between her mother and herself, drew the only reasonable inference,—that no steps had been taken in that direction. The knowledge was disheartening. Not without cause did he say to Tollemache that he had fathomed his wife's nature to the depths. Were it possible for her to end her days in real communion with her husband and child she had forsaken deliberately, she would gladly have renounced wealth and social position. As it was, she meant to cling fiercely to the bulk of her possessions, thinking that thereby she would have a stronger hold on Yvonne, since she hoped to draw the girl nearer by the lure that money alone could spread so enticingly.

Undoubtedly she had it in mind to provide ample revenues for the Fosdyke family, with guarantees of large interest in the estate of her death, and thus close the only source that threatened discredit and loss. But this was the half-measure that "ca" often spells disaster. Its outcome lay in the lap of the gods, and the gods were frowning on her.

Meanwhile she lingered on in Pont Aven. The equable climate suited her health, she said. She dreaded the formalities with regard to the succession and wanted to leave all such disagreeable details to the lawyers. Until Madeleine Demoret's affair was settled she wished to remain within call of Paris. These were excuses. They deceived none. Yvonne least of any for an instant when the interests of father and mother were at war. Her father could not be at ease until the woman who had broken his life was far from the village, and the daughter was on pins and needles of anxiety that the mother should depart.

Raymond—suddenly reverted to type, became once more the discreet, unobtrusive secretary—reported that Madeleine and Fosdyke seemed to have quarrelled. He had visited the girl, and found her uncommunicative and rebellious. Fosdyke had gone to England. He supplied Madeleine's address, and Yvonne wrote, in friendly and sympathetic strain, asking for news of her welfare. By this time Ingersoll had advised the cessation of any effort to persuade her to return. It was not in human nature to expect the girl to endure the slights that would inevitably attend her reappearance. To her Pont Aven must henceforth be a sealed Paradise. If ever she saw the place again, she would tread its familiar ways a stranger and unregarded.

At last came a letter from Madeleine herself. Its tone was honest, and very much to the point. She had imagined that Rupert Fosdyke meant marriage. When she was disillusioned she spurned him, and had obtained a situation as a nurse, her country speech and Breton costume being passports to ready employment. It was better so. Paris takes a more lenient view of certain aspects of life than Pont Aven.

Singularly enough, during those days no word of love was spoken between Tollemache and Yvonne. The mine was laid, and the smallest spark would fire it; but the spark was not forthcoming, and for the excellent reason that Lorry wished Mrs. Carmac and her millions far away before he asked Yvonne to marry him. If, in some distant time, the girl's mother insisted on enriching her, it would be difficult to defeat her intent. But it was Yvonne he wanted, not Mrs. Carmac's money. He was more attached to Ingersoll than to his own father, a narrow-minded Philistine who had cut himself adrift from a son because the ingrate preferred art to money spinning.

If once he and Yvonne were wed, Mrs. Carmac's ambitious schemes in behalf of her beautiful "niece" would go by the board. Circumstances had made it impossible that father and mother should meet, even at their daughter's wedding—and where could such a marriage take place but in Pont Aven, and who should spread the wedding feast but Mere Piton?

So Lorry lived his time; though Yvonne read him like a book, and the knowledge that her mother's continued residence in the village alone prevented Lorry from taking her in a bearlike grip and telling her that she was the one woman he had ever loved, or ever would love, gave active reinforcement to her anxiety concerning her father, whose well-being, she was convinced, depended on the prompt and complete restoration of life to its normal plane.

Thus, when preparations were being made by Mere Piton for the reveillon, that cheerful feast which enlivens the midnight of Christmas—Yvonne did not hesitate to tell her mother that on that occasion at least they would see little of each other, and perhaps less in the immediate future, as she was going with her father to Concarneau.

Mrs. Carmac took the hint gracefully. As a preliminary she sent Captain Popple and Jackson to England; the one to become a sort of factotum in her Surrey house, the other to join the staff in her Charles Street residence.

"Ask your father, as a last concession to allow you to travel with me as far as St. Malo when I leave on the twenty-sixth," she said. "It will be a long and weary journey otherwise. Have you a friend who can accompany you? You would need to stay one night in St. Malo and return here next day."

Ingersoll did not demur. It was arranged that Barbe should go with Yvonne; so one heart, at least, rejoiced, since the mere prospect of such an outing brought untold joy to a little maid who regarded St. Malo as a place as a geographical expression somewhat akin to Timbuktu and the North Cape of Lapland.

Yvonne left her mother about four o'clock on Christmas Eve. Tollemache was waiting for her, and together they strolled to the cottage. There was much to be done, because Mere Piton expected a large party. Peridot, though specially invited, had refused to come. Indeed, his manner was so gruff that Barbe, who acted as messenger, was moved to tears while relating the reception accorded her.

"Pah!" snorted her mother. "That's a man's way, all over. When a woman gives him the slip he'll sulk and paw the ground like an angry bull for a week or so. Then he'll drown his sorrows in cognac, and at the next Pardon you'll see him squarring up to some pretty girl as if the other one had never existed. What about that sardine boat which the American lady promised him? That should widen his mouth when it reaches the quay."

Mere Piton never alluded to Mrs. Carmac by name. To a Frenchwoman the word presented no difficulty; but, owing to some whim, Yvonne's 'aunt' was "the American lady," and was never promoted to greater intimacy of description in the old woman's speech.

"The vessel is ordered in Concarneau," said Yvonne. "With complete equipment it is to cost five thousand francs. Mrs. Carmac has also given another five thousand francs to the notary to be invested for Peridot; who is well aware of both gifts, but has neither called nor written to express his thanks."

"The worm!" cried Madame. "Peridot, indeed! He ought to be christened Asticot!"

As an asticot is a maggot, it was well that none but Yvonne has overheard Mere Piton's bitin grommont, or the fisherman's new nickname ially appreciable in a fishing community.

The weather that night was peculiarly calm and mild, even for Southern Brittany. Shortly after midnight Ingersoll, who had been watching Yvonne and Tollemache dancing the gavotte, in which the girl was an adept, and her lover a sufficiently skilful partner to the show off her graceful steps to the utmost advantage, suddenly decided to smoke a cigar in the open air.

He quitted the studio by a French window, and strolled into the garden which stretched some little way up the step slope of the hill and through a narrow strip toward the road on one side of the cottage. Owing to the feast, Pont Aven was by no means asleep; but the streets were empty, as the people were either entertaining or being entertained. In a house near the church a girl was singing the 'Adeste fideles' in a high, pure treble. Those in her company, men, women and children, burst into the harmonious chorus, 'Venite, adoremus; venite adoremus in Bethlehem.' As the appeals swelled and then died away, and the girl's voice took up the solo, Ingersoll remembered the verse, "And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God," and his eyes grew dim with unshed tears.

Had No Ambition To Do Her Housework.

System Was All Run Down.

Mrs. Herbert Doherty, Beaver Brook, N.B., writes: "I have used some of your Burdock Blood Bitters, and found it to be a great medicine. My system was in a run down condition for over a year. I suffered with bad headache, and did not seem to have any ambition to do my housework. In the morning I could not half eat, and what I did eat did not apparently seem to do me any good. After using four bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters I was an entirely different woman. I cannot recommend B.B.B. too highly to people suffering the same as I was."

The blood reaches every portion of the body to distribute nutriment, and remove effete matter and waste products, clearly then, any influence, good or bad, affecting the blood, must necessarily affect the entire system for good or evil as the case may be. To this fact is due the wonderful efficacy of Burdock Blood Bitters in removing every form of disease. It at once strikes to the root of the trouble, and quickly restores the depleted system to a condition of vigorous health.

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

NEW STRENGTH FOR LAME BACK.

Latter Tells of Long-looked-for Recognition.

Dear Mr. Editor—I suffered from lame back and a constant tired, worn-out feeling. At times I was unable to stand erect and scarcely able to get around. It would usually come on in the night with cricks in small of my back. I took one box of Dr. Pierre's Anuric Tablets and my back commenced to get better soon after starting to take them. I did not have to walk doubled over as I did before using the "Anuric." It is the best remedy I have ever taken for what it is intended to relieve.

I hope those who are in need of such a remedy will give the "Anuric Tablets" a trial.

(Signed) . A. G. DRAKE. .

NOTE: Up to this time, "Anuric" has not been on sale to the public, but by the persuasion of many patients and the thousand demand for this wonderful healing tablet, Doctor Pierce has finally decided to put it into the drug stores of this country within immediate reach of all sufferers.

Simply ask for Doctor Pierce's Anuric Tablets. There can be no imitation. Every package of "Anuric" is sure to be Doctor Pierce's. You will find the signature on the package just as you do on Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the ever-faithful friend to ailing women, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, proven by years to be the greatest general tonic. Send 10 cents to Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for large trial package.

If any who don't give up hope of being cured of your malady until just a few doses of "Anuric" have proven that it will make you feel like a different person.

Antiquity of Porto Rico.

Ethnologists have reason for thinking that Porto Rico and the adjoining islands may have been peopled from the valley of the Orinoco instead of from Yucatan. When first occupied by man Porto Rico may have been a part of a peninsula connected with South America. Its fauna and flora are of the South American type, and it contains relics of a forgotten race which show evidence of a high grade of culture. Few traces of these aborigines are now to be found except in the interior of the island. Among the curious remains are stone inclosed plazas on which ceremonial dances were performed. The remains of carved idols and pottery show no small degree of skill and taste. No traces of stone buildings resembling those of the Mayas are found, but the houses are of the South American type. The manner of disposing of the dead also resembled that practiced in the valley of the Orinoco.

Motion Pictures as Detectives.

Through a Paris contemporary we learn of a novel method adopted by the Prague police authorities to detect the perpetrators of high crimes and misdemeanors. But whether the project will prove a success remains to be seen. When a person of distinction in the annals of crime is being sought and the police experience difficulty in laying hands upon the suspect, in future they will send to every cinematograph exhibition in Bohemia a photograph of the person "wanted." During the entertainment the picture will be shown with some little explanatory note, and at the conclusion each member of the audience will be free to act as an amateur detective. It seems very likely that this method will be fruitful in actions for damages.—London Globe.

Satellites of Saturn.

Photometric studies of six of the principal satellites of Saturn, made by Guthnick of the royal observatory of Berlin, indicate a confirmation of the previous conclusions of other observers that several, and perhaps all, of these satellites behave like our own moon in keeping always the same side toward the planet around which they revolve. In regard to the satellite named Tethys, an interesting hypothesis is offered to account for its very marked changes of luminosity. The theory is that Tethys possesses the form of a long ellipsoid, the two principal axes of which are to one another in the ratio of five to two. A similar suggestion has been made concerning the shape of the asteroid Eros, which likewise exhibits great variations of light, according to its position in its orbit around the sun.—Harper's.

HAVE ROSY CHEEKS AND FEEL FRESH AS A DAISY—TRY THIS!

Days glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headaches, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside-bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.

SMALLER INDIGO CROP

The final forecast of the Punjab indigo crop has been made and indicates a drop in quantity of 45 per cent. below the average of the last five years. The area under indigo, 20,588 acres, was larger than last year by 200 acres; the unfavorable outturn was due to bad growing weather.

The Gravenstein apple is said to have originated in Denmark and is the favorite apple in that country.

Even if we are fact to face with a world shortage in live stock no profit will be found in rearing scrubs.

The use of green corn for enriching the soil began to come into general practice in England at the end of the 18th century.

Justice the Foundation of God's Throne.

Purpose of Clifton Out this Church in Advance of the World's Blessing —Church's Battle Against Entrenched Sin—Necessity for Recognition of the Principle of Justice—Golden Rule Should Be Basis of Our Dealings—Precious Promises the Inspiration of the Christian — Disciplinary Self-Training Necessary—High Standard Demanded of Those to Be Future Judges of the World.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Picture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

TRENTON, N. J., April 9.—Pastor Russell was here to-day. He gave a very interesting discourse on 1 Timothy 6:12 — "Fight the good fight of faith; lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses." Excerpts follow:

In the discourse of last Sunday we saw that during the present time the merit of Christ's righteousness is imputed to the Church class in order to permit them to become New Creatures in Christ, of a different order from the world. As we then noted, the sins of those who now leave the world to follow Jesus are covered by the imputation of His sacrificial merit, that they may join Him in sacrifice and thus be accounted worthy to reign with Him in the coming time of blessing for the world—the Millennial Age. They are to be a distinctly new creation. This covering of their sins lasts from the time when they become Christians until the end of their journey here below.

During this period each one will have a battle against the downward tendencies of his flesh—a severe conflict; and by the close of his earthly life he will have demonstrated to the Lord to what extent he has been loyal and true in striving against sin; for that which constitutes our battle as children of God, as soldiers of the Cross, is not merely a campaign against error. In times past we have all been under a cloud of error. It is important indeed to have recognized this condition and to have come out into the light of God's Truth. We are not to minimise the value of correct doctrine. But this is not the main thing; it is only a means to an end. The most important thing is to get rid of SIN.

There are errors of mind, of doctrine, of thought, of morals, of character. From childhood all these things had been going on in our life. We did not realize just what they were. As to errors of doctrine, few preached about them. Ministers of the Gospel said nothing about them; in fact, many of the clergy did not recognize these things as errors. But now we see very clearly what the Bible has to say about doctrine. Now we see that God wishes His people to be free from doctrinal errors. But especially does He wish them to be free from any sympathy with sin, unrighteousness, iniquity, injustice.

In other words, God wishes His people to be very loyal to the Golden Rule. This is the first proposition; and to learn this lesson requires sometimes the experience of years. Very many have never practised JUSTICE. They are unjust in their dealings with their families. Husbands deal unjustly with their wives, parents with their children, wives with husbands, and children with parents. With some people injustice would seem to be the rule of life.

But from the time when we become followers of the Lord Jesus Christ, and see how justice is written in the Law of God, we begin to perceive that God expects us to observe the Golden Rule. We should then begin to do so right in our own families—with our parents, our children, our companion in life. This Golden Rule will affect all the affairs of life. It applies everywhere and in everything. "Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you." As we learn to consider carefully, in our dealings with others, to do for them and toward them as we would wish them to do for us and toward us, we shall find a great transformation going on with us. Gradually the whole course of life is changed.

Great Diligence Necessary.

If we could get this Rule thoroughly worked into our hearts and lives, it would prove to be one of the greatest possible blessings, not only to ourselves, but also to others. No part of God's instructions to the Church is more important than this exhortation to justice. Nothing that He ever does is out of line with absolute justice; and He has invited His people to copy His character-likeness. He wishes us to cultivate and develop in ourselves the great qualities which He possesses and which He has illustrated to us.

There are brethren in Christ who from outward appearance are seemingly not so far advanced as they might be in this respect. Measure not yourselves by the world; for the world does not heed the Golden Rule. We are not to measure them as we measure ourselves; we are not to expect as much from them. Neither should we measure ourselves by other Christians. (2 Corinthians 10: 12.) Some who are called Christians are only morally inclined people, who have never been begotten of the Holy Spirit, who have never come into the School of Christ. We appreciate their characters, but we are not to measure ourselves by them. We should measure ourselves only by the Word of the Lord, which asks, "What manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness?" — 2 Peter 3:11.

This pointed question of the Apostle Peter implies that the Church of Christ are a special class, different from all other people in the world—a peculiar people, as the Apostle Paul puts it—not peculiar in dress, but zealous of good works, zealous for everything that is right, laying down their lives for the Truth, in the service of others.—Titus 2:14.

Justice in the Home.

We should endeavor not only to say nothing to our families that would injure them, but rather to study to be a blessing to them. And so with our dealings with all. Every human being calls for justice. As followers of Christ, we are to be foremost in exercising justice toward all. There should be nothing less than this in our intentions. If with our heart we are recognizing the Golden Rule, we shall continually seek to conform our very thoughts to it. We shall seek to think as generously of our neighbor as we would wish him to think of us, and to speak as kindly of him, as we would wish him to speak of us. The principle of doing good to others would be exercised toward all.

Some who seem to be exact in their dealings with the world, who would not keep even one cent back from the person to whom it was due, appear to be very careless in dealing with their loved ones, treating them very unjustly. This should not be. Justice is the foundation of the Throne of God; and in practising the Golden Rule we become more and more like our Heavenly Father. He does to others only what He would wish them to do to Him. As He would not wish others to roast Him or torture Him, so He does not roast or torture them.

Let us ever keep the Golden Rule in mind, and it will furnish us with the very essence of the spirit of justice. First and always, let us treat others as we would wish them to treat us. Afterwards, let us do a little more; but let us strive never to come short on this fundamental principle. We should indeed, as Christians, give more than justice, but NEVER LESS. Love will lead us to do more, even as it led our Lord Jesus. He kept the Golden Rule inviolate in every instance. He never did less than justice; but He did more, much more. He gave His life for others.

And this is what His followers have engaged to do. This is our covenant. We are to follow the Golden Rule, and then do more. We are to lay down our lives for the brethren and to do for the world as we have opportunity. This is the Bible thought for Jesus' disciples. It is one which should appeal to us even from the human standpoint as being the highest ideal of Christian living.

Fighting the Good Fight.

There is no place where we can better learn to rule our own spirit than in our own home. With husband and wife, with parent and child, with brother and sister, the constant practise of the Golden Rule is an important matter. The battle with self is the greatest battle the Christian must fight; for in it he learns to exercise his will in the right direction—in the direction of control of self. It is only after we have conquered self, only after we have become master of our own flesh, only after we have subdued anger, malice, hatred, and strife in our own hearts, that we are enabled, by means of these severe battles with our own weaknesses, to assist others, to aid them—by our example—to overcome their own besetments and infirmities.

No matter where this conflict may begin, we find entrenched within ourselves many armed and opposing powers. These have possession of us by heredity; they are there as the result of Father Adam's fall. If, when we begin the battle, we have passed the days of youth, these imperfections and weaknesses are all the more strongly entrenched; and it requires the greater conflict to rout them. But he that would win the prize of the High Calling must fight the good fight of faith down to the very end of his earthly existence.

This continual battle of the new mind against the fallen flesh is a good fight in the sense that the New Creature is fighting against the weaknesses and besetments of the fallen human nature, against temptations from within and from without, that appeal to us as human beings. It is a fight of faith because the entire course of the New Creature is one of faith; for "we walk by faith, not by sight." In this battle we could never succeed without aid from on High. Hence we must watch and pray. We must put on securely "the whole armor of God."—Ephesians 6: 12-18.

Inspiration of God's Promises.

All of us who have become true followers of Christ have had these thoughts come before our minds. As we progress we learn better what God wishes for us. When first we gave our hearts to the Lord we did not know all that is included in full consecration. Many things were hidden from the eyes of our understanding. But as we have gone on step by step, the Lord has brought us to the clear realization that we must suffer with Christ. Let us, then, progress along this way of sacrifice—sacrificing our lives for the Truth, following in the footsteps of Jesus.

Although we have learned that it is our privilege to sacrifice our lives with Christ, yet the greatest lesson for us to learn is what God is to do for us. He is the One who is doing the really great things. Our hearts are stirred within us by His great and precious promises. We feed upon them and meditate upon them. We are enamored of the things which eye hath not seen nor ear heard.

Thus we grow stronger, taller, as Christians, day by day. With our desire to grow ever increasing, we see the necessity for meeting together with others of like precious faith, in order to build each other up in the most holy faith. We see the Heavenly things more clearly. Other things pass away from our vision. We see the great basic principles of justice and love, and realise their bearing upon our lives in every respect.

Natural Traits Require Attention.

We note that after we have made our consecration and have learned that God has justified us freely from all sin through our Lord Jesus Christ, there is a tendency with some of the Lord's people to violate unintentionally the fundamental principles of justice and love as existent in the Divine character and manifested in the Divine dealings with the people of God. It is not enough that we should have started out to walk in the ways of the Lord, and that we should recognize the downward tendencies of sin. If we have the spirit of the Lord, we shall be anxious to do right. We shall meditate upon God's character; and as we see these basic attributes, we shall endeavor to copy them. Thus the work of grace in our hearts will continue and increase, more and more transforming us into the character-likeness of God's dear Son.

We are not to judge one another in these things, however. "The Lord will judge His people," according to His knowledge of their ability. Mercy will be granted for every unintentional defect; but no mercy will be extended toward those things which we could avoid. Whatever ability we possess we are responsible for; and God will hold us responsible if we do not do our best with what we have. Therefore there is some danger of not attaining to the best which God has to give. Those who are living up to their opportunities and privileges should go on with courage, doing their best, exercising full faith and confidence in the Lord; for He has promised a sufficiency of grace to cover every imperfection. But there is no excuse for anyone to live in careless neglect of his duties and responsibilities. Such are not fighting the good fight of faith.

BACK WAS SO BAD.

The bad back comes from the kidneys, and until the kidneys are carefully watched and properly regulated many serious troubles may follow.

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure all forms of kidney trouble, and cure the kidneys so that they will stay cured.

Mr. J. A. Labiniecki, Dauphin, Man., writes: "It is my pleasure to write you in regard to Doan's Kidney Pills which I have been using for some time for kidney trouble, which used to affect my back so that at times I could not bend down nor could I walk straight. I learned about your pills from your almanac, and I bless the happy hour I thought of buying this medicine. One time a druggist persuaded me to buy ——'s Kidney Pills, saying they were just as good, in fact he guaranteed they were. I yielded to his advice, and what was the result? I had bearing down pains in my back for two days, so I took the balance of the pills unused to the druggist and told him to give me Doan's Kidney Pills as they would stop the pain in twelve hours at the outside. He told me he was sorry I did not use more of the pills, and lengthen the time to await results. I told him there was no need of waiting with Doan's Pills; they go right to the spot. No substitute for me."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is printed on both the table and wrapper.

It is the New Creature who will be held responsible for carelessness respecting the conduct, for indifference to the requirements of the Golden Rule and to the additional exercise of love; and it is he who will fail to receive the commendation, "Well done, good and faithful servant," unless he exercise great care respecting these important matters. God will have none in that special class of overcomers except those who measure fully up to the standard of His requirements. If we are to be the future judges of the world, we must cultivate justice as well as love, so as to be fit to occupy positions of influence and power, in which we shall be able to bless all the families of the earth.

In the New Dispensation.

During the Millennial Age, the Lord Jesus will deal with the world. As He declared, "All that are in the graves shall hear His voice ["the voice of the Son of Man"], and shall come forth." (John 5:25, 28, 29.) Those who thus come forth will be the same imperfect beings that they were when they died. Justice will turn them over to Christ imperfect—just as they went down into death. The lifting up to human perfection of all who are willing and obedient will be the work of the incoming Age. The lower down they were, the more steps will they be required to take in order to climb up to perfection.

The Messianic Reign will be the world's Judgment Day. As the Master said, it will be more tolerable in that Day for those who during this life had less opportunity than it will be for those who had more. (Matthew 11: 20-24.) The latter class will come forth more tainted in mind, weaker in character, less inclined to hearken and obey; whereas those who had not heard the Message of God's Love will be all the more inclined to give heed. The Judgment Day will be a tolerable time for all mankind, but more tolerable for those who have never before heard and have never known.

Confucius, for example, will come forth in the Messianic Kingdom, and will be a towering giant morally amongst the people in that Day. Many who see him will be surprised at what a strong character he will be—a heathen man, who lived without our opportunities, who heard no church bells, who attended no church services. As they behold him, some will say, "If only we had availed ourselves of the privileges and opportunities that we had, we might have attained a place even amongst the glorified saints in Heaven." But when they consider themselves in the light of their past lives, they will conclude that they are in their proper position; and, stimulated by the example of various worthy characters, as well as encouraged by the assistance afforded them at that time, they will strive to progress as rapidly as possible. Gradually they will learn the rules of the Kingdom—the laws of righteousness, based upon justice and love. Those who are willing and obedient will attain unto life everlasting; but the unwilling and disobedient will be cut off in the Second Death.

But during this Gospel Age God is preparing the special class, of special characteristics, for the special service of associating with the Redeemer in the work of human uplift during the next Age. It behooves this class, therefore, to study this subject of justice continually, and daily put into practice the lessons inculcated in the Word of God. Moreover, they must wage a warfare against sin. They must see that in their hearts, at least, they are free from sin; that in their hearts they continually oppose it; and that so far as possible their lives are in harmony with their hearts.

What God expects of us is that we do the best we can—nothing more, but THAT! Let us as His people rejoice in the wonderful provisions of Divine grace, sufficient for our every need, through Christ our Lord. Let us continually fight the good fight of faith—and DO OUR BEST.

THACKERAY'S LIBRARY.

It Was Full of Delightful Surprises for Visitors.

In "Punch Notes" by Sir Francis Burnand, which appeared in The Pall Mall magazine a number of years ago, he gives his impressions of Thackeray. "I remember the occasion so well," he says. "The Punch dinner was, on that particular Wednesday, at Dulwich. It was a full gathering. Thackeray drove down. I arrived alone: and found my way to the hotel, or inn as I think it was. . . But Thackeray—shall I ever forget his personality? How kind, how encouraging! I remember he left early, and as he was quitting the room I stood up, so that as he went towards the door I might have the chance of shaking his hand; but before I could do so he placed it on my shoulder, faced me round to the company, and said, 'Gentlemen, let me introduce "the new boy."' Whereupon Mark (Lemon) and his merry men rapped the table and cried 'hear, hear.'"

"Once I remember, the Punch dinner was held at Thackeray's house, Prince's Gate," the writer continues. "After dinner Thackeray left us for our discussion; and afterwards, the cartoon having been settled, we joined him in his study. Here I stayed on till quite the last, detained by Thackeray, who said he wanted to have a chat with me. I remember the subject of our conversation, or a part of it, very well. It was about the Rev. Dr. Rock—who was a friend of his—and of something he had told him as concerning an incident in the life of some saint. Thackeray easily contrived to make me thoroughly interested in the matter, and disputed the correctness of my memory as to some event mentioned in Alban Butler's 'Hagiology.' 'However,' said Thackeray, 'we'll soon see who is right. Just get down for me that book up there on the third shelf from the top. You'll have to mount the steps.' Obediently I ascended the library ladder, and endeavored to pull the book in question out of its place. It stuck; it would not come out. 'Try again,' said Thackeray, who was standing on the hearth-rug watching my proceedings with considerable interest. I did try again; and again; and was about to make a third and violent effort, when Thackeray roared with laughter. 'They're all dummies!' he cried. I felt considerably 'sold.' 'But,' he added pleasantly, 'I do not think the book is in this room. If you will go into the room you've just left—out of here—you'll find it, I fancy, on the side table.'

"'Certainly,' I said, eager to show my readiness, and to put myself on the best possible terms with the great man. So I turned to go to the door in the direction he had indicated. No door; all books. Then on looking round, it seemed to me that there was no door; books everywhere. Yet we must have entered by some door out of the dining room; and here we were! and others had gone out by another door; but where? Were we in a room without doors?

"'I'll show you,' he said; and then, intensely enjoying my puzzlement, he put his hands in among the books in the case—all dummies, every one—and turning a handle, opened the door leading in the dining room."

Macaulay's Style.

"Publicity is the most pleasing thing in life," says Mr. A. S. Neill in "A Dominie's Log" (Herbert Jenkins), "and that's why patent medicines retain their popularity. At present the village cobbler is figuring in the local paper as a 'Cured by Bunkum's Billows' Backache Bunion Beans" example, and beneath his photograph (taken at the age of nineteen; he is fifty-four now) is a glowing testimonial which begins with these words: 'For over a decade I have suffered from an excess of Uric Acid, from Neurotic Dyspepsia, and from Optical Derangements. Until I discovered that marvellous panacea ——'

"I marvel at his improved literary style. It is only a month since he wrote me as follows: 'Sir, I will be obliged if you will let peter away at three o'clock tonight hoping that you well as this leaves me I am your obidt servant peter Macanuish.'"

Ye Gentlemen of England.

This old English song, written by Martin Parker, was a great favorite with British tars years ago.

Ye gentlemen of England
That live at home at ease,
Ah! little do ye think upon
The dangers of the seas.
Give ear unto the mariners,
And they will plainly show
All the cares and all the fears
When the stormy winds do blow.

If enemies oppose us,
When England is at war
With any foreign nation,
We fear not wound or scar;
Our roaring guns shall teach 'em
Our valor well to know,
Whilst they reel on the keel,
And the stormy winds do blow,
And the stormy winds do blow,

Then courage, all brave mariners,
And never be dismayed;
While we have bold adventurers,
We ne'er shall want a trade;
Our merchants will employ us
To fetch them wealth, we know;
Then be bold—work for gold,
When the stormy winds do blow.

Mare's Fate in Question.

The question whether a mare on which a Belgian circus proprietor escaped from the Germans should be destroyed came before the Recorder at Reading recently. When the Germans blew up the circus, near Namur, and killed or captured more than sixty of the horses, the owner escaped on his favorite mare. He came to England and gave performances at Reading, where he was convicted of cruelty to this mare, and fined 10s, an order being made for the animal to be destroyed. He appealed against that conviction. Expert witnesses were called on each side, and eventually the Recorder upheld the magistrate's decision with regard to cruelty, but adjourned the question whether the mare should be destroyed to the next quarter sessions. Meanwhile sympathizers will look after the animal.

Big Estates for Sale.

During the last year and a half under the pressure of heavy land taxation, numerous British estates have been offered for sale. Lord Crewe has disposed of his estates at Tetton Elton and Elsworth, near Sandbach, Cheshire, comprising about 1,340 acres, dividing them into more than a hundred lots, including dairy farms. These were sold at auction, a 130-acre farm fetching $36,000, a 100-acre farm $15,000, a 57-acre farm $12,500. Lord Crewe still owns 25,000 acres, including mineral lands in Yorkshire and Staffordshire.

Revised Opinions.

Like John Burns, another Labor leader who has had occasion to eat his own words of deprecation of large incomes, is the Hon. Andrew Fisher, who is now coming to London as the new Australian High Commissioner. The post is worth $15,000 in salary, with as much again or more in allowances. Yet when a Chief Justice of Queensland was appointed at $17,500, Fisher publicly declared: "When we consider that $17,500 is more than the average man earns from the time he begins work until the undertaker takes charge of him, it seems too big a sum to pay every year to any man." Andrew began life as a miner in Scotland.

Villiers a Tramp.

Mr. Frederick Villiers, the war correspondent, who has returned to England to lecture after fifteen months at the front, followed the retreating Germans from the Marne to the Aisne disguised as a tramp. He has twenty campaigns to his credit.

Not To Be Cheated.

"They tell me Tinkleton is at work on a big canvas which he calls 'The Retreat of the Ten Thousand'."

"What does he expect to do with it?"

"Sell it to old Boodelipper."

"Any chance of that?"

"No. Tinkleton has only 983 figures in the painting, and Boodelipper will insist upon the full 10,000."

EARLY DAWN IN IRELAND.

Kate Douglas Wiggin Describes a Beautiful Scene.

In her "Penelope's Experiences in Ireland," Kate Douglas Wiggin writes a delightful description of early dawn on the Emerald Isle."

"And such a dawn!" she says. "Such softness of air, such dew-drenched verdure. It is backward spring, they say, but to me the woods are even lovelier than in their summer wealth of foliage, when one can hardly distinguish the beauty of the single tree from that of its neighbors, since the colors are blended in one universal green. Now we see the feathery tassels of the beech burst-ing out of their brown husks, the rus-set hues of the young oak leaves, and the countless emerald gleams that break from the ruby-budded limes. The greenest trees are the larch, the horse-chestnut, and the sycamore, three naturalized citizens who appar-ently still keep to their native fash-ions, and put out their foliage as they used to do in their own homes. The young alders and the hawthorn hedges are greening, but it will be a fortnight before we can realize the beauty of that white bloom, with its bitter-sweet frag-rance. The cuckoo-flower came this year before instead of after the bird, they tell us, showing that Nature is capable of taking liberties with her own laws. There is a frag-rance of freshly turned earth in the air, and the rooks are streaming out from the elms by the little church and resting for a bit in a group of plume-like trees. The last few days of warmth have inspired the birds, and as Francesca and I sit at our windows breathing in the sweetness and freshness of the morning, there is a concert of thrushes and black-birds in the shrubberies. The little birds fear ish the chorus or the un-dertone of song, the hedge-sparrows, redbreasts, and chaffinches, but the mistersingers 'sail the runs' and lead the feathered orchestra with clear and certain notes. It is a gold-en time for the minstrels, for nest-building is finished, and the feeding of the younglings a good time yet in the future. We can see one little brown lady hovering warm eggs under her breast, her bright eyes peeping through a screen of leaves as she glances up at her singing lord, pouring out his thanks for the morn-ing sun. There is only a hint of green, it might almost be the whis-per of unfurling fern fronds, but soft as it is, it stirs the branches here and there, and I know that it is rock-ing hundreds of tiny cradles in the forest."

Had a Hard Time.

A native of Thurles, Co. Tipperary, but a resident for the past twelve years in Penang, Straits Settlements, has had an extraordinary experience in his effort to join the British army. He left the Straits Settlements in September last, and traveled to Lon-don in his own steamer, for the pur-pose of enlisting. He arrived in Lon-don in October, and applied to be en-rolled a member of Lovat's Scouts, but was rejected as medically unfit. Leaving London, he journeyed to Dublin, where he applied for a place in the Army Service Corps. He was passed by the doctor, and received a first-class driver's certificate, and was passed to the remount depart-ment at Ballsbridge, being ordered subsequently to proceed to Bradford Moor Barracks, Yorkshire. There he also passed the doctor, but was re-jected as driver. Returning to Lon-don he applied to be appointed a member of the Army Veterinary Corps, but was rejected as medically unfit. His application to the Red Cross Society was also rejected on medical grounds. He then booked a passage back to the Straits Settle-ments, and the Japanese mail steam-er in which he sailed called at Mar-seilles, where a telegram was receiv-ed ordering her to complete the voy-age via Cape Town, South Africa. At Marseilles he decided to return to London with the object of making another effort to have his services ac-cepted. Failing in his object in Lon-don he crossed the Channel and went to Dublin, where at last he was ac-cepted as a member of the Royal Munster Fusiliers, and the other day he left Dublin to join his regiment at Tralee Barracks.

Famous Donkey Dead.

Jacob Be Faithful, the famous old donkey of Carisbrooke Castle, Isle of Wight, whose performance of draw-ing water by the big wheel of the deep well has been watched by thou-sands of visitors to the castle during the past twenty-four years, has died at the age of twenty-six years. Jacob frequently went through his perform-ance in the presence of Royalty. Thousands of copies of his photo-graph were circulated, and he was mentioned in the guide-books.

The Bayonet.

How does the soldier of to-day pro-nounce the word "bayonet"? Ap-parently much as his officer does. But when "Tommy Atkins" was "Jack Frederick" he called his arme blanche a "bagonet." That was his own word, as "royally" was, and is, his version of reveille. According to undisproved tradition, the bayonet was first improvised at a mountain fight in Bayonne, when the Basques, short of ammunition, tied sickles to their muskets in a rush upon the Spanish enemy. The French took up the word, and the other nations after them.

Heart's Action Was Weak And Circulation Poor

He Was Always Tired and Nervous and Had Pains in Feet and Legs —Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Cured

The heart is a wonderful worker, plodding away year in and year out, forever pumping the blood through the body. So long as the blood is rich and nourishing it renews its own waste and keeps up a vigorous circu-lation of the blood through the arter-ies and veins of the human system.

But when the blood gets thin the nerves are starved, motive power is lacking, the heart's action weakens and the circulation is slow. The hands and feet feel cold, there are cramps and pains in the legs and through the body, digestion fails, you become nervous and irritable and do not rest or sleep well.

This letter will give you some idea how admirably Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is suited to overcome derange-ments of this nature. It is, above all, a creator of new, rich blood, and with the blood in good condition the nerves are soon restored and bodily organs resume their natural func-tions.

Mrs. E. A. Hutchings, "Prairie View," Elva, Man., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food my husband had tried almost every rem-edy recommended as a tonic. He suf-fering with cold feet, poor circula-tion of the blood, and was always tired. He had pains in his feet and legs, and could get no rest or sleep at night. After the first box of the Nerve Food we could see an im-provement, and now after using it for six months, he is an entirely dif-ferent man. He eats and sleeps well and has no pains in his feet and legs. It has built up his health wonderful-ly, and we can recommend it as a splendid nerve tonic."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S APRON.

Mabel Worthington.

7675

The average woman's life is one of great activity in the home, and she wears an apron many hours in the day without giv-ing much thought to the service it really does. To-day this utility garment has the same thought and care given to its de-signing as the house dress. Made on lines that almost envelop the figure excepting the arms, there is no need for that "be careful" feeling back of the wearer. A splendid example of one of the new styles is shown in illustration.

No. 7,675—The waist section is gathered at lower part of front, which has been made full enough to prevent without "drawing." The low neck is finished with banding and the sides are similarly treated in front and back. Fastening is made at the back with buttons. A belt of the banding conceals the joining of the waist to the three gored skirt. This is fitted with a pocket at either side, which has the same finishing touch with band-ing as we note in the bib waist, and a deep hem completes this roomy skirt, of course becoming cover-all.

The pattern is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inch bust measure. To make in size 36 requires 3⅝ yards 36 inch material and 4⅝ yards of banding.

You may obtain the pattern by sending 10 cents to the office of this publication

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Cocoa From New Colony.

In connection with the arrival in Britain of the first cargo of cocoa from the conquered colony of the Cameroons, a statement that the Ger-man Cameroons was the first colony in West Africa to produce cultivated cocoa, has received considerable pub-licity. The statement is, as a matter of fact, incorrect. Germany did not acquire the Cameroons till 1884, and five years previous to that date the cultivation of cocoa had begun in the British colony of the Gold Coast.

The cocoa industry of the Gold Coast was founded in 1879, by a na-tive of Acera who brought some cocoa plants and pods from the Span-ish African island, Fernando Po, made a small plantation, and four years later sold the cocoa pods in the neighboring villages. The first ship-ment of Gold Coast cocoa, consisting of 80 lbs., was made in 1891, to the United Kingdom. From the first Gold Coast Government gave practi-cal encouragement to the develop-ment of the industry, and as early as 1894 the curator of the first botani-cal station in the colony was giving instruction to the native planters in the proper method of curing.

In 1905 the advice of the Imperial Institute with regard to the prepara-tion and marketing of Gold Coast cocoa was obtained, and the scienti-fic knowledge thus brought to bear, combined with the strong interest of the Gold Coast Government in the in-dustry led immediately to an enorm-ous and continuous increase in the cultivation and export which has had no parallel elsewhere. Last year (1915), indeed, the export of cocoa from the Gold Coast reached a total value of £3,651,341, an increase in value of £1,457,592, over the figures for the previous year.

The Gold Coast is now the most important cocoa producing country in the world.

Geography and Time as Allies.

Regarding Great Britain's share in the war the Austrian Socialist organ, the Arbeiter Zeitung, says that British conscription, even if it does no more than secure the filling up of gaps caused by losses, is yet of the highest significance for the con-tinuance of the war. It must be re-cognized that Great Britain is carry-ing on the war as a land power in a degree never before seen in any co-alition wars in her history.

The insurmountable barrier of the seas surrounding the country saves her from spending strength in de-fending her own land. There is no threatening foe to compel her to rush forces to the frontier.

The British have time on their side. The sea, to which they owe so much, permits them to make good without any serious disadvantage the negligence in war preparations in the war itself. It even increases their power.

For wherever the strength of the enemy appears to be growing weak, there emerges at first a promise and then, in part at least, as a reality, some of the hundreds of thousands of Kitchener's recruits to renew the enthusiasm of the war in the veins of the Entente.

And so it is Great Britain which spins the threads, the endless threads of black misfortune which envelops the whole earth like a shroud, and it is due more to her favorable geographical situation than to her determined persistency that Great Britain is able to postpone the decision on the Continent.

Caught Them That Time!

The latest story from Sandhurst Military College is given in The Lon-don Evening News:

Overnight the cadets conspired. When next morning the sergeant gave the order "Number off from the right!" the voices rang out, "One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, Knave, Queen, King."

Quick as lightning the sergeant continued with: "All court cards fall out and report to the major."

WOMEN AT WORK.

The Story of Their War Labors in England is Simply Amazing.

"The story of what women have done in this war through the Red Cross is simply amazing, said Mrs. Lloyd George, wife of the English Minister of Munitions, recently. Thir-teen hundred trained nurses are working to-day in England and on the continent in connection with the British Red Cross. In addition, 1,500 women to serve under trained nurses. They are posted at hospitals both in England and in France.

"All have obtained certificates in first aid and home nursing, while many have certificates also in hy-giene, sanitation and cookery.

"Many women are giving their services at the rest stations, which have been established at various rail-way stations. They meet the men as they come back from the trenches and supply them with food and com-forts and clothing and generally refit them for the next move forward.

"Originally, the idea was that wo-men not fully trained should act as temporary nurses to look after the wounded in improvised hospitals.

"It was thought that they would fill the gap left by the War Office, since the War Office machinery made no arrangements for rest stations or sorting hospitals for dealing with wounded or sick coming back from the dressing stations. A detachment consists of a commandant, a quarter-master, and a superintendent nurse with 20 nurses. The organization was put to a severe test when, at the fall of Antwerp, in October, the wounded Belgians had to evacuate hospitals in Belgium and be accom-modated in England. Since then the War Office has thrown more and more work upon their shoulders, and the women have responded in a very remarkable fashion. The greater part of the work of the hospital is cooking, washing, or scrubbing. It is carried out by these women with wonderful self-abnegation. There are in England over 100 British Red Cross auxiliary home hospitals, and you can easily see how great a drain upon the women of this country the work of these hospitals must have entailed.

"The Women's Emergency Corps was started only two days after the declaration of war. This work orig-inated with the women's suffrage so-cieties and naturally it has swept into its ranks large numbers of women of independent means. I believe even in the first fortnight it received and classified 10,000 candidates, doctors, nurses, interpreters, motorists, and the untrained who desired training and were willing to do anything that was offered to them.

"Thousands of these women have been placed in situations in connec-tion with trams, buses, and railways, thousands more are taken up by the big commercial undertakings, and a very large number are engaged in munition works. The Munition Workers' Auxiliary Committee also fulfills a useful function in relieving the ordinary women workers at ar-senals and munition factories.

"English women have assisted in Holland with the Belgian refugees, and they have also done a very great deal for the Belgians in England. They met them at the stations and saw them safely to their various des-tinations, supplying them with clothes and food. There is a hospi-tality department which looks after both refugees and stranded English women. At one time they had a sec-tion of women engaged in toy-mak-ing. These are now nearly all on munition work. Some 20,000 ap-plied for this kind of work, but I am not able to give figures as to how many of them were actually engaged. Many thousands applied for agricul-tural employment, and where the farmers are sufficiently enlightened they have been taken."

Sir Charles Monro.

General Sir Charles Monro's rapid promotion has excited the comment that nearly all our commanders who have forged their way to the front in the present war are Scotsmen. Cor-nett, who recognizes the Scotsman habit of getting to the top, refused to believe that it was due to hard work. In Hertfordshire he observed that the mowers were all English and the haymakers all Irish Scotsmen—"who had backs as straight and shoulders as square as the heroes of Waterloo"—were to be found in gentlemen's parlors, "picking dead leaves off exotics, peeping into melon-frames, publishing the banns of mar-riage between the male and the fe-male blossoms. . . . And who can blame them? . . . All the break-back and sweat-extracting work they leave to those who have less prudence than they have."

JOYS OF A RUSSIAN HOTEL.

Nice Lofty Rooms With Sealed Win-dows and Smoke Laden Air.

Writing of the great Russian city of Odessa in Harper's, Sydney Adamson tells of the somewhat primitive ar-rangements of even the modern hotels. "For our ignorance of Russian we had the privilege of paying over twice the legal fare for our drive to the hotel. The porters obligingly arranged the matter and quite cheerfully kept the difference. How like the rest of the world! We felt at home at once. The large, lofty bedchambers and corridors of the hotels make it just possible to live in rooms that have double win-dows sealed with putty, which are never opened from the beginning of the winter till the spring thaw is in the air.

"As there are no open fires the only ventilation is from the slightly better air of the corridors. A framed notice on the wall informs the visitor of all the privileges he is graciously permitted to pay extra for, among them the joy of being clean at the rate of 10 kopecks for a jug of hot water or 30 kopecks for a bath. But the greatest mystery of all was a samovar at 25 kopecks. In time it was discovered that your true Russian, having a taste for much tea or other warm refreshment, rings for a lighted samovar and prepares his own beverage if he is not fortunate enough to possess a wife to do it for him.

"With the lady managing a fiery, fuming samovar and her lord smoking innumerable cigarettes, with perhaps a visitor to help, one can easily imagine —not forgetting the hermetically sealed windows—the atmosphere in which some worthy Russians go to bed."

River Bed Patterns.

Ideas for the colors in the best Scotch tweeds are found in the bed of the river Garry, in the Pass of Killiecrankie, said Thomas Welsh in a paper read before the textile congress at Hawick, Scotland, recently. Granite, porphyry and jasper are found there in rich reds, grays and greens, beautifully mottled and mixed in finely contrasted colors. "Heather mixtures," he said, "were asked for by sportsmen, who in-quired for colors which resembled their shooting grounds. The first order of tweeds sent to London in bulk was six pieces of black and white check made in Peebles."—Argonaut.

Curious Result of a Tax.

A curious thing happened when the English auctioneers were taxed. At first £5 a year, the duty was raised to £10 by Peel, but he relieved them of the necessity of taking out a license for beer, spirits, etc., when they sold these articles at auction. The conse-quence was that everywhere the auc-tioneers carried on the sale of beer and spirits for themselves until the abuse was stopped in 1864.

YOU don't get better beer because you pay twice as much for imported lager as for O'Keefe's.

The difference is the duty.

O'Keefe's Pilsener Lager is brewed right here in Canada —and there's no duty to pay on it. Insist on having

GERMANS ATTACK ON A WIDE FRONT

ASSAULTS ARE NEARLY ALL REPULSED

GERMANS ATTACKING ON A FRONT OF NEARLY FIFTEEN MILES AT VERDUN

All Attacks Were Repulsed Except on a 500 Yard Front Near Hill No. 295---French Make Progress in German Communicating Trenches, South of Douaumont---Heavy Bombardments at Other Points.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PARIS, April 10.—(French Official).—In the fighting west of the Mouse River for the possession of Dead Man's Hill, the Germans were repulsed, except on a front of 500 yards near Hill c. 295. East of the river the German assaults gained no appreciable results. There were violent attacks both east and west of the Mouse River, over a front of nearly fifteen miles from Hill 304 to Fort Douaumont.

On the east bank of the Meuse, a violent struggle occurred east of Vacherauville. South of Douaumont, the French made some progress in the German communicating trenches in this region. In the Woevre region and around the villages of the Meuse hills, heavy bombardments occurred last night.

It has been confirmed that the day of April 9th, in the region of Verdun, was marked by the first general offensive movement in which forces of the enemy attacked over a front of more than twenty kilometres (12 miles). Our adversaries, who have not achieved any results commensurate to their efforts, have suffered losses, the extent of which are evidenced by the bodies piled up in front of our lines. There has been no occurrence of importance on the remainder of the front.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—German Ambassador Von Bernstorff requested and was granted a conference with Secretary Lansing for this afternoon, presumably to discuss the Sussex case.

GUARANTEE INTEGRITY OF BELGIAN CONGO

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 10.—Great Britain, France, and Russia have agreed to guarantee to Belgium the integrity of the Belgian Congo, similarly to the guarantee for the integrity of Belgium itself.

714 PRISONERS IS THE REPORT FROM BERLIN

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, April 10.—Silesian troops cut off and captured 714 French prisoners and fifteen machine guns in the French retreat from Bethincourt, the War Office stated to-day.

ANOTHER HARVEST FOR PIRATE CRAFT

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, April 10.—Three more British steamers have been announced sunk within the last twenty-four hours, the Silksworth Hall, Glen Almond and Yonne. It was stated that the Yonne was unarmed, and that she was torpedoed without warning. The crews of all the vessels reported sunk have been saved. The Silksworth Hall was a 4,777-ton steamer. Lloyd's registry does not list the Yonne and Glen Almond.

The steamer Eastern City, 4,341 tons, has also been sunk, Lloyd's reported. She was unarmed.

GREATEST BATTLE IN WORLD'S HISTORY

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, April 10.—The greatest battle in the history of the world entered its fiftieth day to-day, with the Crown Prince driving home mighty blows and the fighting becoming more furious than since the early days of the campaign against Verdun. On an arch like front the Germans are throwing more than 150,000 men into action, pounding simultaneously against the north-western and north-eastern gates to the French fortress. It is estimated that the losses on both sides have totalled all above 200,000, far more than were engaged on both sides in the battle of Waterloo.

CANADIAN TROOPS REPULSED SAYS FOE

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, April 10.—(Official).—The attempts of Canadian troops to recapture the crater positions near St. Eloi were repulsed.

LONDON, April 10.—The Norwegian steamer Sjolyst was torpedoed and sunk without warning by a German submarine off the French island of Ushant. The crew was landed at Cardiff to-day.

UNITED STATES STILL WORRYING OVER SUB. PROBLEM

Decisive Action in Sussex Case Has Been Held Through Delay in the Arrival of the St. Paul

A CONFERENCE TO-DAY

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, April 10. —While decisive action by the United States in the Sussex case has been held up through the unexpected delay in the arrival of the Liner St. Paul bringing the desired affidavits, there were two important developments to-day that will aid materially in shaping this government's attitude. The first was an afternoon conference between Secretary Lansing and German Ambassador Von Bernstorff, requested by the latter. The second was a cable from Ambassador Gerard at Berlin saying he expected to send to state department late to-day the reply of the Foreign Office to his formal inquiries as to whether a German submarine attacked the Sussex.

Navigation Opening Later Than Last Year

Last Srring navigation opened on April 6th when the first boat reached the Street Railway wharf. If Rice Lake clears of ice by Saturday next one or more of the lake boats should make the trip to the city. From the locks south west the river is entirely free of ice as far as one can see, and it is expected that the whole system will soon be open. The ice was thicker during the past winter than a year ago, according to some men who investigated it, and that doubtless accounts for the later breaking up of the river and lake.

AT EMPIRE THEATRE FOR THREE DAYS

John Barrymore as the Incorrigible Dukane—It is a Good Picture —See It

"The Incorrigible Dukane," a unique combination of drama, comedy and romance, by George C. Shedd, provides John Barrymore, the popular stage and film favourite, with one of the most unusual characterizations he has yet impersonated on the screen.

The comedy of the subject is derived from a series of ludicrous misfortunes of which the young and incorrigible Dukane is the constant victim; the drama emanates from the thrilling manner in which the young ne'er-do-well redeems himself, and saves the fortune and honour of his father ;and the romance develops—in the usual manner of youth. These varying elements of photoplay composition effectively prove the versatility of John Barrymore, inimitable in his comedy scenes, impressive in the dramatic situations in which he finds himself, and truly lovable as a lover.

Continuous performances afternoon and evening. The Empire is the home of high class photo plays and we will not depart from it.

Mr. V. Patterson, of the staff of the Bank of Montreal, is leaving to-day to join the Army Service Corps at Hamilton.

The announcement from the Canadian eye-witness that the bombers of the 21st Battalion were engaged in the fighting at St. Eloi a week ago is of great interest to Peterborough people, as a number of Peterborough boys are among the bomb-throwers of the battalion, among them Pte. W H. Saxby, brother of Lance-Corp. Norman Saxby of the 93rd Battalion. Pte. F. Leal whose brother, Douglas, was killed at St. Julien a year ago, and Pte. Ed. Shrimpton. Since the action recorded by the eye-witness the Germans claim to have captured the mine crater in question, stating that it was "taken after tenacious fighting" and was held by Canadian troops. Yesterday's British statement says that the trenches at St. Eloi have been very heavily bombarded, so that if the 21st has not been relieved during the past week, the Eastern Ontario unit, which includes about 100 Peterborough boys, has seen some fighting in the last few days. The 21st is commanded by Lt.-Col. Hughes of Kingston, and there are no Peterboroughg officers with the battalion.

WILL SIR SAM BRING PEACE OR WAR IS PROBLEM?

Minister of Militia Now in Mid-ocean and Will Be Met in New York by Certain of His Colleagues

TO SPEAK IN HOUSE

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, April 10.—The week end parliament opens with all eyes turned towards the mid-Atlantic where a vessel bringing General Sir Sam Hughes and his party from England, is boring its way toward New York.

Will his coming bring peace or war is the question the government is asking itself to-day, and nobody has the answer at present.

Gen. Hughes will undoubtedly be met by certain of his colleagues when he arrives at New York. Gen. Hughes is expected here Thursday or Friday. It is not expected that he will waste much time before appearing in the Commons, though it is probable that he will hold a lengthy conference with the Prime Minister before he does so.

A Conservative caucus will be held on Tuesday, when there will be a heart to heart talk over the whole situation. The caucus will doubtless discuss the Hughes situation, as well as the proposed C.N.R. legislation.

Death of W J. Stubbs On Sunday Morning Widely Regretted

In the death of Mr. William J. Stubbs at his father's residence, 651 Water street, on Sunday morning, Peterborough lost a splendid character, and a comparatively young man, who enjoyed the confidence and esteem of a host of friends. During the past seven years he had not been in good health, but maintained his bright and cheerful disposition to the very end. Two weeks ago he took suddenly ill, growing radually weaker until Sunday morning when he passed peacefully away.

The late Mr. Stubbs was born at Bridgenorth forty-one years ago. When eight years of age he moved with his parents into Peterborough, and was educated in the local schools and Collegiate Institute. Later he taught school at Moorefield, and after a few years joined the Bell Telephone Company, with which company he was engaged at London, Brantford and Toronto. In the latter office he was chief clerk to Mr. A. T. Smith, the Divisional Superintendent. Sixteen years ago he was married to Miss Lily Edgar who, with their only child, Edgar, survives an affectionate husband and father. He is also mourned by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Stubbs. The deceased was a faithful member of the George street Methodist church and Sunday school and for a number of years had assisted in the orchestra, also as assistant superintendent, under Mr. S. A. Armstrong. While in Toronto he was assistant superintendent in the Clinton street Methodist church.

Mr. Stubbs had achieved a distinct success in his service to the Bell Telephone Co., in which his illness undoubtedly cut off a promising career. He had equally rich talents in music and literature, and those who knew him best realised the brave struggle he made to regain his former strength. For several years he was a regular contributor to the Examiner under the nomes de plume of "Paul Penman" and Monty La Roque," etc. As the latter he was the Stony Lake correspondent to the Examiner. He will be as greatly missed around the Lakes as in this city, and it was with a deep feeling of regret and personal loss that the news of his death was received. For three or four weeks previous to his latter illness he was on the Examiner staff, to whom he was in many respects a close friend and exemplar.

The funeral will be held on Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from his late residence, 651 Water street to the Little Lake cemetery. The funeral service at two o'clock will be conducted by Rev. R G Peever and Rev J. P. Wilson

French Evacuate the Village Form a Straight Line Whil Resisting All Attacks Made the Enemy.

FOE LOST HEAVILY

PARIS, April 9. — The villag Bethincourt forming the apex of salient on the western bank of Meuse, against which the Germ have been pounding for days heavy artillery and with frequent fantry attacks, was evacuated by French last night, and to-day the line withstood the most furious saults which have been made by Crown Prince's army in many d

As now established, the French in this sector runs from the Avo redoubt along the wooded slopes the west of Hill 304, follows Forges creek to the north-east Haucourt, and joins the position ready held to the south of the ing of the Bethincourt-Eanes Bethincourt-Chattancourt roads.

The evacuation of Bethincourt, itself only a small, ruined village, had the effect of flattening the p of the salient, although the stu ful holding by the French of the on the Forges creek to the we Bethincourt and the line just sou the village, leaves a still more nounced salient projecting into German lines, with the two very portant hills, 304, east of Haucourt and Le Mort Homme (Dead M south-east of Bethincourt, within

Were Ready for the Onslaught

From the incomplete informa now available it seems probable the violent German attacks on western side of the river to-day s simultaneously with the two extr ly heavy assaults on the eastern h thus practically covering the wi Verdun front, was undertaken by Germans as soon as they learned the withdrawal from Bethincourt the hope of finding the new Fr line in this sector not yet st enough to resist them. The evac tion of Bethincourt has been reg ed by military experts for some d as a military necessity, since it evident that the group of ruins re senting the village was so situate to make it practically untenable der the protracted fire of the Ger heavy artillery. The German c manders, anticipating the withdra appear to have timed their att which might almost be called a eral assault on the Verdun front coincide with the evacuation. But evacuation had been safely compl in the night, and the troops w waiting in the new trenches at rear when the attack finally was m this morning.

To-day's attack was con against two sectors on the west bank of the river, one extending f the Bois Avocourt to the Fo stream, and the other from Le M Homme to Cumieres.

Details of the fighting have not been received, but the official nouncement indicates that it wa almost violent character.

NOBLE SELF-SACRIFIVE.

Upon this page will be found accounts of two heroic acts of self-sacrifice, in which was illustrated the beautiful Scripture — "greater love than this hath no man that he lay down his life for his friend." The appeal of this heroism comes to us with greater force at the near approach of the anniversary of the Great Sacrifice, in which was set us an example of sacrifice and just living and doing that we seldom see followed or adequately lived up to. Not only are such deeds a reminder of individual sacrifice for friends and comrades, but, it recalls the daily sacrifice that is taking place in the battlefields, where Canadian soldiers are laying down their lives for us, who at home are making—some of us—sacrifices of things less dear than life for the sake of those who are sacrificing health, limb and life for our individual and national well-being.

AGAINST PARTIZANSHIP.

The Lethbridge Board of Trade in memorializing the Dominion and Provincial governments to put an end to the political and partizan patronage system in the appointment of officials is only putting in concrete form what has been forced upon the attention and crystalized in the convitions of every thinking Canadian. These members of the Board of Trade are hard-headed business men who do their business with no other consideration than the attainment of the greatest efficiency and the consequent greatest profit. They employ men in their business, not because of their political affiliations or social relations; the principle of merit alone influences business men in the selection and retention of employees. The Lethbridge Board of Trade, however, is touching only the borders of the patronage evil in insisting upon selection of government employees on the grounds of merit. They might well have gone further and demanded the abolition of the evil of the patronage list, which broadly means that in the execution of public works and the awarding of contracts for government supplies, only the faithful of the party in power shall receive practical attention and official recognition. This practice opens the gates to all sorts of abuses and wrong-doing and has been an important factor in the monstrous scandals and stealings and frauds and speculations in the provision of war supplies. Now is a good time to deal with this evil, when the public conscience is aroused and public indignation inflamed over the traitorous waste of the resources of the country, which has meant peril to the lives and health of the soldiers we have sent overseas to fight for our dearest interests—our liberties, the integrity of our homes. This is a good time to deal with this evil, because the partizan spirit that in times of peace might have condoned and excused and even encouraged the evil working of the patronage list, has become a new spirit. Patriotism has displaced, if not replaced, partizanship. We find citizens and public men of both parties working together to help Canada do her best in this war. Parliament, irrespective of party lines willingly and unanimously, imposes sums for war purposes. We should, therefore, see that the money that patriotism provides should not be wasted through the sinister influence of partizanship in the administration of its expenditure.

NEED FOR WAR TIME WORK.

The advertisement, "Production and Thrift," to be found in our advertising pages, is a timely appeal to the patriotism, public spirit and interest of all Canadians. It is well pointed out that the need is great—we must not only feed ourselves, and feed our soldiers, but we must help feed the allies. Production and thrift are dependent terms. To be producing we must be thrifty, which means frugal that is fruitful in expenditure of money and effort. Thrift is not mere parsimony, sparing, pinching and saving to amass worldly goods, but it means economy and telling application of all our resources that can contribute to productiveness. Last year the appeal to production was easier to meet than this year. We could express our patriotism by larger acreage and hence larger production. But now the problem of production is complicated by lack of means, that is, the means of securing larger production, scarcity of labour for the farm. This means a louder call to our patriotism. The war has splendidly thinned the ranks of labour; that is the active ranks. We must now call upon the reserves, that is those who have retired from active work on the farm. There are said to be thousands of retired farmers in our villages, towns and cities, who are still "up to" a season of work in the fields. Many of them are much fitter than thousands of farmers who are still in the ranks of active farming. Then is it not possible to utilize the many aliens now interned in Canada? Why not arrange to use them for farm work, as they have been utilized in clearing operations in Northern Ontario? It may be that war is our first business, but war is not confined to men fighting in the trenches. In the home trenches—the furrows in our farm fields, one of the most important actions of the battle must take place. We at home must feed those who fight. The appeal for greater production comes to every branch of productive farming—to the grain grower, the dairyman, the fruit grower. The appeal referred to in another column comes from the two greatest departments of the government, the Agriculture and Finance—and the greater of those is agriculture. If finance partly fails we can borrow. If farming fails we starve. We want to get practically interested in this thing of increased production. It may quicken our interest and stimulate our activity if we learn more of the needs and possibilities. The government has in press, "The Agricultural War Book for 1916." Every citizen can get a copy free of cost by applying to the "Publication Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa." Let us pull ourselves together, and pull together, and for this year at least, try to live up to the good motto for war time of Sir Thomas White—"Work and Save."

Mr. Rowell Pays A Tribute To His House Colleagues

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, April 8.—A tribute to the public spirit of his colleagues in the Legislature during the last five years, and their unfaltering and now successful advocacy of radical temperance reform, was paid by Mr. N. W. Rowell on Saturday afternoon, speaking at the annual meeting of the East York Liberal Association, held here.

"While the Temperance Bill was under consideration in the House," said Mr. Rowell, "the Premier and Provincial Secretary presented their views on the part taken by the Conservative party of this province, in connection with legislation dealing with the liquor traffic, and while I did not find myself in entire agreement with these portions of the addresses, I offered no criticism then, and I am offering none to-day. I realize the difficulties which the Prime Minister faced, and the efforts he has been compelled to put forth to reconcile many members of his party to the course which he has pursued. I took advantage of the opportunity of congratulating the Prime Minister on the introduction of this legislation, and I endeavoured to pay a tribute to the noble, disinterested and self-sacrificing service of thousands of the citizens of our Province who have toiled and struggled for years to secure this great reform. May I be pardoned this afternoon if I pause to pay a tribute to the worthy part played in this great struggle by the gallant band of men who surround me in the Legislature.

"When my colleagues and I adopted our policy for the abolition of the bar, a number of the Liberal members who gave their hearty assent to the conclusions reached, stated that the adoption of such a policy would mean defeat for them at the ensuing election. Although these men recognized that they were taking their political lives in their hands, although they believed that the course proposed probably meant for them political defeat, they cheerfully and heartily joined with us in framing the policy, because they believed it was in the public interest. What some of my colleagues feared came true, and they fell in the general election of 1914, nobly and courageously fighting for the cause which is to-day triumphant. They gave their political lives that this cause might triumph.

"My friends who sit around me adopted this policy, not at a time when almost all men were its advocates; not at a time when it was considered the proper and patriotic thing to do; but they adopted it at a time when some people, at least, were disposed to scoff and mock, and at a time when we were described by many as faddists and cranks.

"I venture to think," declared Mr. Rowell, "that there is no finer chapter in the history of the Liberal Party in this Proivnce than the heroic efforts and sacrifices made by the party during the past four years in the interests of temperance reform; and there are no men more gratified to-day than the Liberals of Ontario that this great achievement is to-day the work of a united Legislature."

Mr. Nelson Parliament, M.P.P. for Prince Edward County, spoke with Mr. Rowell, and told of the efforts of the Liberals in the House to secure agricultural reforms.

PLEA OF G. A. GILLESPIE, M.P.P., FOR GREATER INTEREST IN FARMING

Summary of His Speech in the Legislature on Advanced Agricultural Policy Resolution

In the Legislature on Thursday night Mr. G. A. Gillespie, member for West Peterborough, strongly urged the Government to adopt a more advanced Agricultural Policy, such policy to include:

"making more available to rural communities the scientific and technical education taught in the Ontario Agricultural College, by the establishment of Agricultural Schools and Demonstration farms throughout the Province; financial assistance by way of loans at a low rate of interest on the security of land and improvements, to assist desirable settlers in establishing themselves in the newer parts of the Province, and to enable farmers in the older parts of the Province to improve and increase the productivity of their lands."

Mr. Gillespie said that while the Department of Agriculture was doing good work they should do more. His intention was to criticize them not for what they had done, but for what they had not done, and to urge and help them to do more. "Last year," said Mr. Gillespie, 'The Agricultural Committee of the Legislature had but two meetings and they had no business before the Committee. This year, I am pleased to say, we have had a meeting of the Agricultural Committee every week, and we have had an address every week by one of the representatives or officials of the Department of Agriculture."

The Committee had been doing good work this year, he said, and if they continued that work the Agricultural Committee would soon be as important as the Private Bills Committee. Mr. Gillespie thought the

as any Committee of the Legislature.—(Applause).

Mr. Gillespie said he was going to speak more of what he thought they should do in the future. He hoped what he had to say would be taken kindly by the Minister of Agriculture and that the Minister would give some consideration to it. "What I have to say," added Mr. Gillespie, "is to help the Department, not to harm it. There are many subjects of Agriculture that we might talk on, but I am going to talk on the Department with which I am most familiar, that is the Department of dairy farming. Many of the speakers have stated that the farmers of Ontario are making lots of money and that they are contented. I do not agree with that statement. It is true that the farmers of Ontario were favoured with good crops last year but conditions last year as we had them, were largely providential. And while it is true that good crops were harvested the farmers did not make the amount of money that their investments demanded. During the previous three years many of the farmers did not make more than their expenses and the return on their investments. In this connection I would like to give a few figures showing comparisons between

Two Typical Ontario Farms.

One of them is the farm of a progressive farmer and the other is the farm of an indifferent farmer. The progressive farmers has a $10,000 farm. He has $2,000 invested in stock and $1,000 in implements, a total investment of $13,000. I estimate that his revenue would be as follows: Milk, $1,200 a year; hogs, $1,000; calves, $250; colts, $100; fowl, $100, making a total revenue of $2,650. Out of that the farmer will have to pay $50 for taxes, $600 for wages for the hired man, $780 for interest, $200 for groceries, and $120 would have to be allowed for depreciation. That is a total expenditure of $1,650, so that the efarmer has left $1,000 salary for himself and for his wife and daughter, if he has one.

Taking the case of the second farmer, Mr. Gillespie said he would have a $5,000 farm with $2,000 invested in live stock and $1,000 in implements, a total investment of $8,000. His revenue for the year would be as follows: Milk, $600; hogs, $500; calves, $250; colts, $100; fowl, $100, a total revenue of $1,550. His expenditure would be as follows: Taxes, $25; wages, $400; interest, $480; groceries, $200; depreciation, $100, making a total of $1,200. That would leave $350 salary for the farmer, his wife and daughter, if he has one.

Mr. Gillespie thought

$1,000 Not a Great Amount

for the salary for one year of a farmer who had intelligence enough to run a $10,000 farm. Many of the farmers of Ontario, he said, were not making interest on their money invested, let alone a decent salary for themselves.

"Take the average," said Mr. Gillespie, "of these two salaries which is $675.00, I think my point is quite clear that the average farmer is not making the profit his work and his investment demands.

In 1908, the largest year of our export on cheese—I find 2,395,932 boxes exported at a value of $21,568,388. In the year 1915 I find 1,851,731 boxes exported, valued at $22,806,670. The point I wish to bring out is that in 1915 we exported 544,201 boxes less cheese, but received $1,243,582 more, and further—I wish to point out that even at last year's price cheese is not up to its value as a food product, when we consider the findings of experts on the matter — that one pounds of cheese is worth 2½ pounds of the best beef steak. Cheese is a food is also found by Professor Harcourt of the O.A.C., Guelph, to be easily digested at all stages — whether green or well cured.

In closing I wish to point out to the Minister of Agriculture that I still consider the establishing of Demonstration Farms in each county wound be a benefit. While the Agricultural College at Guelph is good for education, I would like to see the student taught at Guelph placed on such a farm as I have described and actually show the profit made by successful farming; and, Mr. Minister, if you had a statement from each demonstration farm in each county of this province showing actual profit made you would have some valuable information for htis House, and if the actual returns from these farms showed a fair profit you would have no trouble in getting the slogan 'Back to the Land' fulfilled.

Whistler's Drawings of Himself.

In "Memories of James MacNeil Whistler," by Thomas R Way, the author says:

"Once I questioned Whistler as to the authenticity of a black and white portrait of himself, on brown paper, which my father had bought from him and afterward fancied was by some other artist. The reply was amusing; it was to the effect that he was not in the habit of collecting the works of his contemporaries, but that at one period of his life he had made a practice of drawing his own portrait each night before going to bed and that doubtless this was one such."

To Remove a Broken Screw.

One often requires to remove a screw with one side of the head broken off. The following is a method of drawing out the broken screw with ease and without disfiguring the work: Place the screwdriver against one side of the head, and with a small block press firmly against the screwdriver, at the same time turning the screwdriver and the block. The screw will come out almost as easily as if the head were intact.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

When Death Was Sweet

Her Dream Became a Reality

By ETHEL JAMES COANN

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co

One morning in June Dr. Severn was walking down the steps of the City hospital in Hanover. As he was about to get into his phaeton one of the internes rushed out and said, "Dr. Arnold wants you to do the operation he has on for 10 o'clock."

The surgeon removed his foot from the carriage step and turned around.

"I don't know anything about the case. Where is Arnold?"

"He's had an accident and can't come."

The doctor meditated a minute or two, then went back up the hospital steps.

A few minutes later the surgeon, in clinic uniform, entered the operating room.

A door swung open, there was a strong odor of ether, and two orderlies carried in a woman on a stretcher. The anaesthetist kept the cap over her face as they lifted her to the table.

As Severn began to operate he laid his fingers for an instant on her wrist, then made the incision for straight laparotomy. In his movements there was no haste.

"I have my doubts about this case," he said coolly as the flesh parted under his steady blade.

The assistant noticed a puzzled look on the surgeon's face as he hesitated in selecting an instrument. A hush fell, for he was feeling his way cautiously.

The patient's breathing was slow and labored, and the sides of her emaciated body quivered with each respiration.

"Let up on the ether," Dr. Severn commanded.

Silently he picked instrument after instrument from the tray offered him.

The work began in earnest—slow, cautious work—till the perspiration stood in great drops on the surgeon's forehead, and the clinic nurse had a white line around her mouth.

Then suddenly, as if the silence were a loud report, they perceived that the patient had ceased breathing. The surgeon spoke one word:

"Air!"

A nurse opened the window, the anaesthetist laid aside the cap, and, without letting go the ligament he was tying, the surgeon rested his eyes upon the still face.

Slowly the patient inhaled the fresh air, and then, by some freak for which there is no accounting, she opened her eyes, looking full at the surgeon, who, with a look of horror that turned his face ashen and drew dark circles underneath his eyes, looked at her.

In a flash the anaesthetist put the cap back and sprinkled ether, but the surgeon stood as if frozen.

A dark eyed nurse who had been standing apart with bandages stepped softly to Dr. Severn's side and, holding a glass to his lips, said:

"Drink!"

When the operation was finished and the orderlies came to carry the patient back to her room the surgeon brushed them aside and lifted her on to the stretcher. As he stood after they had gone his assistant said:

"I thought you were going to bank. Did you fumble that artery badly?"

"What artery?"

He hastily removed his linen coat and left the room.

Along the corridor of private rooms he met Miss Ashton, the head nurse.

"How is No. 20?" he asked.

"Coming out all right, doctor."

"Is any one watching her?"

"I have just come from there. She is quiet."

"I want to watch. It is a critical case," he said as he entered room No. 20.

On the high cot the patient lay, breathing painfully, moaning from time to time and muttering incoherently.

The surgeon sat down beside her, holding one wrist lightly, shading his eyes with his other hand. At two Miss Ashton came in.

"Don't you want some lunch, Dr. Severn?" she asked.

He roused himself.

"Perhaps I do," he replied. "But I don't want this patient left alone. Has she a special nurse?"

"No."

"Then can you spare that little dark nurse who was in the operating room?"

Miss Ashton rang her bell.

"Ask to have Mrs. Howell sent up to take charge of No 20," she said to the office boy.

As they crossed the court to the nurses' dining hall Miss Ashton noticed the drawn look on the doctor's face.

When he got back the nurse was bathing the patient's face. When she went out he opened the blinds and carefully studied every feature.

That night he rested on a sofa in the end of the corridor. Toward morning he heard two nurses chatting.

"Dr. Severn is asleep on the sofa by the sun room," one said. "You know he did Arnold's op. today. They say it was a hard one, and he's afraid she's going to die; then Arnold 'll have one on him."

"Good! I hope she will! I like Dr. Arnold."

With a feeling of sickness the doctor got up and went back to No. 20.

The cool gray of early dawn was just merging into pink, and the wind from the lake blew in at the open window.

As he took the chair beside her bed he saw her hand flutter on the counterpane, and, bending over, just as the light touched her, he saw that her eyes were open and on her poor face a look of ineffable content rested.

He took the fluttering fingers in his hand and said, "Nell."

Then she fell asleep.

The pink dawn yielded to yellow sunlight, and still she slept. The surgeon went down to breakfast, and when he returned she had not awakened.

At 10 o'clock the office boy went to the head nurse's desk and asked:

"Where's the main guy?"

"Do you mean Dr. Severn?"

"Yep."

"What do you want him for?"

"His wife wants him."

Miss Ashton called him, and he went out to where Mrs. Severn sat in her automobile.

"Don't you know," she snapped, "that I had to go to the Hunters' dinner party alone last night?"

He brushed his hand wearily across his forehead, and something in his look irritated her.

"I cannot leave here yet," he said.

He watched the chauffeur turn the car around in the narrow street; then he went slowly back.

He made his usual round, stopping to chat with some of his patients.

The next morning at dawn the woman in No. 20 roused again, and the surgeon sat beside her.

This time she could lift her hand, and she extended it toward him.

"Have I been hurt, Jack?" she asked.

"Yes, Nell," he answered.

"Did the horse throw me?"

In a flash the man understood that she had recognized without remembering and that in her mind she was back on the ranch where he had first met her.

"Am I badly hurt?" she continued.

"You are just shaken up."

"I'm tired," she said and slept with her face toward the light.

The fourth morning he sat in his old place beside her, and she asked:

"Where did you get my nurse?"

"I sent for her."

"She is so good to me in the night, when I have horrible dreams and think that I have lived years and years without you, Jack. Then I call her, and she comforts me."

"Do you dream that, Nell?"

"Yes. But it cannot ever be, dear. Don't you remember what I told you the night we became engaged?"

When he spoke his voice was full of suppressed pain.

"You told me, dear, that you loved me so that if we ever drifted apart"—the words had long pauses between them—"you would drift back to me—to die."

"Yes," she said and slept.

The surgeon had performed three operations at the hospital of the Sisters of Mercy, and it was 8 in the evening before he got back to the patient in No. 20.

In the corridor Miss Ashton met him with the chart. He scanned it silently.

"When was the last temperature taken?" he asked.

"At 6. It is slowly rising."

"Does she know she is worse?"

"I don't think so. She is calm and very quiet."

At 9 he sat alone with her while the nurse rested.

"I want to look at you," he said, "if you can endure the light."

He moved the shade from the electric bulb, and she raised her eyes to his—wonderful eyes, with a ring of deep violet around the outer rims of the gray iris.

"Are you better?"

"No."

The brave eyes never faltered, but a mist of tears came over them.

"I know now, John," she said, "the dream is the fact."

He held her to him.

"I love you, Nell."

The swinging light made queer, moving shadows around the room.

Later the house doctor met him on the stairs.

"Internal hemorrhage, isn't it?" he asked.

"I fear so."

Toward morning the nurse called him. When he entered No. 20 the patient was raised slightly in bed.

"Were you asleep?" she asked.

"No. I don't sleep any more," he answered wistfully.

The nurse went out and closed the door.

"Why didn't you write to me?" she asked.

"Why, Nell, I wrote and wrote, and at last I went back to find you."

They could hear the ring of a patient's bell and soft footsteps hurrying along the corridor.

"It was father," she said. "Jose wanted to marry me. The ranch was mortgaged to Jose. Then after you left father died, and I went to my aunt in Denver."

A look of contentment was settling over her face, smoothing out the lines of pain between the eyes, which bore expression of extreme agony.

Another hour passed silently. Then she asked:

"Did you know me when you operated?"

The surgeon shuddered.

"I did not see your face till it was nearly over, Nell, and then"—

"Don't call any one," she said when he lifted her to ease the pain. "I think I am going to sleep, and this"—she smiled softly—"is what I drifted back for."

The sunbeam that crept through the closed blinds stalked slowly along the wall until it touched the head of her bed.

Then the surgeon folded her hands and, like a man grown old, groped out of the room.

EXERCISE YOUR MIND.

Good Hard Thinking Will Help You Mentally and Physically.

Exercise your body if you will—that cannot harm you and is pretty sure to do you a great deal of good—but, whatever else you do or neglect to do, keep thinking. The well established law of the physical universe that a machine tends to rust out more quickly than to wear out holds equally good in the psychical sphere.

It is no mere coincidence that most of the great thinkers of the world, whether in philosophy, science, industry, literature or the arts, have lived to be old men despite the fact that in youth they were in many instances physical weaklings. Significant, too, is the fact that the majority of them began to think, began to exercise their minds along the lines in which they ultimately achieved greatness, while they were still young. There is here a pregnant hint for parents.

Whatever aptitude, whatever special interest, your child chances to display encourage him in it. Don't deaden his desire for knowledge, his instinctive tendency to think, by indifference, by failure to answer his incessant bombardment of questions. Rather thank God that your child has an active mind and set about training him in the proper use of it. Teach him the principles of observation, of analysis, of synthesis—the principles, in short, of truly effective thinking. Accustom him to thinking things out for himself and seek to interest him in whatever it is well for him to know. You need not be afraid that he will overtax his mind. No child's mind—and no man's either—is overtaxed by anything in which a real interest is taken.

The trouble with most of us is that we are not really interested in anything. We have interests, to be sure, but they are diffuse, thin, weak—they do not grip us. That is why comparatively few of us ever think in the true sense of the term. That is why when we are called upon to do anything in the nature of sustained mental effort we are overwhelmed by doubt, fear, worry, and mayhap have finally to call in the doctor with his sage pronouncement, "Poor fellow, he has been thinking too hard." In point of fact, we have not been thinking at all simply because we have not been interested enough to think.

Let us get truly interested in something, no great matter what it is, and we shall find that we can think about it easily enough. And, thinking about it—definitely, tirelessly, earnestly thinking about it—we shall find ourselves grow both in mental and bodily vigor. —H. Addington Bruce in New York Sun.

Began With Love Letters.

Samuel Richardson, the first English novelist, began his literary career by acting as scribe for a number of young women, for whose correspondence with their sweethearts he frequently supplied not only the words, but the sentiments. His reputation for this kind of composition led a firm of printers to propose that he should prepare a "complete letter writer" for the use of "those country readers who cannot indite for themselves." Two or three of the epistles written for this purpose suggested a separate story, "and thence," in Richardson's own phrase, "sprang 'Pamela.'"

Rising Costs confront everybody!

This is an era of ascending costs, a period of price advancement without parallel. No statistical chart is needed to prove this—the effect of higher prices is felt by everyone, and is of real concern to all. It is a time for thoroughly weighing values, a time for taking advantage of every opportunity that offers a genuine saving.

You can identify CERTAIN-TEED Roofing by the name, which is conspicuously displayed on every roll or bundle. Look for this label.

Certain-teed

Roofing

lowers the cost of building

CERTAIN-TEED offers a substantial saving in roof construction, at this or any other time. It costs less to buy, less to lay, less to maintain and less per year of life. Because of tremendous production (the General makes one third of all the roll roofing made in America), and because of economies effected by enormous resources, modern machinery and favorably located mills, the General is able to make the best roofing at the lowest cost.

CERTAIN-TEED Roofing is the General's own product—from the raw materials to the finished rolls, it is made in the General's huge mills. It is made of the best quality roofing felt, thoroughly saturated with the General's own blend of soft asphalts and coated with an impervious covering of harder asphalts. This keeps the inner saturation soft, and prevents the dryingout process so destructive to ordinary roofing. That's why CERTAIN-TEED outlasts other roofing. It is guaranteed for 5, 10 or 15 years, according to ply. Experience proves that it lasts longer.

CERTAIN-TEED is sold by responsible dealers everywhere at reasonable prices. Investigate it before you decide on any type of roof.

Save rags—they're worth big money now!

Prices paid for rags eight times as high as a year ago.

Rags! Rags!—got any rags? You're lucky if you have a lot of old rags around the place, because they'll bring you big money now—eight times as much as you used to get for them. Last year rags sold around 1c a pound—now they are bringing 4c a pound, and manufacturers are glad to get them at that price.

Rags form the basis of many well known products, such as writing paper, roofing etc. The roofing mills alone used a quarter of a million tons of rags last year. At present prices, this quantity of rags cost $12,500,000 more than a year ago—an increase in price of $40,000 a day for roofing.

Boys and girls!—This is your chance to make some money. Get busy and hunt up all the rags you can find. Sell them! They'll bring you good money. If you are not offered their real value, write our nearest office.

Production and Thrift

"CANADA from her abundance can help supply the Empire's needs, and this must be a comforting thought for those upon whom the heavy burden of directing the Empire's affairs has been laid. Gain or no gain the course before the farmers of Canada is as clear as it was last year—they must produce abundantly in order to meet the demands that may be made, and I believe this to be especially true in regard to live stock, the world's supply of which must be particularly affected in this vast struggle. Stress and strain may yet be in store for us all before this tragic conflict is over, but not one of us doubts the issue, and Canadians will do their duty in the highest sense of that great word."—HON. MARTIN BURRELL, Minister of Agriculture.

"MODERN war is made by resources, by money, by foodstuffs, as well as by men and by munitions. While war is our first business, it is the imperative duty of every man in Canada to produce all that he can, to work doubly hard while our soldiers are in the trenches, in order that the resources of the country may not only be conserved, but increased, for the great struggle that lies before us. 'Work and Save' is a good motto for War-time."—SIR THOMAS WHITE, Minister of Finance.

THE CALL OF EMPIRE COMES AGAIN IN 1916

TO CANADIAN FARMERS, DAIRYMEN, FRUIT GROWERS, GARDENERS

WHAT IS NEEDED? THESE IN PARTICULAR—

WHEAT, OATS, HAY,
BEEF, PORK, BACON,
CHEESE, EGGS, BUTTER, POULTRY,
CANNED FRUITS, FRUIT JAMS,

We must feed ourselves, feed our soldiers, and help feed the Allies. The need is greater in 1916 than it was in 1915. The difficulties are greater, the task is heavier, the need is more urgent, the call to patriotism is louder—therefore be thrifty and produce to the limit.

A Strange Adventure.

The steamship Dumra, which arrived at Bombay from Basra, via Karachi, last month, had a curious experience. The ship's speed on coming up the harbor was suddenly reduced. The third officer, on going forward, found a large fish transfixed by the bows and stuck fast.

A hook was driven into the carcase, but owing to the great weight it was found impossible to dislodge the fish until the vessel was berthed in the Victoria Dock. The fish measured fourteen feet, and was estimated to weigh more than a quarter of a ton. It had a pointed head with eyes practically on the top, and a formidable mouth about two feet wide. The carcase was towed out of the dock in the presence of a large crowd which had gathered to witness the sight.

Little Troubled by Thirst.

According to a traveler who has journeyed across the great Saharan desert, the Arabs there have an idea that Europeans are a sort of amphibious race, for only on this theory can they understand the great quantity of liquids we absorb as compared with themselves.

To us, two days, or even less, in the desert without water would mean madness or death. But the native will cheerfully march for three days at a stretch without drinking. He will even endure a fourth day's abstinence without much suffering, but after that the Arab's mind becomes clouded, and he will fasten himself to the saddle of his camel, trusting that the instinct of the animal will lead him to a pool of water. The authority, however, described as a fable the old story that the camel carries a reservoir of water in its body, and that the Arab when dying of thirst kills his camel in order to obtain the precious fluid.

Cut Off By Gales.

The Skerryvore Lighthouse, on a rock in the Atlantic off Argyllshire, Scotland, has been isolated since December 21, owing to continuous stormy weather. To keep up communications the head light-keeper, Allinson, put a letter in a bottle on January 10. This was placed in a wooden frame to which was attached a leaden keel as ballast and a small tin sail. The winds carried the frame to the small island of Errald, on the south-west side of Mull, which it reached on January 15.

GAVE HER LIFE FOR LOVE.

Young Society Girl, Who Wed ex-Convict, Killed by Grief.

AUBURN, N.Y., April 7.—Forsaken by her friends, disowned by her family, Jane Louise Cameron, the young society girl who eloped a year ago with an ex-convict, is dead in Detroit to-day of a broken heart.

On April 15 last year, Jane Louise McCarthy, 19, pretty, a debutante in Auburn society, married Roy R. Cameron, a man who had just served a ten-year term in Auburn prison. He was fighting to "come back." Thos. Mott Osborne was aiding him. Jane was a light-hearted girl. Roy was a grave, handsome man of 40, his hair turned white by prison life. Osborne had opened a "rest house" in Auburn, where ex-convicts might go while looking for work. It was there the two met. Cameron told the girl he would make good if she would help him. She put her trust in him. They fled to Syracuse, where they married.

What a 25 p.c. Increase For Trainmen Would Mean in Wages

THE demands being made by organizations of railway train service employees on Western railways for a 25% increase in wages, a demand which affects Canadian as well as the United States railways, would mean the disbursement of no less than $100,000,000 a year. In order to acquaint the public with some of the facts in the case the Executive Committee of the Association of Western Railways has issued the following interesting statement:

TRAINMEN DEMAND A WAGE INCREASE OF $100,000,000.

The average yearly compensation of all engineers on the railroads of the United States in 1914 was $1,771; of all conductors, $1,533; of all firemen, $1,037; of all trainmen, $1,033. These employees number 300,000.

The 1,381,000 other employees averaged a year.

(From Statistics of Interstate Commerce Commission.)

WHAT A 25 PER CENT. WAGE INCREASE MEANS.

For doing exactly the same work they now are and have been doing, railway enginemen and trainmen are demanding a wage increase of $100,000,000, or an average of over $300 a year for each man.

To give the same rate of increase to all railway employees would add over $330,000,000 a year to the payrolls of the roads.

That is nearly equal to all the net railway dividends paid in 1914, and more than those paid in 1913.

One third of the railway stock paid in no dividends in 1914.

TRAINMEN GET THEIR FULL SHARE.

The railway engineers, firemen, conductors and brakemen who demand $100,000,000 a year more pay for the same work constitute about 18 per cent. of the total railway employees and now receive 26 per cent. of the total wages paid.

Back of the demand for 25 per cent. more pay for these highest paid employees is a thinly-veiled threat to stop every train in the country if the raise in pay is refused.

Are the rights of other railway employees, the stockholders and the public not to be considered in this issue?

Excepting engineers and firemen, who collectively get the highest wages of all railway employees, those in other branches of train service are paid much more on the average than all other employees of the roads. On Western railroads the average yearly compensation of conductors in 1914 was $1,593, and of other trainmen was $1,068. The average wages on Western roads are slightly higher than on Eastern lines. The following figures, taken from actual payrolls of Eastern railroads in 1912, show the average hours on duty per day or trip for all trainmen, as follows:

Service	Conductors	Flagmen and Baggage Masters	Brakemen
Through passenger	6.06	6.52	6.06
Local passenger	6.10	6.12	6.06
Suburban passenger	6.38	6.13	6.27
Fast freight	9.38	9.25	9.38
Slow freight	11.40	11.41	11.40
Local and Pick-up freight	12.04	12.01	12.04
Work and Wreck train	11.58	11.53	11.55

What the conductors and trainmen actually earned during the same year is shown in the following table:

CONDUCTORS.

1,064 conductors (4.7 per cent.) earned less than $1,000 a year.
1,982 conductors (8.8 per cent.) earned from $1,000 to $1,100 a year.
1,295 conductors (12 per cent.) earned from $1,100 to $1,200 a year.
3,704 conductors (17.1 per cent.) earned from $1,200 to $1,300 a year.
3,743 conductors (17.4 per cent.) earned from $1,300 to $1,400 a year.
2,391 conductors (14.7 per cent.) earned from $1,400 to $1,500 a year.
1,482 conductors (9.3 per cent.) earned from $1,500 to $1,600 a year.
946 conductors (5.9 per cent.) earned $1,600 to $1,700 a year.
644 conductors (4.1 per cent.) earned $1,700 to $1,800 a year.
892 conductors (5.6 per cent.) earned over $1,800 a year.

OTHER TRAINMEN.

5,446 other trainmen (18.9 per cent.) earned from $1,000 to $1,100.
3,394 other trainmen (11.8 per cent.) earned from $1,100 to $1,200.
1,745 other trainmen (6 per cent.) earned from $1,200 to $1,300.
576 other trainmen (2 per cent.) earned from $1,300 to $1,400.
140 other trainmen (.49 per cent.) earned from $1,400 to $1,500.
13 other trainmen (.04 per cent.) earned from $1,500 to $1,600.
1 earned $1,798.

Without expecting any change whatever in their hours of service, the engineers, firemen and trainmen on all the railroads in this country, and some in Canada, are demanding a wage increase of 25 per cent., amounting to $100,000,000 a year.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

A REPLY TO HIS CRITICS FROM REV. DR. G. C. WORKMAN

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—A short time since I was surprised to learn from papers and cuttings sent to me that I had been attacked in the Public Press of your city by certain persons who were present at the lecture I delivered there last month. I was the more surprised at what they published, because the vote of thanks I received was very hearty on the part of both mover and seconder and because the applause expressed was very general and, apparently very sincere. Being too busy then to attend to the matter, I was compelled to postpone my reply; but I desire at present to deal with each of these critics, as I consider the course they have taken most discourteous and their attack on me most unfair. Their discourtesy seems all the greater, inasmuch as at the outset I requested those present to ask questions at any stage, if anything I said needed explanation; but, from beginning to end of the lecture, no one put a single question to me.

Before dealing with those critics, I may say that from their criticisms no one could get a clear conception of what I said nor of why I said it. Neither could anyone gain a true idea of what my real object was. I have never read a more earnest paper, nor have I ever spoken with a more serious purpose. My object was to show that, though every doubtful or disputed fact recorded in the Bible were proved to be worthy of doubt and dispute, nothing essential to Christ or Christianity would be touched, much less would it be disturbed, because every vital doctrine of the New Testament may be tested by experience and verified in consciousness. The verities of the Gospel are like their author, they are eternal and unchangeable. In my lecture I used only such critical results as are known to competent scholars and accepted by the most Christian of them. The established results of criticism are important, but they are necessary, not to salvation, but to intelligence, or a proper understanding of the Scriptures.

Coming to the unfair attacks, I wish to tell your readers that the Virgin Birth, the Diety of Our Lord, and His physical resurrection were not "questioned or denied" by me, as my clerical critic insinuates. His suggestion that He remained silent while that was being done amazes me. I did not even refer to the Diety of Our Lord, though I teach that doctrine as scripturally as any man that lives. I referred to the historicity of Jesus for the purpose of combatting the view of those who denied that he ever lived; and I avowed my belief that the evidence of His existence is incontrovertible.

"I believe", I said "that the picture of Him presented by the Synoptists is a portrait, not a composite; and my conviction is that the more closely we examine it, the more clearly it will appear to be a portrait, and not a composite,"

Nor did I question or deny the Virgin Birth of Jesus. I did not discuss the doctrine, much less dispute it, but dealt solely with the recorded accounts. In explanation of statements made by Canon Freemantle and Bishop Carpenter, each of whom declares that the Virgin Birth is not an original part of Christianity, and is not found in the earliest stratum of the Gospel, or the Gospel of Mark, I read these words:

"The accounts in Matthew and Luke seem to be traditional, that is, they are parts of the original Gospel Tradition which must be investigated critically in order to show to what extent they are historical."

There are those who dispute the doctrine, but I did not; for I both hold and teach that Jesus of Nazareth was the Son of God and the Saviour of men, and that His Gospel is the power of God to salvation to everyone that believes, irrespective of His origin or birth.

Neither did I question or deny the physical resurrection of our Lord. I did not discuss His physical resurrection, though I told those present that the important thing for us is not the empty tomb, but the risen spirit. I told them also that the earliest New Testament writer, the apostle Paul, teaches the doctrine of a spiritual resurrection, or a rising up of the spirit. Then I answered the question concerning the peculiar account in Luke 24:39—43 by quoting from Dr. Denny's book, entitled "Jesus and the Gospel". His words are:

"Can we, in consistency with Paul's doctrine of the resurrection body, conceive Jesus saying, 'Handle Me, and see for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye behold Me having?' Can we conceive that He took a piece of broiled fish and ate it before the disciples?"

Those are Dr. Denny's words, and not mine; and each enquiry expects a negative answer. He means to say, No; we cannot conceive it. "It is not wanton to ask such questions," he continues. "they rise involuntarily in the mind, and we have no choice but to face them." Dr. Denny, I should mention, is a prominent Presbyterian Professor in Glasgow.

Coming to my lay critic, I find that he has attacked me for what he understood me to say in our private conversation, as well as in the public lecture. Though I cannot express my surprise, I shall explain what I said.

I did not say concerning the Scriptures that "a considerable portion of their records must be looked upon as legendary in character"; I said that "there are mythical, legendary, and fictitious elements in the Bible"; and that fact is too well known to require discussion. His statement is absolutely incorrect. I may have said that a considerable portion of them is anonymous, or of unknown authorship, because we do not know for certain who wrote several of the longest books in the Bible.

I did not take "specific objection to Genesis 6:2", but I gave it as an illustration of a mythical element in the Old Testament, and it is the only one that I gave. The verse should be translated, I said, "The sons of gods saw the daughters of men that they were fair, and they took them wives of all that they chose", as any one may see who will read Driver on Genesis, which is the best work we have in English on that Book. My venerable friend, the late Professor Franz Delitzsch, the greatest Old Testament commentator of his day, calls it a piece of "unassimilated mythology."

I did not say that "the book of Daniel was largely idealized history", but I said that "the stories in it are undoubtedly idealized. I referred, of course, to the stories in the first six chapters. Referring to these chapters, Professor Terry, who was the leading Methodist exegete in the United States, says that "the narrative portions resemble the haggadic (homiletic) legends so common in the later Jewish literature". He means, as I meant, that the narratives or stories are rather homiletic than strictly historical.

I did not say that "the Fourth Gospel was composed largely of idealized memories"; I said that that Gospel was an idealized and philosophized presentation of the teaching of Jesus which renders it, not less, but more valuable. That fact also is so well known as to require no further discussion.

But my lay critic reports me as saying in conversation after the lecture that I "did not believe that Christ performed the miracles recorded in the Gospels as a proof of His Divinity." That statement is substantially correct, but the implication is false, because it implies that I said what was not right. It is correct, however, in that I learned at College more than forty years ago that the miracles of Jesus were performed, not to prove His Divinity, but as a manifestation of the power He received from the Father because of his oneness with Him. In "The Supernatural origin of Christianity", which was then our text-book, Professor Fisher says, "It has been sometimes thought that the miracles of Christ were to prove His Divinity; but this, in our judgment, is an error". "The old view that miracles are to authenticate the divine mission of a religious teacher is the correct view." Dr. Fisher adds: "and that is the scriptural view, too, I may add."

Again, this critic reports me as saying that "there was no such thing as the atonement of Christ or being saved by faith in His blood". That is an utter misstatement. I said that atonement means at-one-ment, and that the world does not occur in the Revised Version of the New Testament. In Romans 5:11, where it occurs in the Authorised Version, it is rendered by the Revisors, "Reconciliation". God reconciles men to Himself in Christ, Paul declares; and to be in Christ is to be in union with Him and have a personal interest in Him. I said, moreover, that faith is an active thing, and that faith in Christ or faith in God means faith towards Christ and faith towards God, and that implies the devotion of the heart in each case. The apostle does not teach that we are saved by the blood of Christ; he teaches that we are saved by His life". It is the blood that makes atonement, the book of Leviticus explains, because the life is the blood. And so we are saved by this life of Christ coming into us, and the spirit of Christ taking possession of us.

Once more, this critic reports me as saying that "We are saved by working out our salvation through faith and harmony with God, thereby developing a Christian character". That statement is correct, so far as it goes. We must work out our salvation with fear and trembling, or through co-operation with God, I said. Then he reports me further as saying that "it is our character that will be judged, not our attitude to the Cross". The first part of that sentence is quite correct, but the second part is absolutely incorrect. In evangelical salvation everything depends on our attitude towards Christ and the Cross, for we are saved through union with God in Christ and co-operation with God in Him. When, in reply to a question how the thief on the Cross, who did not have a chance to develop a worthy character, was saved, I answered that "Christ must have seen something worthy in him", I said exactly what I meant, for character is destiny. His attitude towards Christ seems to have been right, and the account in Luke tells us that it was right. According to that Evangelist, he expressed reverence for God, he made public confession of sin, he testifies to the innocence of Jesus, and acknowledged His Lordship. Thus he manifested both repentance and faith. So there was much that was worthy in him, which Jesus both recognised and approved.

Finally, this critic reports me as saying in regard to the attempt of Peter to walk on the water that he "had commenced to sink"; and the account in Matthew, who is the only Evangelist that relates the incident, says the same. I stated also that Jesus helped him, and Matthew makes a similar statement. The supposition that he had walked some distance before he commenced to sink is a mere inference. All that Matthew tells us is that he came out of the ship, that he walked on the water, that he became afraid, that he began to sink, that he cried for help, and that Jesus stretched forth His hand at once and caught him. However, that was not the important part of our conversation.

We had been discussing the subject of miracles, and someone had suggested that a miracle was a suspension of law. I had replied that such was not the case, because the laws of God express His Will, and like Himself, are immutable. The law of gravitation is not suspended when we lift a weight in the air; it is simply overcome, I said. Then I explained that a miracle is wrought by the incoming of a new power, or the operation of a superior force. God does not suspend His Laws to accomplish His purpose, but He accomplishes His purpose by means of them, and in harmony with them. And Jesus performed His miracles, not by violating law, but by counteracting or overcoming law with superior Divine power. I think I have now dealt with all the main points on which I was attacked.

In conclusion, Mr. Editor, on account of your space, I am sorry to have been required to write so much, but, owing to the unfairness of the criticisms, I could not compress my answers into any smaller compass. I have had many strange experiences, but never before have I had an experience like this. To have a public lecture misrepresented is very disappointing, but to have a private conversation misreported is painful in the extreme. However, for the sake of your readers, most of whom must be surprised, and for the sake of my hearers, some of whom may feel perplexed, I trust that you will publish this letter at your earliest convenience as I wish only to have my purpose appreciated and my teaching understood.

Yours truly,

G. C. WORKMAN

BRITISH AUTHORITIES DETERMINED TO SEARCH ALL MAIL ON SHIPS

LONDON, April 10.—The determination of the British authorities to thoroughly search the mails is indicated by the procedure when the Danish line steamship Frederick VIII. left Kirkwall for New York without her mails, which have been sent to London for examination.

Inquiries at the Foreign Office developed the statement that the total overseas exports of Germany, now only from four to six per cent. of those of normal years, go exclusively through the mail, with the exception of exports shipped to the United States under license granted cargoes purchased before March 1, 1915. In explaining this Lord Robret Cecil, Minister of War Trade, said that any other leakage must be infinitesimal. The Minister added that the Foreign Office, therefore, felt that the examination of westbound ships was necessary if German trade was to be stopped absolutely.

It was necessary to bring the mails to London for thorough examination, the Associated Press was told at the Foreign Office. The assertion that letters seized aboard vessels taken into Kirkwall were used as evidence before the prize court was not formally denied, but the authorities were incredulous concerning the charge. They said that the authors of the charges must refer to letters seized either in transit in England or aboard neutral vessels which voluntarily call at British ports. The prize court officials were now making an investigation of the situation, and doubtless would be able officially to deny the charge of violating postal correspondence on the high seas.

Questioned concerning the contention of the Dutch government that securities should come under the head of postal correspondence, which is protected by The Hague Convention, Lord Robert Cecil said:

"That is a matter of opinion. The British government holds that securities form a parcel representing valuable goods."

PAYING UP CHEERFULLY.

British Income Taxpayers Fund Thirty Per Cent. Addition.

In come taxpayers who are now sending their checks to the treasury, the tax being payable before April 6th, have had to pay just thirty per cent. more than last year, and next year will have another forty per cent. added to the bill. This was provided for by the finance act of 1915. Some people the tax hits pretty hard but there is little grumbling and the collectors report that the tax has been paid even earlier than it was last year, when the large taxpayers surprised the treasury by paying long before it was due.

An effort has also been made to increase the amount received from income tax by including smaller wage earners and providing that all income wherever derived shall be subject to taxation. Before the war those earning less than 160 pounds were exempt; now the figure has been lowered to 130 pounds, but these smaller wage earners have been given the privilege of paying quarterly instead of yearly. Many Americans resident in England have been affected by the decision that all income, whether brought to this country or not, is subject to taxation. Heretofore, an American resident here simply paid on his earnings or the income which he used in this country. Now he must make a return of his income from investments abroad. This has always applied to Englishmen, but under the new act all [illegible] are included. Canadians like Americans, who often send their savings home for investment, are now on an equal footing with their British neighbours. The Americans of course also have to pay the American income tax. This is what induced a number of them, who have long been resident in this country, to take out British naturalization papers a year or two ago.

Du Pont's Discover Mercury Substitute

NEW YORK, April 10.— The New York Herald, in its second article on du Pont Powder Company, states that company has discovered a substitute which will reduce by 50 p.c. consumption of quicksilver for all explosives. This means that company will be able to fill $160,000,000 in war contracts on time which, without it, would be an impossible undertaking. Quicksilver is the essence of mercuric fulminate, or fulminate of mercury, most common of many highly explosive salts. A month ago estimates of amount of quicksilver required to fill munitions contract in this country before January 1, 1918, ran all the way from 50,000 to 110,000 flasks. Higher figure is only a few thousand flasks short of entire quicksilver output of the world for 1914. United States produced 11,303 flasks in 1914 and 23,581 in 1915. Output this year is estimated at 20,000 flasks. At beginning of war quicksilver was $38 a flask. It crossed $300 this year and is now down to $200.

BURGLAR LOCKS SELF OUT.

Turns the Combination on Open Safe and Misses $6,000 Loot.

Councillor F. H. Hagerman, owner of Hagerman's flour mills at Towanda, Pa., is $6,000 richer by inadvertently leaving his office safe unlocked. A burglar entered the mill office and tried to work the combination on the safe but instead of opening it locked it. An effort was then made to blow it open without result.

Mr. Hagerman, who is a bank director, late in the night remembered leaving the safe unlocked with cheques and money in it, and trusted to luck that it would not be molested.

The contents, amounting to about $6,000, were not molested, even though the safe was considerably marred

Keep Executions Secret

French Court-Martials Have Doomed Many Men, But World Learns Little

LONDON, April 8.—The veil of secrecy is nowhere deeper than over the doings of the court-martial. In one division of the French Army it is known that since the beginning of the war the court-martial has dealt with 315 cases. It has passed the death sentence on 24 men, of whim 15 were executed, the other 9 obtaining pardons or commutations.

An officer attached to this division as a permanent court official has given to a correspondent of The Daily Mail some details of the workings of the tribunal. "You must remember," he said, "that armies today are made up of men of all shades and colours of belief and creed, anarchists, republicans, royalists, atheists, and what not. Out of this material we have welded together an army the like of which the world has never seen.

"It is not, however, the bad eggs, of whom there are a few in every regiment, who give us trouble in the matter of desertion in the face of the emeny, but rather the better sort of fellows, who cannot understand the military necessity of harsh discipline.

"Our first court-martial in a case of this kind came fairly early in the war. We were new to the business ourselves, but it was a flagrant breach, and to check its repetition it had to be dealt with according to the rules of the war. The man was duly tried and sentenced. I went to his cell and read the death sentence to him. He listened without seeming to understand what had taken place and that he was condemned to die.

"That night I instructed an officer to call for a firing squad. Our firing squads are always composed of volunteers, twelve men. Not a man volunteeered for that task. We had to commandeer a squad. The prisoner was marched out at dawn, stood quietly facing the leveled rifles, and died without faltering. I am sure he never realized the gravity of his offense. But war is war.

"Now it is different. The men know the value of discipline, know that a breach may endanger the lives of many comrades or even the safety of France, and though breaches of this kind still occur, they are met in a different spirit. Now, when I call for a firing squad, fifty men at once volunteer.

"Is the family notified that a man has been executed?" asked the interviewer.

"Yes and no," the officer replied. "The French code is peculiar. Notification of death is sent to the family soon after the execution, as if the man died in action. Then three months later the family receives a bill for 12.55 francs, ($2.51,) the expenses of the execution. But otherwise there is no publicity. The grave is not marked officially, but a record is kept, so that it will not be difficult to locate it later on.

"Occasionally we have to deal with the case of a man who has become sick of the trenches and thinks that the easiest way to get an honourable discharge is to wound himself, shoot off his trigger finger or the like. This is a capital offense in time of war, and is invariably so punished."

MARRIAGE AS A SPY CLOAK.

Witty Dodges of Female German Agents Described.

The French government has decided to pass a bill depriving all foreign brides of the privileges of citizenship of French nationality.

It has been found that many alien women have purposely married Frenchmen so that they may conduct their business of spying without interference.

Some remarkable marriages have been brought to light. Last August a wealthy German woman married a French boot black settling on him an annuity in exchange for the legal right to use his name. As they never lived together all that she really wanted was to be able to live in Paris and retain her French property.

A rich Hungarian woman artist married a penniless old stonecutter of 74 so that she might live in Paris as a spy without interference.

ADMINISTERED RITE OF CONFIRMATION AT ST. LUKE'S

Bishop Reeve Confirmed Thirty-three at Morning Service Yesterday—Also Preached at Evensong

The holy rite of Confirmation was administered to thirty-three candidates at St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, yesterday morning by His Lordship Rt. Rev. Dr. Reeves, assistant Bishop of Toronto. A large congregation joined in this beautiful and inspiring service.

His Lordship, in addressing the congregation, and particularly those about to be confirmed, spoke from the words of the fifteenth verse of the third chapter of St. Matthew, "For thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness". Many people he said, spoke lightly of confirmation, referring to it as being merely a church of England service. But it was much more. It was a scriptural service. The words of the text answered all objections. Those were the words of Christ to an objector when He came to be baptised. Christ did not neglect forms and ceremonies. The Bishop referred to several passages in the New Testament in proof of confirmation's scriptural foundation.

Repentance, faith, Baptism, the laying on of hands, the resurrection and judgment were the fundamentals of Christianity. All but the fourth were generally recognised by Christians throughout the world. Confirmation came after Baptism, and was its completion. The ceremony of this holy rite was an essential part, but only a very small part. In confirmation one received the strength to carry out the baptismal promises, for without the help and grace of God, they would be as nothing.

He urged the candidates to be diligent in prayer, regular in their attendance at the services of the church and at the Lord's table. Also at this time many opportunities were afforded for work in the service of the Master.

The followed the impressive ceremony of the laying on of honds.

Bishop Reeve also preached to a large congregation at the evening service.

Magistrate Langley Finds Smith Township Women Guilty of Neglect and Cruelty to a Child

In this morning's session of the County Police Court, Mrs. W. J. Tully and Miss Edith Tully, of Smith township, were each fined forty dollars and costs. The costs in each case amounted to seventeen dollars and forty-six cents, making a total of one hundred and fourteen dollars and ninety-two cents. The case, which was tried a few days ago, concerns an action that was instituted by the Children's Aid Society on behalf of Evelyn Glover. The latter, who is a little over eleven years of age, had her feet frozen while in the employ of the Tullys. Magistrate Langley, in passing sentence, said he had given the case thorough consideration and believed there was sufficient grounds to justify a conviction.

Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the defence and Mr. Joseph Wearing was present as solicitor and secretary for the Children's Aid Society.

Failure to pay the above fine within three days will earn for the defendants one month in gaol.

HANDY HUSBAND.

Knew How to Get Part of the Breakfast.

"I know one dish I can prepare for breakfast as well as any cook on earth," said my husband one morning when the cook was ill and he had voluntered to help get breakfast. He appeared with his dish and I discovered it was Grape-Nuts which, of course, was easy to prepare for it was perfectly cooked at the factory, but it was a good illustration of the convenience of having Grape-Nuts about.

"We took up Grape-Nuts immediately after returning from a five years' so-journ in a hot country. Our stomachs were in bad condition and we were in poor health generally.

"In a day or two we liked Grape-Nuts better than any other kind of food on the table. We both gained steadily in health and strength, and this was caused by Grape-Nuts and Postum.

"A friend of ours had a similar experience. She was seriously ill with indigestion and could find nothing to eat that would not give her heartburn and palpitation, especially at night.

"She found that a small dish of Grape-Nuts with cream made her a satisfactory supper and gave her a satisfactory supper and gave her a comfortable night's rest. In a short time she gained several pounds in weight."

"There's a Reason." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

President Wilson Is Ill To-day

Troubled With a Cold and Not Writer's Cramp as Might Be Thought

Special to the Examiner:

WASHINGTON, April 10.—President Wilson, suffering with a very troublesome cold, cancelled all his engagements to-day and remained in the White House. Yesterday found him very uncomfortable. It was reported at the White House early today, however, that he was much improved.

PREACHES PEACE BY MARTYRDOM

NEW HAVEN, CONN., April 10.—That to expectorate on the American flag is not to disgrace it nearly as much as to spill the nation's blood on it; that the American motto "Safety First" ought to be eliminated, and that the only royal road to peace is through the degradation of a martyred nation, which he hopes will be the United States were statements of Professor William Lyon Phelps of Yale in his talk on war and peace before the Connecticut Peace Society yesterday. He added that the time will come when it will be as absurd for a battleship to cruise about the seas as for the Mayor of the city to go about with a bowie knife in his teeth and pistols in his boots.

"What is patriotism—the desire to have a nation lick any other nation on earth, or the desire to have a nation that is right?" asked Professor Phelps. "The flag and patriotism are largely an illusion. Those brave fellows in the trenches are not dying for the flag, they are dying for commerce. There is nothing sublime nothing sentimental about war. Men who go to war become fiends in battle, and the women at home go insane from grief.

"Perhaps the strangest thing of all in connection with the war is that people think that Christianity is a failure. There is no good in saying that Christianity is a failure until you have tried it. If Christianity had been tried there would not be any war. It seems to me that everything has failed except Christianity. Diplomacy has failed, socialism has failed and science has not only failed but has been a terrible thing in this war. If there is one glaring, patent, conspicuous failure it is the old theory that increase in size of armaments prevents war—that the way to prepare for peace is to prepare for war."

BANISH CATS AND FLIES.

Speaks on Quarantine Regulations—Empty Milk at Door.

Speaking on quarantine regulations before the civic health employees at the City Hall recently, Mr. R. A. Shutt, chief of the quarantine division of the Department of Public Health, said that bottled milk should not be allowed ot be taken into a house wher there is communicable disease. "The bottles should be emptied into a jar or can at the door," he said. "If the bottle cannot be emptied on account of frost, the bottle should then be kept until after the quarantine is raised and the dairy notified so that they can send a special waggon for the same and have them sterilized. No bread or milk tickets should be allowed to be given out while the house is under guarantine.

"The patient should be isolated in a rom which if possible should be on the top floor of the house, and the rest of the children should not be allowed on that floor and must not play with other children.

"Household pets, such as cats, dogs, and birds should not be allowed in the sick room. May I mention that some years ago we traced no less than four cases of diphtheria to a cat that on examination was found to be harbouring germs of the disease. Flies should be banished from the room, for we are now confident that they carry communicable diseases."

FRENCH IN BATTLEFIELD.

Proposal to Assess War Toll on American "Invaders."

PARIS, April 8.—In prepaartion for "that second invasion," which will come after the German invaders have been pushed back across the Rhine, Le Gaulois suggests that when hostilities end, the entire zone of fighting in Flanders and the Vosges be encircled with barbed wire and that each visitor to the battlefields be charged a franc (20 cents) admission to any part of the present front. Says the newspaper editorially:

"The second invasion will be friendly, for it will consist of Americans, hundreds of thousands of whom have already requested agents here to prepare tours over the scenes of war in France. Their curiosity should be gratified, but they should pay enough to indemnify, to some extent, the peasants whose lands have been ravaged by warfare."

POKER NOT GAMBLING.

New York Magistrate Says It is a Gentleman's Game.

When four men were arraigned in the West Side Court, New York, on a charge of operating a common gambling place in West Forty-second Street, Magistrate Levy adjourned the case to April 18 in order that the District Attorney's office may file a brief to support the contention that poker was gambling.

Detectives from Inspector Daly's staff testified that they had taken part in a poker game in the rooms. Assistant District Attorney Lazarus in asking that the men be held asserted that there could be no doubt that power was gambling.

"I don't believe poker can justly be considered gambling," said Magistrate Levy. "It is a gentleman's game and is permitted in many of our most exclusive clubs and in countless homes. I know personally that it is played in my club."

Trades and Labour Notes

(By the Official Scribe.)

The regular meeting of the Trades and Labour Council was held in the Labour Hall on Wednesday evening last, with Vice-President H. Frost presiding.

Credentials were read and accepted for members of the Cigar Makers' Union.

The minutes of last regular meeting were read and adopted.

Several communications were read, among which was one from the President and Parliamentary Representative of the Dominion Trades and Labour Congress, which was very interesting.

Acting on a communication from the American Federation of Labour, a representative was appointed to look after the interests of that organization in Peterborough and district.

The Municipal Committee reported on the last regular meeting of the City Council. The S.A. Band asked for a grant, as they claimed to be the city's band instead of the 57th Band, being the resognized band of Peterborough.

Bro. G. A. Hamon, of the Typographical Union, reported on the matter of the deputation which waited on the Ontario Government on March 17, in regard to the abolition of property qualifications for the holding of municipal offices; also other legislation that was desired by organized labour for the benefit of the people generally, and more especially for the workingman. Bro. Hamon gave a clear and concise account of all that had transpired, and was highly complimented by the members of the Council upon the excellence of his report.

Under the heading of New Business, a resolution was introduced by Bro. Wm. Stevens, of the Bricklayers' and Mason's Union, favouring a universal eight-hour day for all classes of labour. The secretary made a glowing peroration on the advantages and benefits that accrued from the eight-hour work day, and painted a picture that would touch a heart of stone, as he unfolded the manifest injustice to the toilers, of the nine and ten-hour (and oft-times twelve and fourteen-hour) workday. What would be the heritage of posterity in the future, if women workers were forced to work from seven o'clock in the morning till six in the evening, and go home from their work worn out physically and befogged mentally? In order to better the human race, intellectually and physically, it was imperative that the eight-hour day be secured for female workers especially.

Many organizations are now enjoying the benefits and results of the eight-hour day, but many more are still working nine and ten hours a day. It was felt that the need was great, and the time opportune, to press for a universal eight-hour day, and the slogan should be: "Eight hours for work, eight hours for sleep, and eight dollars a day."

The resolution, which was unanimously adopted, was as follows:

"Resolved, That the Trades and Labour Council of the City of Peterborough desires to place itself on record as being in favour of a universal eight hours per day for both inside and outside labour, believing as we do that this is the only means whereby the toilers can obtain full justice to themselves, for we are fully persuaded that the long hours are detrimental to the welfare of our people, and further, we will take all legal steps to have placed upon the statute books such legislation that will secure for the toiler the shorter hours that they are entitled to."

A great deal of discussion arose on this resolution and all the delegates agreed that it would prove to be a good measuer and work out to the benefit of all concerned.

The Grand Opera House, Royal Theatre and Red Mill Theatre were reported as employing operators who are members of the International Alliance Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Operators.

The Council adjourned at a somewhat late hour, to meet on April 19th, at 8 p.m. sharp.

GERMAN FARMERS' PROFITS.

Cited by Enormous Increase in Their Rentals.

As proof of its charge that the agrarian interests are making enormous profits because of the high prices for their products due to the war, while the masses of the German people are finding their food supply ever more limited, the Vorwarts of Berlin cites the fact that during the year 1915 the rentals of seven large Government estates in Prussia were raised nearly 100 per cent., compared with the amount collected the year before.

Vorwarts insists that if the farmers had not found their business extremely profitable they would not have been willing to pay such big increases in rent. One of the largest of the estates named is that of Lukerneese in East Prussia, which rented for $4,000, against $2,600 in 1914. The Krottoschin estate, in the Lubau district, was rented for $8,400, compared with $1,000 in the previous year.

ELSIE JANIS TO WED

LONDON, April 7.—Elsie Janis, one of America's youngest and leading stage favourites, has capitulated to Cupid. It was announced to-day that she is engaged to Basil Hallam, a young English actor, who was a member of Miss Janis' company when she was in England several months ago.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural colour dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded, or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Waite Ready For Full Penalty, He Tells Reporters

"I Want to Pay to the Uttermost," He Declared to Party

NEVER TRIED TO DIE

NEW YORK, April 10.—His calm confessions of the murder of two aged persons, his benefactors and members of his family, prepared newspapermen invited by Dr. Arthur Warren Waite for a talk with him for a personality widely different from that of the man they found in the alcoholic ward in Bellevue. There is nothing in Waite's face of voice or manner to indicate the criminal or the lunatic. In two aspects, however, his personality belies the general impression of unusual intelligence, education and culture he gave.

His face is flat with the nose small but well formed, his chin, front face and high forehead all on the same plane. His head is flat, too, and its angle of slant from the plane of his face gives Waite's profile a geometrical suggestion.

He irresistibly reminded one observer of the type identified with the Douk obors, the strange religious fanatics of the Middle West Canadian border. Waite's face is of Slav cast.

His language is well chosen, but the broad "a" of his five years in South Africa is grafted upon speech too full of Grand Rapids tricks, and turns of words to permit the British intonations to appe r at home.

"I don't wa to say anything to excuse or mitigate my crime," was one most significant sentence be used "There is no excuse, no mitigation possible. I d'd this thing. I am ready to pay the penalty to the fullest. There is nothing I have to say in justification for there is no justification. The only mitigation I would seek is for this blow to my poor relatives and their suffering."

"Do you fear anything for the future?" was a question.

"No," came from Waite's almost bloodless lips. "That's why I want to pay the penalty to the very fullest. If I paid only half or anything less than the whole penalty, that would leave me something to work out, but if I do pay the full penalty to the uttermost I can have a new start."

SUFFERED FROM INSOMNIA

"Didn't you try to kill yourself?"

"No, I took those narcotics to make me sleep. I had suffered from insomnia and was accustomed to take drugs to make me sleep."

"Have you any accepted religious notion about death?"

"If I die I expect to go on. I have no clear religious notion. I have worked out my own problem very clearly, however, I think I understand it fully

"I suppose I am as sane as anybody on this earth. I knew what I was doing. While new some things about it are not very clear. I know exactly what I was doing."

"Was the thought of any person other than yourself in what you sought to accomplish?"

"I alone am responsible. I do not want to say anything to save myself from the fullest penalty.

"Did your ideas of the future after your act include any thought of Mrs. Hornton?" was asked when the chief physician present announced that the next question must be the last.

Waite did not look at the man who asked it. He gazed at the physician as he slowly replied, avoiding the name mentioned:

"My plans for the future did not include anyone except myself."

Dr. Menas S. Gregory, in charge of the psychopathic department of Bellevue Hospital, stood close to the side of the bed near the foot, and Waite addressed him directly in replying to questions. Dr. Edmund Connely, resident physician of the psychopathic ward, was also present, with a policeman guarding the prisoner-patient. Detective John Cunniff of the district attorney's staff also was there.

COUNTED THE $9,300

"Did you count the $9,300 you received when Gustave Cimiotti cashed your check in the bank next door?" Detective Cunniff asked.

"Yes," said Dr. Waite. "I counted it and put $300 in my own pocket. I gave the balance, $9,000 to Kane, the embalmer.

"By the way, I forgot to tell you before about the receipt I gave the druggist when I bought the arsenic. You better look that up carefully. Kane promised me that he was going to get that receipt from the druggist's files and destroy it."

"Are you a bigamist?" was another question which provoked the slow smile, showing fine white teeth and kindling the large dark eyes.

"No; I married only once," said Waite.

Mrs. Margaret Hornton has been subpoenaed as a witness for the trial. Her attorney, Harold Spielberg, said yesterday that Mrs. Hornton has signed an affidavit denying the charges made affecting her in the divorce complaint of Mrs. Waite.

Dr. Waite will not be discharged from Bellevue. Dr. Gregory said, until he is so fully recovered as to insure against a breakdown, and his return to the hospital. This will not be this week, it was announced, and Dr. Dooling declared that Dr. Waite's arraignment upon the murder indictment will not take place before next Monday at earliest.

BULGARIAN RELATIONS WITH TURKS STRAINED

BUCHAREST, April 8.—Turco-Bulgarian relations are greatly strained, it is learned, because of the Turks' refusal to ratify the cession of the territory she handed over to Bulgaria.

This place is full of talk of a Turco-Bulgarian war, as apparently the Bulgarian government has been informed that Turkey seeks to resume possession of the ceded territory.

You can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations of the throat and bronchial tubes.

Self-Sacrifice of English and Canadian Heroes

One of the most extraordinary deeds of courage in the world's history, was the characterization applied by The Journal recently to an act which won a Victoria Cross for a dead Englishman, Second Lieutenant Alfred Victor Smith of the East Lancashire Territorials. Yet inside a few days comes an announcement that a Canadian soldier did a similar thing. This was—we hope is—Private W. B. Harris, 29th Canadian Infantry Battalion. He has received the Distinguished Conduct Medal. The records of the two deeds are as follows:

SEC. LT. A. V. SMITH.

For most conspicuous bravery. He was in the act of throwing a grenade, when it slipped from his hand and fell to the bottom of the trench, close to several of our officers and men. He immediately shouted out a warning, and himself jumped clear and into safety, but, seeing that the officers and men were unable to get into cover, and knowing well that the grenade was due to explode, he returned without any hesitation and flung himself down on it. He was instantly killed by the explosion. His magnificent act of self-sacrifice undoubtedly saved many lives.

PTE. W. B. HARRIS.

For gallant conduct. Private Harris was throwing a bomb when his foot slipped, and the grenade fell on the side of a traverse, where the rest of the grenade class were standing. They all got away except one man. Private Harris, realizing his danger, rushed forward and threw himself on the bomb to save the man. The bomb exploded, and he was severely wounded through his self-sacrificing act.

So—we hold our own with the best. —Ottawa Journal.

Bandits Hold Up Bank; Get $15,000

CANONSBURG, Pa. April 10.—Two masked bandits held up the cashier of the First National Bank of Houston, one mile west of this place at noon to-day took $15,000 in currency, leaped into their automobile and fled. Joseph K. McNutt, the cashier of the bank, was alone at the time, his assistant, J. S. Game, having gone to lunch.

While Mr. McNutt was busy at his work a man approached his window and wrote on a piece of paper about the size of a check. The cashier took the paper and read:

"Make a move and you are a dead man!"

Mr. McNutt thought that it was a joke, but on looking towards the window again he found himself staring into the muzzles of two revolvers. One of the men went behind the screen which separates the interior of the bank from the entrance, and forced the cashier to lie on the floor. It required only about three minutes for the men to take all of the currency out of the vaults, about $15,000. The money was in denominations of $20, $10, $5 and $1 bills. Two thousand dollars in gold coin and about $1,000 in silver was not taken.

Two persons were in the bank when the bandits entered the building. The robbers waited until these two persons had left before they accosted Mr. McNutt.

Ten Big G.T.R. Engines From This Section Relieving Main Line

To help move the congested freight from Toronto and other centres to Montreal and the east, ten of the G.T.R. mogul engines have been transferred from the Peterborough-Lindsay section to the main line. They have been working way for weeks and have been replaced here by older engines of a smaller type. There's a siding up around Lindsay, the employees call it a neck of the woods, where the smaller engines have been requestered for a considerable time. Some of them were set aside by the advent of the moguls and others by the retrenching flurry at the outset of the war. But latterly, increased business and freight piling up has called them forth. They were brushed up and otherwise refurnished, and are now serving on this section for the time being. With these ten moguls went the crews. Local freight had to be handled meanwhile, and altogether the relief of the situation has required skilful manoeuvring of rolling stock.

A Wire From The Member

The Examiner has received the following wire from J. H. Burnham, M.P.:

The Examiner, Peterborough, Ont.

Sir,—You are unfair to the Auburn Company and to the Government, no doubt unintentionally, when your paper says, as it did on Saturday, that out of the four kinds of cloth made for the soldiers, three are made of all wool. That leaves a nasty insinuation regarding the fourth, that might well wait until the Commission's finding is made.

J. H. BURNHAM.

Mr. Burnham's telgram refers to an article which appeared in the Examiner Saturday. No insinuation was made against any one. The Examiner merely pointed out that the Auburn made vast quantities of other army cloth in addition to frieze, about which there had not been any complaint. This cloth was made of all wool, as required for that kind of material. The evidence in regard to the fourth kind frieze was published last week.

SINGING SOLDIERS.

God bless you, merry hearts and young,
A better cause was never sung,
A better march ne'er raised the dust;
Here's health for fighting, since you must.
For good luck's bringing,
I'd choose no better mascot than your singing.

God bless you, merry hearts and bold;
Blood that's turned a trifle cold
And wits grown wary in wise sooth
There's virtue in the joy of youth.
Your song makes cowery
Hearts somewhat older and a little weary.

God bless you, merry hearts and glad,
God guard each fearless mother's lad;
A better cause ne'er offered when
Was cause espoused by better men?
The world's a-ringing:
God speed you gallant youths, and save your singing.

USE OF WHO OR WHOM.

Where Grammar Bunks Up Against Idiom and Gets a Jolt.

The employment of the nominative "who" for the accusative in certain forms of interrogation has become so imbedded in common usage that resort, even now, to the strictly orthodox practice frequently requires, on the part of educated men, positive effort or prolonged training. It somehow does not seem natural. In the past assuredly this nominative form, where precise grammar would require the accusative, turns up with almost invariable regularity in works which set out to represent colloquial speech.

"Who is it from?" says the mother in Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice," to her daughter, who has just received a letter. "Who is it like?" says the heroine of "Jane Eyre" to St. John Rivers as she shows him the picture of Rosamund Oliver. Such examples could be multiplied by hundreds. There are cases, indeed, when the use of "whom" would strike upon the ears of most of us as painfully pedantic.

"Who the devil is he talking to?" says Sir Lucius O'Trigger in Sheridan's "Rivals," as he notices Captain Absolute soliloquizing. To tolerate "whom" in place of "who" in such a sentence as the last would require the speaker to be so thoroughly steeped in grammar that the sense of traditional usage, which has been hardening into idiom, has at last been completely overcome. That height of linguistic virtue few of us there are who attain. —Thomas R. Lounsbury in Harper's Magazine.

FURY OF A SPIDER.

An Insect Tragedy as Seen Through a Magnifying Glass.

One day, rummaging in an old desk, I found a magnifying glass. It was September, and in a sunny, weed ridden corner of the garden I had discovered a big black and gold spider who had strung her web between two tall burdocks and was doing a thriving business in grasshoppers.

Seated on the ground, I now surveyed her through the glass for an hour as she hung in the middle of her engine of destruction. When I touched the net with my finger she swung frantically to and fro, prompted doubtless by some instinct of self preservation, but otherwise was as motionless as if carved in jet.

Grasshoppers were not very plentiful as yet, but at last a large green fellow flew plump into the toils, the spines on his legs that had so often discovered sweet music becoming entangled. Instantly the crafty spider was all alive. Darting upon her victim, she took her station above him, and, hanging by two legs, seized him in her other six and rolled him round and round, unswathing him in a band of silver silk until he was as helpless as a mummy, and then she bit him in a dozen places with fangs oozing with poison.

At the spectacle of her evil eyes glittering with the lust of killing, magnified as they were by the glass, I turned sick and rolled over on my face among the weeds and lay for a long time miserably inert.—Atlantic Monthly.

Strange Freak of Memory.

There is a strange story of how Sir Walter Scott, producing "The Bride of Lammermoor" during illness, was afterward found to have forgotten entirely what he had thus created. According to James Ballantyne, "the book was written and published before Mr. Scott was able to rise from his bed, and he assured me when it was first put into his hands in a complete shape that he did not recollect a single incident, character or conversation it contained. The original incidents of the story, which he had known from boyhood, he still remembered, but he knew no more about the story he had written than he did before he began to write or even think about writing it." These facts were corroborated by Mr. Lockhart, Sir Walter Scott's son-in-law and biographer, so that they are placed beyond question.

Founder of the Japanese Navy.

The founder of the Japanese navy was an Englishman named Will Adams, who went to the eastern seas as pilot of a Dutch fleet in 1598 and was cast away in Japan a couple of years later. He became a Japanese noble and constructor of the navy to the tycoon, but was never allowed to return to England. He died about twenty years afterward, very ingeniously leaving half his property to his wife and family in England and half his property to his wife and family in Japan. After his death he was deified.—Exchange.

Some Big Numbers.

If you fill a tiny vessel one centimeter cube with hydrogen corpuscles you can place therein, in round numbers, five hundred and twenty-five octillions of them. If these corpuscles are allowed to run out of the vessel at the rate of 1,000 per second it will require seventeen quintillions of years to empty it.

NO END TO THE RIBBON.

How Prussian Beauty Was Posted by Young Belgian Woman.

A flash of the lighter side of war is shown in the following amusing incident, which is vouched for by the Figaro, and which relates one of the clever methods by which the Belgians, although maintaining a correct attitude toward their oppressors, do not leave a single stone unturned to make them appear ridiculous.

This particular incident, which was related by a Belgian who managed to make his way into Switzerland and thence to France, took place in a street car. A young woman entered the car, carrying on her corsage a cockade composed of the national colors of Belgium—black, yellow and red.

A Prussian officer entered and sat opposite to the young woman. His gaze resting on the colored ribbon, he leaned over and told her that she would have to take it off.

"I will do nothing of the sort, sir," was the firm response.

"Then I will take it off myself."

"I dare you to do so!"

The officer, coloring, stretched out and ripped off the cockade. The end of the ribbon still remained on the woman's blouse and he tugged at it. The ribbon lengthened, but the end was not in sight. With a gesture of annoyance he tugged further and another yard of ribbon appeared. Purple with rage, the officer went on yanking and yard after yard of ribbon unrolled, while a chorus of laughter rose from the other passengers. Finally, with a muttered curse, he dropped the ribbon and rushed out of the car.

BISHOP ASSAILS FATHERS.

California Prelate Says Many Fail In Their Duty to Their Sons.

NEW YORK, April 9. — The Right Rev. William H. Moreland, Protestant Episcopal Bishop of California, declared from the pulpit of Trinity Church that the problem of the proper training for the American boy was most serious.

"Discipline is lacking in American homes," he said. "An Eastern manufacturer showed me through mills where an army of men did his bidding, but in his home a 7-year-old boy broke into the conversation with interruptions until the father and I fled to the den upstairs.

"'A youngster is a problem,' the man said. 'One is all that I can handle.'

"He handled 5,000 by day because there was discipline, but the boy was growing up without obedience.

"The father of John Stuart Mill had no trouble in raising nine sons. He did not have the executive ability of the modern man, nor money enough to buy the cheapest automobile, but he gave the world a rich possession in John Stuart Mill."

Bishop Moreland related the incident of an American millionaire who was congratulated on his worldwide success, and replied bitterly, "What's the use of it all, when your son is a fool?" He had been too busy making money and indulging his family to get close to his own boy. An contrast was the clergyman with seven sons, who was honoured with a Doctor's degree by a Western college because he had reared so fine a family. He commended the business man who went home daily at 4 o'clock in the afternoon for a game of ball with his son.

The Bishop urged the men present to be the big brother of their boys.

QUOTES SHAKESPEARE TO URGE RECRUITING.

Sir Sidney Lee, the foremost biographer of Shakespeare, has made a clever selection from the works of the bard of Avon to appeal for recruits. Here is one:

If you fight against God's enemy,
God will, in justice, ward you as his soldiers;
If you do swear to put a tyrant down,
You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain;
If you do fight against your country's foes,
Your country's fat shall pay your pains the hire;
If you do fight in safeguard of your wives,
Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors;
If you do free your children from the sword,
Your children's children quit it in your age.

And another to flatter Tommy into a conception of the aristocratic democracy into which active service leads him:

For he to-day that sheds his blood with me
Shall be my brother; be he ne'er so vile,
This day shall gentle his condition:
And gentlemen in England now a-bed
Shall think themselves accurst they were not there,
And hold their manhoods cheap while any speaks
That fought with us upon Saint Crispin's day.

That Peterborough boys are doing their bit in many overseas units was evidenced on Saturday by the numerals of a large number of expeditionary force units being seen on the street. In addition to the 93rd, which, of course, was to be seen everywhere, Peterborough boys in the 80th, Belleville, 109th Lindsay, 139th Cobourg, 111th Galt, 146th Ontario County Battalion, the 52nd Battery, C.F.A., the 55th Battery, were noticed home for the week end.

The Lakefield News says:

A big treat is in store for the citizens of Lakefield and surrounding country when the 93rd Battalion Band visits this place on the afternoon and evening of Wednesday, April 12th. The band will arrive on the noon train and during the afternoon will parade through the town and give a splendid programme of music. In the evening a grand concert will be given in the town hall, the programme consisting of band and orchestra music, songs, recitations, etc., and from the reputation that the 93rd band has already established for itself the public can come prepared to hear something out of the ordinary. No admission fee will be charged, but a silver collection will be taken at the door, the proceeds of which will go to the Battalion Fund. This will probably be the last opportunity the people of this section will have of hearing this splendid musical organization and no doubt a large number will take advantage of it. Lieut.-Col. Johnston and the officers of the Battalion will be present during the evening.

The 21st Battalion, C.E.F., in which Peterborough is so much interested, because of the number of local boys in the unit, has been distinguishing itself at the front. In addition to the exploits recorded Saturday, the Canadian Eye Witness gives the following information:

A patrol of our 21st Eastern Ontario Battalion, under Capt. Schepered, entered an enemy front line trench, and, finding it unoccupied, made an examination of the trench, and of the ground beyond it for a hundred yards. A wiring party was heard at work and our patrol was fired on by sentries in the German second line, but suffered no casualties.

On the night of April 1, Lieut. Southey with Privates Northey and Hind, of our 21st Eastern Ontario Battalion, entered an enemy trench and proceeded along it for seventy yards. One patrol was then fired upon by the enemy, but returned safely.

On Wednesday the officers commanding the C.E.F. battalions of the 3rd District will assemble in the city for a conference with Colonel Hemming. The conference will take place in the afternoon. Lt.-Col. Johnston and Capt. Munro, Adjutant of the 93rd will attend the meeting.

The Kingston Standard says:

Each of the ten battalions that will come to Barriefield will have a central kitchen, which will contain three cooking stoves per company, making a total of twelve, so that all battalion cooking will be done more thoroughly, economically, and under the direct eye all the time of the sergeant cook.

The cooking of each battalion being centralized, will make it possible to keep the camp in the cleanest possible condition, as all garbage will be kept in one place for each battalion, making only ten garbage points to collect from for over 11,000 men.

For the third time Lieut. T. D. Sneath, who left here a year ago with the Peterborough Squadron of the 8th C. M. R., has been mentioned in despatches. The Canadian Eye Witness says:

Lieuts. Sneath and Barnes, with a party of scouts and bombers of our 8th Battalion Canadian Mounted Rifles reconnoitered a sap on which the enemy was known to have been working. Advancing down an old enemy communication trench, the scouts of our party got to within ten yards of the sap, when they were stopped by exceptionally thick wire. Explosives were placed and fired and the saphead bombed. Subsequently a careful examination was made of the work.

Sergt.-Major Whitfield, D.C.M.

The distinguished conduct medal has been awarded to company Sergeant-Major Robert Whitfield, First Battalion, Ontario Regiment (London District) for conspicuous gallantry on March 16.

The lines of our first infantry brigade were being heavily bombarded. One of our supporting points had been repeatedly struck by large shells and several of the garrison, including the sergeant in command had been wounded or killed. Sergeant-Major Whitfield, who at the time, was acting battalion sergeant-major, made his way up to the fort under heavy shell fire with an absolute disregard for his own safety. The fort was then ordered to be temporarily abandoned. With great difficulty the evacuation was carried out. All the garrison had left, with the exception of two machine gunners, when a shell struck the machine gun emplacement and buried the men. Hearing their cries for help, Sergeant-Major Whitfield returned to them and with much labour succeeded in rescuing one of the men alive.

BARRIEFIELD OPENS MAY 12TH

Kingston, April 9—Barriefield Camp will be opened on May 12. T. B. Benett, M.P., was the speaker at a patriotic recruiting meeting to-night in the interests of the 146th Battalion.

On Wednesday the officers commanding the C.E.F. battalions of the third district will assemble in the city for conference with Col. Hemming.

Pte. Wm. Hall of the Machine Gun Section, 92nd Highlanders, Toronto, is home on leave. Pte. Hall was a member of the local letter carriers until he enlisted last year.

Lieuts. Crisp, MacNab and Stevenson of the 93rd Battalion, have returned from a course at the Machine Gun School, Kingston.

The 93rd Battalion will be issued with the 1916 equipment—belts, water bottles, cartridge pouches, etc., to-morrow.

The cooks of the 93rd Battalion will play a team picked from the staff to-morrow. The cooks will line up as follows:

Goal, Griffin; backs, Hardie, Robinson; halves, Scutt, Irwin Green; forwards, Kitchen, Cridland, Stockdale, Shaw, Temple.

The death occurred at Weyburn, Saskatchewan, of Ernest Peters, who was connected with a regiment there. Deceased formerly resided here. The remains are being forwarded to Peterborough for burial.

Sergt. Wm. Stanley, of the 139th Battalion, Cobourg, formerly assistant caretaker of the local Armouries, is home on leave.

SCHOOL TEACHER

Anaemic, Run-Down, Nervous— How She Recovered.

There are so many cases like this right here in Peterborough that we are publishing this interesting letter with the hope that some of our customers will try Vinol and get the same happy result that Miss Baez did.

Key West, Fla.—"I am a teacher and became anaemic, nervous, run-down, no energy or desire to do anything. I could not sleep and had that languid, nervous feeling that made me a burden to myself. I had taken various tonics without benefit. I heard of Vinol and tried it. Soon I had a good appetite, could sleep all night and it built me up so I have the ambition to do any kind of work." Mary L. Baez, Key West, Fla.

The reason Vinol was so successful in this case is because it is a constitutional remedy that goes to the seat of trouble. The peptonate of iron contained in Vinol enriches and revitalizes the blood, while the strengthening, tissue-building properties of the extractives of cods' livers and beef peptone aid in building up the tired, overworked, run-down system.

SOME MEANINGS WEBSTER DID NOT KNOW

Eddie Wray in the Detroit "News" has added to the Noah Webster compilation of English meanings and offers the following supplement to the dictionary to satisfy the budding youth in his quest for the definition of words so often found on the sporting pages:

Fight—A primitive and exhausting exchange of blows, formerly common in boxing contests. Now practically obsolete.

Champion—(a) A meal ticket for a manager, (b) A financier. (c) One who lifts mortgages on the old homestead. (d. A cowboy. (e) A strong variety of cheese.

Manager—A cheesemonger.

Championship— A section of Easy street, extending between Title and Hasbeen avenue

Arena—A place to introduce preliminary fighters.

Ring—A rest room for boxers; called "ring" because it's perfectly square.

Referee—An opaque body interposed between spectators and the boxers.

Side-Bet—A figure of speech.

Confidence— A frame of mind that enters strongly into the make-up of boxers and the sale of gold bricks.

Second — A preliminary fighter, hired to tell the world's champion what to do.

Fight Fan—An optimist.

Principals—They draw interest.

Stakeholder—One who receives the stakes and a lot of abuse.

Announcer— A loud voice, entirely surrounded by diamonds.

Public— Philanthropist who would rather give up a week's salary than see a champion reduced to his last $100,000.

Press Box—A congregating place for politicians and city officials.

No Decision Bout—Not as wicked as "highway robbery" and far more legal than "false pretenses," as a quick-rich method.

HEALING FRANCE'S WAR WOUNDS.

War's havoc in these days of excessively long range artillery is terrific.

Every German gunner makes it a point of honor and duty to shell every building within range. He probably has orders so to do.

What such wanton destruction means to the countryside may be imagined.

An inter-Ministerial Committee has been formed by the French Government with a view to providing ways and means for the destruction of destroyed or damaged buildings and plant. The committee which consists of representatives of the Ministers of the Interior, Commerce and Industry, Agriculture, Labour, Finance, War, Colonies and Fine Arts, is already considering a general scheme drawn up by M. Revault, Deputy of the Meuse.

After the battle of the Marne urgent measures were taken to help the inhabitants of the departments of the Marne, Meuse, Meurthe-et-Moselle, and Vosges, to resume their economic life. These measures were however of a temporary character and could not pretend to repair the havoc of war.

WHOLE TOWNS TO BE REBUILT.

In the Marne, for instance, 312 dwellings had been built by last November by the department authorities, 280 by authorized societies, and 98 by the military engineers, at a cost of 28 pounds each. The total outlay up to that date was 56,000 pounds.

The problem which will have to be faced shortly is of a far more formidable character. Whole villages and even towns will have to be rebuilt, and when the hour of victory has struck all the refugees will be eager to return home and begin life anew.

Obviously it will be impossible to begin building everywhere at once. There willbeascarcityofmaterials hterd There will be a scarcity of materials, of skilled labor, of beasts of draught. Prices will increase. On the other hand all the available labor and material will be attracted towards the big yards and the inhabitants of the country districts will be the sufferers.

M. Revault recognizes that it will be impossible to reconstruct the destroyed buildings as they were before the war. He takes the view that only a portion of the available funds should be employed in the construction of light semi-temporary, but at the same time comfortable, houses, pending a return to normal conditions.

He proposes (1) that a certain number of models be prepared adapted to the needs of the various trades and professions for which they will be required; and (2) that departmental workshops be established for the construction of these types, the state supplying merely the funds. These workshops will have a co-operative character and will be managed by men of the trade.

CHILDREN AND DISCIPLINE.

Make the Child Trust You, and Use No Threats.

The following hints to teachers which appeared in the Educational Review will be equally useful for parents.

Prevention of wrongdoing is better than punishment of the wrongdoer.

Exercise great care in taking a stand that you may have no occasion to retreat.

Fault-finding is not calculated to cure a fault.

Distrust in the parent breeds deceit in the child.

A child properly employed gives no trouble.

Be firm.
Be kind.
Be patient.
Be self-contained.
Be as perfect as you ask your children to be.
And above all, make no threats.

THE CALL.

Come from the land of the woodman and ranger,
Come from the prairie, the mountain the vale,
Come at the call of your kindred in danger,
Sons of the Saxon and sons of the Gael.
Bugles are swelling—
War-pipes are yelling—
Children of warriors renowned in story,
Copy their noble deeds—
Follow where honour leads—
Conquar or die 'neath the banner of glory.

Saxon or Gael we are sons of one mother;
Some were but yesterday torn from her breast;
Others—their sires have followed each other
Age after age to their graves in the west.
Yet we are Britons all;
And when the bugle call
Summons to trenches or fields that are gory
On to the battle then!
Quit ye like British men
Conquer or die 'neath the banner of glory.

WANT ONLY HERO HUSBANDS.

Young Breton Girls will not Marry Non-Fighting Men.

The young girls in Brittany have formed themselves into an association which forbids its members marrying any young man who has not taken part in the war.

This does not only refer to the deserters and those who find their duty, but to the "shirkers" who found the means, by influence or lying, without reason of ill-health or for other just cause, to keep safe in the rear and left their comrades to do the fighting.

The rallying cry of these patriotic young Breton girls is: "Better a cripple than a shirker!"

One member of the association expressed thus her thought: "I would rather love a man who had no arm than one who had no heart."

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Without intending in any way to refer to Sir Charles Davidson's coming judgment in the Greaves-Auburn Mills inquiry let me say in regard to your editorial that I do not believe anybody but Mr. Greaves was behind the complainant. He swore out a very definite affidavit and sent it to me at Ottawa as member to bring to the attention of the authorities. I sent it to the Prime Minister who sent it to the Solicitor-General who interviewed Mr. Greaves concerning his affidavit and said that the case was one for the Davidson Commission to which it went. The Davidson Commission made, I believe, the usual careful preliminary investigations. When I was spoken to by them I said that I knew nothing whatever of the merits of the case. Whatevr may be the result of the inquiry as it whil be expressed in Sir Charles Davidson's judgment, manifestly I could not on any pretence suppress the complaint of Mr. Grieves. Beyond submitting it to the authorities I did nothing more than my bare duty; and have no explanation or apologies of any kind whatever to make. Nor can your editorial very well apply to other people. All responsibility is assumed by the Commission itself before a prosecution is allowed to proceed, and when it does proceed it does so under the sole direction of Sir Charles Davidson and Mr. Thompson, K.C., the official prosecutor. I hope the judgment will be as flattering as your forecast. It will settle rumours which concern not only the Mills, but the Government and myself as candidate for re-election. Unfortunately the general public who speak to me of it od not read the published evidence in the same clear light that you do.

J. H. BURNHAM, M.P.

Ottawa, April 8th.

OUR CITY FATHERS.

To the Editor:

You, sir, need not be told that in the criticism of civic governments, personal attacks are too often inconsistent and dogmatic. Human opinion is so prone to be influenced by selfish or sinister motives that its value has to be discounted. And that is one reason why so little good comes from protest and argument, because in too many instances the underlying motive is the same as the Irishman's, who, when asked how he was going to vote, declared that he was "Agin the government."

The taxpayers who during the past three years, have had so much reason to object to the reckless expenditures under ex-Mayor Fuller's regime, have not shown a great deal of appreciation of the efforts at economy displayed by the new Council.

The policy of our new city fathers in starting their economy campaign by reducing certain salaries and adjusting the staff in certain departments as wel las in refusing to continue many of the usual grants at the beginning of the year, might have been expected to have met with a little more cordiality from the citizens—particularly those who have been so persistent in demanding retrenchment. Even if the methods adopted do not harmonize with the views of certain of the citizens, and it can be shown that the aldermen are carrying out their election promises of rigid economy, why so much hostility? It is true there were numbers of our citizens who were quite indifferent regarding the reckless expenditures of previous Councils, partly because they were in some indirect way countenancing unnecessary expenditures, partly because they were interested in the grants and votes, and partly because they did not know any better, and who, like the ex-Mayor, was ready to rush any grant through that could be covered by debentures.

In the few opening months of this year, the Finance department of the City Hall has shown what is possible under aggressive, economic investigation. What is so glaringly wrong with the action of the aldermen in adjusting salaries and curtailing the number of city employees? If the pruning knife has to be used in the cutting down of expenses in connection with any business concern, is it not most likely that the salaries and the efficiency of the regular staff will first receive attention?

Every municipal candidate that went to the polls last January, did so with a distinct pledge to the electors that they would use every legitimate means to curtail the general expenditure of the city. It has no doubt taken many hours of investigation and thoughtful consideration to arrive at decisions regarding the salaries and efficiency of the civic employees. And are we to say that the information gained by the aldermen and the circumspect manner in which they dealt with the matter should now be lost sight of?

And then with regard to the grants and appropriations that have been turned down this year or that have been savingly reduced, who knows so well as our Board of Aldermen the absolute necessity for unsparing retrenchment in every quarter? Who knows better than the aldermen the load of debenture debt which has unwisely been allowed to accumulate during the past three years, especially, the extra obligations which the city is compelled to provide for in the shape of huge expenditures for the outfall sewer, the new plant for the sewage disposal of the city, and other outstanding burdens bequeathed to the new Council?

To make matters worse, the new aldermen find that the regular revenues for the year are to be very seriously reduced. There will be no revenue from liquor licenses this year, and it is expected that there will be a slump in the city assessment for the year of perhaps $30,000, caused by the government taking over the gas works, street railway and electric power, as well as in various other losses which the Council expects to be confronted with.

Is it wise, therefore, that so little encouragement should be shown the Board of Aldermen? It is known that they have been meeting night after night discussing the estimates for the year, in the endeavour to hold down the tax rate, while their efforts have been belittled when confronted with so many trying problems from without and within. No one supposes that the policy of retrenchment which the aldermen have started out with has been exhausted. Give them time and a fair chance. If it be found that they have aimed at simply cutting civic salaries and withholding a few grants, and stopping there, it will be time enough to put a proper value on their wisdom and intelligence.

It will be a surprise to many people if Mayor Duffus and the men on the front benches of the Finance committee do not give a good account of stewardship before the end of their terms.

Yours truly,
CITIZEN.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I was rather surprised to notice an advertisement in the Review and Examiner of Saturday last of a performance that is to be put on in Knox Church, unreserved tickets 25c, and reserved itckets 50c. I never knew or thought that there were reserved seats in a church, and I think it is a desecration of the church and goes to show that even in a church they divide the classes. We are taught that in Heaven we will all be as one, then why the distinction in the Church on earth. It seems to me that some of the churches are running different kinds of entertainments instead of using the church for the purpose it was built, to preach the word of God in.

Thanking you, Sir, for the use of your valuable space, I remain,

Yours,
JUSTICE.

Charge Against Four Surveyors

Men Employed by the Trent Valley Canal Authorities Alleged to Have Destroyed Shade Trees on Summer Resort Property

LINDSAY, April 11.—At a session of police court held before County Magistrate F. D. Moore, the matter of Nasmyth vs. the Trent Valley Canal officials of Peterborough, was dealt with. Two witnesses were examined, Messrs. Millar Johns, of Verulam, and Mr. Jas. McCabe, of Peterborough.

Mr. John's evidence went to prove that the surveyors were in the vicinity of Ancona Point and recognised the men charged with trespass as amongst those who were seated in court.

To Mr. I. E. Weldon, (lawyer for the defence), Mr. Johns said the cut in the fence did no particular damage and the trees were very small ones.

Inspector Heard.

Mr. James McCabe, of Peterborough, was next called and to Mr. Nasmyth for the prosecution, stated that he was an inspector of Government works for the Dominion and was a member of the surveying party on Sturgeon Lake under Mr. Grant, chief engineer. He knew all the members of the surveying party. "I did not know the axe man. Mr. Knox, one of the party, does chain work and Mr. Spence is general engineer. Mr. Burgess is a chain man. We did work at Ancona Point. The surveying party entered upon that property under the directions of Mr. Spence. He told us to go on the Point and put in a hub. We were instructed to be very careful as Mr. Nasmyth was a very particular person. We were making a survey to find out the shoals and in regard to building a new lock at Bobcaygeon. We had to enter the land to get our lines for this work. In running lines we cross points which we could not make a survey of without entering upon the land. Our party cut down some trees on Ancona Point for the purpose of getting a line through, and we only cut trees which were obstructing the view of the proposed line. Mr. Knox is the man who was responsible for determining what trees should be cut down. Mr. Spence was there the day the trees were cut on the east side and gave the instructions to do so. All I saw cut was two trees the rest being all limbs. All trees over 6 or 8 feet high were cut to give a proper view."

Must Cut Trees.

To Mr. Weldon, "I am an inspector of construction and have been on the work for a considerable length of time. We must cut trees to run lines and would not cut trees unless we had to. We were running a triangulation line on that day. We must cut trees to run a base line and there was no malice against Mr. Nasmyth. We lost three hours trying to get through without doing any cutting on the west side and built a concrete hub in the place to save cutting trees and shrubs. I only remember of three trees being cut, which were about three inches in diameter, one being a black alder."

This concluded the evidence, both lawyers addressing His Worship on the case and making a brief summary. Mr. Nasmyth claims that no Government official, be he surveyor or premier, can enter upon land and damage property without leaving said party liable for same. The only time, according to Mr. Nasmyth's reading of the law, that the Government or its officials could enter the grounds would be when the said lands were to be expropriated for Government purposes.

Mr. Weldon, for the defence, did not agree with the opposing lawyer and quoted another clause taken from the Dominion statutes, which he claimed justified the surveyors in their act.

According to Mr. Nasmyth's views Magistrate Moore said a surveyor could not land with a theodolite in his possession.

Mr. Nasmyth claimed that there was malice on the part of the surveyors and that they acted like maniacs from the way they cut through the place.

Magistrate Moore reserved judgment for two weeks. The matter of legal right will also be considered.

Smuggle Chinese From Canada Into States in Autos?

Four Orientals Dragged From Bottom of Car

PART OF GANG OF 12

Two Men Arrested at Buffalo—Officers Seeking Drivers.

BUFFALO, April 11.—Federal officers to-night were searching for the drivers of two automobiles, which it was believed were used in smuggling twelve Chinese into this country from Canada.

Two men who said they were William Carpeter of Lewiston, N.Y., and Charles Baker of Hamilton, Ont., were arrested here yesterday, and under sacks in the bottom of their automobile were found four Chinese, believed to have been brought from Canada. Albert B. Wiley, an inspector, and a United States revenue collector, made the arrest.

To-day they found two Chinamen at a country hotel near here. They told the officers they were memebrs of a party of twelve Chinamen brought from Canada. The Chinese said three automobiles had left Buffalo for New York, each carrying four of their countrymen. They refused to say how they came to be in the hotel, but the federal officers said they believed the driver of the car in which the Chinamen were hidden became frightened and left the men on the country road.

The Tigris Is Not Rising

British Able to Attack Turk Positions on Narrow

LONDON, April 11.—Preparations are well under way for the next British attack in the attempt to relieve the army surrounded by the Turks at Kut-el-Amara, Mesopotamia. This attack is to be made, according to the plans of the British staff, against Fannayyat, on the Tigris a short distance above Felahie, which recently was won from the Turks.

The following official statement, on these operations was given out to-day: "Lieut.-Gen. Sir Percy Lake (commander of the British forces in Mesopotamia) reports that Lieut.-Gen. Sir George Gorringe's preparations for the Fannayyat position are well advanced, though floods have curtailed the frontage on which the attack can be delivered. The weather is improved and has been fine for the last two days. The river has not risen since the 7th."

UPHOLDS JAPAN'S ADHERENCE TO THE BRITISH ALLIANCE

TOKIO, April 11.—Baron Korekiyo Takahashi, once Minister of Finance and leading member of the Opposition in the House of Peers, has upheld the Premier, Count Okuma, in a defence of the Anglo-Japanese alliance. He blames internal politics for the press agitation on the subject. He says:

"The opposition press and indeed many of the members of the opposition have gone so far as to openly assert that Baron Kato, once Minister for Foreign Affairs and leader of the government supporters of the last Diet, is completely under the thumb of Great Britain—'private secretary to Sir Edward Grey'—as one speaker said. Now, if this is said in the Diet and the dependence of Baron Kato upon British influence is popularly believed, it gives the press a peg on which to base attack. Hence, in this acute state of public opinion it is not difficult to understand how an agger-tunist cry may gain vogue for a short time."

But Baron Takahashi declared that while he doubted the ability of the present ministry he affirmed that the loyalty of Japan to Great Britain and the Anglo-Japanese alliance is as settled as any great principle of the nation. Therefore the agitation need not cause Japan's friends a moment's uneasiness. He was convinced that the leading men of Japan, the men of all classes, occupation and political leanings, are in sympathy with Great Britain and the Allies and that a consensus of the empire would show the whole people to be in perfect accord as to upholding of the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

He concluded:—"Friendship for Great Britain, France, America and the allied countries is not a policy inaugurated by this Cabinet and the fall of the Cabinet would not change the foreign policy of the government by one hair's breadth."

Six new freight vessels, which are expected to prove useful in the transportation of war supplies will soon be completed by the Nipion Yusen Kaisha, or Japan Mail Steamship Company, and placed on its European line. Japanese shipping circles are eagerly awaiting the reopening of the Panama Canal, which will save a month in the voyage to Europe, now around the Cape of Good Hope on account of the submarine danger in the Mediterranean.

Allies Unearth A Greek Plot and Make Protest

PARIS, April 11.—(Delayed). The Temps publishes a despatch from Athens quoting the Patris of that city to the effect that the Ministers of the entente powers have complained to the Greek Government that 37,000 flour sacks belonging to Russia have been handed over by Greek authorities to Bulgaria. These sacks were requisitioned by the Greek Commissiary Department for the army, but are said to have been transported clandestinely to Bulgaria. Details of the transactions are given in the following telegram from G. Passarow, Bulgarian Minister at Athens to Premier Radoslavoff, of Bulgaria:

"Nedkof (Bulgarian consul at Salonika) informs me there are canvas sacks at Salonika. I have talked with Gounaris (Greek Minister of the Interior) about this question, and he tells me: 'I will verify the matter, and if there are really sacks at Salonika I will recommend to the Greek National Bank to buy them and send them to the Bank of Bulgaria, on the pretext that they are sent for flour, in order to avoid the attention of British spies at Salonika. If your merchants bought these sacks and the British were informed of it we would draw disagreeable consequences upon ourselves. After using the sacks during the military operations the National Bank of Bulgaria will sell them to us with flour. All that will be done to justify the shipment in the eyes of the British.'

"The Minister of the Interior will communicate to me in a few days how many sacks they will give us."

WIDOWS, WEARY OF BEING PICKED ON, FORM SOCIETY

OMAHA, Neb. April 10.—They've picked on the poor widow long enough. Stony hearted attorneys have foreclosed mortgages on her, dissolute sons have robbed the crock of all its cash to purchase rum, and husbands once removed have come home to administer an occasional conjugal beating, but——

That's all over with

Mrs. B. C. Turpin of Omaha says it's all over with. Girls, step up and meet Mrs. Turpin, the widow's friend, and one herself. Also meet Mrs. Turpin's three children, even if they haven't anything to do with the story of how their mother has organized the

SMOOTHS WIDOW'S PATH

Mrs. Turpin just got sick and tired of seeing the way the sisterhood was treated. The society is the result. There's nothing it won't do, according to Mrs. Turpin's prospectus, to make the widow's hard road a path of clover, down and roses.

Upon the payment of $3 yearly dues it will undertake to see to out of town widow's shopping, the establishment of a sewing department, an employment agency, a downtown rest room for members, a magazine, an advisory committee to help out any poor widow with words of counsel (absolutely free) and other features for the advancement of the widow's cause, such as free medical service and talks on thrift.

It is the only organization of its kind in the world. Any white woman, if she can produce evidence that her husband is under the sod, or sent hence via the divorce court, can belong.

TAKES SLAP AT MERE MAN

Mrs. Turpin in her prospectus doesn't hand the men a thing—O, no! Try as hard as she may, she can't say much for them.

"One would think," she says, "that a widow would command a certain amount of respect that the dignity of womanhood and particularly motherhood if she had children would cause men to pay her. But instead of assisting her every known obstacle is thrown in her way."

And though she may look the same, she is never treated the same. Her former companions take advantage of her or drift away from her. And Mrs. Turpin asks if that's the case, now what O what, will happen when vast droves of war widows come streaming to our shores after the end of the European conflict?

Mrs. Turpin begs the widowed sisterhood to take advantage of the full now and get together under the banner of organization.

B.C. DRUGGISTS TO DECIDE QUESTION

VANCOUVER, B.C., April 10.—A vote of all the druggists of the province is to be taken during the next few days for the purpose of ascertaining the view of the trade as to whether in the event of prohibition being passed the druggists will sell liquor under the proposed legislation. If the druggists refuse the government may establish dispensaries for the special purpose of handling whatever trade there is in liquor.

MOTHER! DON'T TAKE CHANCES IF CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

If Cross, Feverish, Sick, Bilious, Clean Little Liver and Bowels

A laxative to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs" which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

IN MAKING
GRAPE-NUTS

honest whole wheat flour and malted barley are blended, made into dough, moulded into loaves, and baked. The loaves are then sliced and baked a second time—in all about twenty hours of thorough baking.

Grape-Nuts possesses all the rich, nourishing elements of the grains including the vital mineral salts so necessary for vigorous mental and physical activity. Many foods lack these essential elements—especially is this true of white bread and white flour products, because in making flour white most of the energizing mineral salts of the grain are thrown out in the milling process.

With Grape-Nuts it is different, for all the nutriment of the grain is retained. Then the long baking renders the food easily and quickly digestible.

Always ready to serve direct from its sanitary, tight-sealed carton, Grape-Nuts is in the form of granules of tender crispness that have a delicious, nut-like flavour. Four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts with a little cream alongside is a splendid, well-balanced part of any meal and gives a wonderful return in sturdy brain, nerve and muscle.

An Extravagant Doctor Or a Wise One?

An editorial Dr. Lydgate of "Middlemarch" may have been extravagant with his 2 horses, and servants and plate, and Policy of Life Insurance. USE COCOANUT OIL FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"Flower of the Gorse"

By LOUIS TRACY

The hymn ceased. From some more distant gathering came the strumming of a banjo in the latest Boulevard refrain. Ingersoll smiled at that. Not often might any man hear twenty centuries summed up so concisely. He was about to reenter the cottage when a woman, hatless, but with head and face veiled with a shawl of black lace, appeared indistinctly in the roadway. He knew instantly that it was his wife. Only two women in Pont Aven walked with such ease and elegance, and they were Yvonne and her mother.

A second later he heard the familiar creek of the garden gate. So she was coming in. He was utterly at a loss to account for this amazing intrusion. He had counted implicitly on his wife's sense of good breeding and fairness restraining her from any frenzied effort to undo the havoc of the past, and a spasm of anger shook him now because of this threatened invasion of his small domain. At any rate she should not have the hysterical satisfaction of placing him in a false position before Mere Piton and her guests, to say nothing of Yvonne and Tollemache.

He retreated into the deep shadow of a lofty retaining wall, whence he could see without being seen. If, as he expected, there was a commotion among the dancers when the unexpected visitor was announced, he would escape by way of the open hillside, and remain away during some hours. Then in the morning, Yvonne and he would end an intolerable state of things by leaving Pont Aven for some unknown refuge until Lorry told them that the coast was clear.

Thus do some men plan when beset by some unforseen difficulty. Be they wise or foolish, they seldom learn that in those crucial moments of life when events of real importance take place they are as straws caught in a whirlpool, and no more capable than straws of predetermined governance of their deeds and movements.

Ingersoll was barely hidden before he received a fresh surprise. His wife had not gone to the door. She was in the garden, and coming round to the back evidently meaning to look in on the revelers and remain unseen. She halted but a few paces short of the place where Ingersoll was standing and soon he knew that she was crying in a heartbroken way. Her very attitude, the care she took to restrain the sounds of her grief, and not become visible to an eye that chanced to look out through the open window, showed that she was in the depths of despair. By a rapid revulsion of feeling the man's heart ached for her. Strive as he might, and strong as were the dictates of the social laws that closed and bolted the door of reconciliation, he was tempted, or it may be divinely inspired, to make known his presence, and utter words of healing and forgiveness.

But the opportunity, no less than the impulse passed as quickly as it had risen.

The dancing had stopped. Evidently in response to some question of Yvonne's, Tollemache came to the window, and peered out.

"Ingersoll!" he cried.

There was no answer. The artist could not be detected in any event, and the change from a well lighted room to the external darkness temporarily blinded Lorry's sharp eyes, or he might have noted the slight, shrinking figure beneath one of the apple trees.

"He's not here," he said, speaking over his shoulder to Yvonne.

The girl came nearer. "I saw him go out," she persisted.

"Yes, of course, I saw him too. He stopped to light a cigar. Bet you he's gone for a stroll. You remember last year at this time he went to Julia's for half an hour."

That was an unfortunate recollection on Lorry's part. He was aware of it instantly, but Yvonne helped to slur it over by saying that she had no doubt "Dad" would soon return. Then the two rejoined their Breton friends.

Mrs. Carmac clearly meant to take no further risk of discovery. She hurried away. After a momentary indecision Ingersoll followed. His action was inexplicable, even to himself. It arose, perhaps, from a desire to make certain that his wife reached the hotel. Such a motive was at least comprehensible. It came within the bounds of that intelligence which regulates ordinary human affairs. But there is another subtler spirit essence which sends out through space its impalpable, invisible, yet compelling influences. Sometimes the tortured soul makes silent appeal for help, and finds response in some other heart whence aid is unsought and unsuspected.

Howsoever that may be, John Ingersoll followed his wife, and Pont Aven was soon in an uproar, when the news spread that while Monsieur Ingersoll was rescuing l'Americaine, Madame Carmac, from the waters of the harbor Peridot, easygoing, devil-may-care Peridot, was battering Rupert Fosdyke into a hardly recognisable corpse on the open road near the hotel.

In a village rumor of that sort seldom lies. Both these sensational statements were true; though the one became widely known far more speedily than the other. In fact, Peridot's crime had witnesses. A party of villagers, coming down the Toulitot, heard voices raised in altercation. Then there were sounds of a scuffle, and a tall man was seen to fall, whit a shorter man stooped over the prostrate body and struck blow after blow with an iron belaying pin.

The women screamed; the men ran forward to seize the would-be murderer. He offered no resistance, but said calmly:

"When one meets a viper one batters its head. It is the only safe thing to do, eh?"

He seemed to find comfort in the thought. He repeated it many times, in one form or another. When the police came, and a sergeant who happened to be a great friend of his had the miserable task of arresting him and charging him with murder,—for Rupert Fosdyke was dead; would have died under any one of those half-dozen fiercely vindictive blows,—Peridot was quite cheerful.

"Cre nom!" he cried. "It is not often one finds a snake hereabouts at Christmastime. This one made a mistake. It shouldn't have come to Pont Aven, where we wear stout sabots!"

Then he broke gaily into one of Albert Larrieu's Breton songs:

"Toc! toc! toc! toc!
Ce'est a Concarneau
Qu'on voit de belles filles,
Preches et gentilles,
Dans leur petits sabots!"

"Shut up, Peridot, for the sake of the good God!" muttered his frenid. "Come, Man! There's your mother looking out. She heard your voice!"

"Is that you, Jean Jacques?" came a shrill cry from a bent figure etched in the lighted rectangle of an open door in a cottage higher up the hill. "Time you were home and in bed!"

"Don't worry, Mother, I'm in good company," he shouted. "Here is the law on one side of me, and a dead viper on the other! I'll go straight to-night, never fear!"

Mere Larraidou saw her son walk off down the hill with his friend the sergeant. In pity the men who were lifting a corpse desisted from their gruesome labour till the door was closed again.

When Ingersoll carried the body of an insensible and half-drowned woman into Mere Piton's there was a rare stir.

By chance the lesser tragedy which took place in the river beneath the line of dwarfed oaks had passed unnoticed by the villagers. Greatly wondering, and wholly at a loss to account for his wife's behaviour, the artist had followed her into the main road, and kept her under close observation when she failed to cross the bridge and hurried along the narrow street leading to the harbour.

Once clear of the last mill, he could watch her from a greater distance, because the valley widens with the stream, and the hills are neither so high nor so precipitous. On and on she went, past Madame Marechale's cafe, past the triangular grass plot where roundabouts and swings and canvas theatres stand in the summer, past the jolly little Hotel Terminus, and along the picturesque Chemin du Hallage; which is not a carriage road, but a pleasant footpath, bordered on the one hand by pretty villas and on the other by the tidal stream, with here and there beneath the stunted trees a rustic seat overlooking the water.

At such an hour, long after midnight, the last pollard oak marks the Ultima Thule of Pont Aven. The nearest house in front is nearly a mile away, and reached only by a narrow track through the gorse.

Some vague terror caused Ingersoll to quicken his pace, and a few seconds later to break into a run. Perhaps his wife heard him, and, fearing interference, made up her mind to delay the great adventure not a moment longer. Uttering a wailing cry, she threw herself into the water. The tide was falling, and as the main stream travels close to the right bank at that point she was swept away as though some giant hand were waiting to clutch her.

Commending his soul to Heaven, Ingersoll raced ahead to a rocky plateau which, although submerged now, drove a broad and fairly level causeway far into the centre of the river. He was just in time. He saw a white face, a hand, whirling in the current. Plunging in, he grasped desperately at the place where he judged the body might be. Then began a fight, a life and death struggle against a relentless, overwhelming force. Yet somehow he conquered, and found himself with a limp body in his arms, wading knee deep in a tract of mud and slime.

Though slightly built and frail looking, and, owing to the worry and confinement of his recent life, rather out-of condition, once he had regained his breath he made light of carrying his wife to the cottage.

He could not tell why he brought her there, rather than to the hotel. He remembered afterward giving the matter some thought; but he was either deterred by the sight of so many people in the Place,—brought shither by the affrighting news of murder,—or by the notion that a further scandal might be averted if the unhappy woman were tended by those whom he and she could trust. None of Mere Piton's guests knew what Mrs. Carmac had been rescued from the estuary. They thought she had mistaken some byway, and fallen into the Aven, a quite possible accident to a stranger on a dark night.

So a second time Yvonne stripped her mother's slender form of its water-soaked garments, while Mere Piton loudly invoked the aid and commiseration of various saints—but did not forget to fill hot-water bottles and wrap them in flannel before applying them to the unconscious woman's benumbed body and feet. Dr. Garnier came, and shook his head, muttering of "shock," and "delayed reaction on the nervous system," and in the midst of all this turmoil and furtive fear of the worst consequences arrived Celeste, searching for her mistress, and almost incoherent with her story of Rupert Fosdyke's fate. He had arrived in the village by the half-past four train that afternoon, and after a long talk with Madame had dined alone. She was told that he went out shortly before midnight, and met Peridot, and was straightway beaten to death.

After some hours of horrible uncertainty Mrs. Carmac recovered sufficiently to speak.

"Where am I?" she muttered, staring about wildly.

"At home, Dear, with me," whispered Yvonne.

The dazed eyes slowly gathered consciousnes of Yvonne's presence. "Who took me out of the river?" she went on.

"The man who has loved you all his life, Dear," said the girl softly. She had the fixed belief now that her mother would surely die, and was resolved that her last hours should be made happy by knowledge of her husband's devotion.

"What! John saved me! Was it he who followed me?"

Plain Horse Sense.

If a merchant or a manufacturer is willing to spend good money for advertising, to ask you to try his store or his product, it stands to reason that he must have something worth offering. Otherwise you would not go back, or you would not again purchase the product, and the first sale would be the last. In that case advertising would NOT pay. It only pays when it brings continuous patronage, and to do that there must be real value given. That is the reason advertised stores or products are almost invariably good. It will pay you to patronize the advertisers.

HELD COURT IN A RIVER.

The Attorney Was in a Hurry, and the Judge Was Accommodating.

To act in a legal capacity while enjoying a morning swim—surely a unique record in the annals of law—once fell to the lot of Vice Chancellor Shadwell.

The then Duke of Newcastle had commenced to cut down the timber at Clumber in such a rapid and wholesale manner as to raise the anger of his eldest son, Lord Lincoln, who, finding expostulation useless, turned to the law and sought an injunction to restrain his father. Although it was long vacation, he ordered his solicitor to press matters forward, for the magnificent trees were falling at an alarming rate.

So up to town posted the attorney and had the affidavits drawn up the same night. The following morning he repaired to the vice chancellor's house on the banks of the Thames, to find on his arrival that the chancellor had gone for his morning's swim.

With exemplary presence of mind he chartered a boat and after a stiff pull came up with the judge and at once stated his case. Meanwhile the vice chancellor trod water and, on the injunction being formally applied for, granted it forthwith and resumed his swim.—Tit-Bits.

Almanacs in Pepys' Time.

The almanacs of Mr. Pepys' time were overwhelmingly of the prognostication order, and he enjoyed them much as we enjoy "Old Moore" now. Thus, on June 14, 1667, "we read and laughed at Lilly's prophecies this month in his 'Almanac' this year." The prophet certainly seems to have made a record bad shot. For, as the Lord Braybrooke notes, he observed: "The several junctions of this month do rather portend sea fights, wars, etc., than give hopes of peace, particularly the several configurations do very much threaten Holland with a most strange and unusual loss at sea, if they shall dare to fight his majesty's forces. * * * Strange news' off of Holland, as if all were in an uproar. We believe they are now in a sad and fearful condition." And June, 1667, saw the Dutch in the Medway.—London Express.

Ruskin on Doctors' Fees.

The problem of the doctor and his fee was admirably stated by Ruskin in his "Crown of Wild Olive." Writing of doctors, he said: "They like fees, no doubt—ought to like them—yet if they are brave and well educated the entire object of their lives is not fees. They, on the whole, desire to cure the sick and—if they are good doctors and the choice were fairly put to them—would rather cure their patient and lose their fee than kill him and get it. And so with all other brave and rightly trained men their work is first, their fee second—very important always, but still second."—London Standard.

Getting It Right.

It was on a street car in the city of Washington. Two colored women in cheaply gorgeous splendor were talking and one changed to mention a Mr. Jinks in her conversation.

"Excuse me," said the other woman, "but his name is not Jinks. It is Mr. Jenks."

"Oh, I sees," said the other woman complacently. "I sees that you puts de accent on de pronoun."

WEDDING CAKE HIS UNDOING

Gets Davis a Bride, Leads to Arrest and Bigamy Charge.

A wedding cake in the window of a bakeshop is blamed by nineteen year old Florence Smith of Rockville Centre, L.I., for the beginning of her marital trouble. She was employed in the shop on New Year's Day when Richard Davis asked whose cake it was. Remembering that it was Leap Year, she replied:

"I wish that it was ours."

"Do you mean that?" asked Davis.

"Certainly I do!" she said, so they were married that night and went to live at 626 Madison street, Brooklyn.

Mrs. Charlotte Davis, who claims to be the wife of Davis, saw him on the street and got a warrant for him on a charge of having deserted her a short time before her baby was born.

A PAMPERED POET.

Wordsworth Was Waited on Hand and Foot by His Family.

The somewhat doubtful pleasure of a visit to Wordsworth in his home at Rydal Mount, as described by Mrs. Kemble, is thus given by Mrs. L. D. Walford in "Memories of Victorian London:"

"It was not a pleasure—the Wordsworths were such queer people and so wrapped up in themselves. Even though you were their guests you were subjected in everything to the second fiddle to the man of the house. Round him everything revolved. You might have a poor breakfast, cold dishes, bad coffee—dinners were mostly bad at Rydal that were only for the infrequent general company—but the master's comfort was assiduously attended to—no different from any other poet friend. Mr. Southey, with whom I also stayed at the lakes. Southey was everybody's body, attending to every one, looking after every one himself, while in the Wordsworth household it was the custom for the head of the house to breakfast in bed, wife on one side, daughter on the other, both wholly absorbed in ministering to his wants, while every other person might go hang!

"And it was the same all through the day. You might as a stranger long to see all you could of those beautiful lakes and mountains, and almost any hosts would have taken care that you should, but not so the Wordsworths. If it were a dull day and rain impending there was a chance of his getting wet, and all the pros and cons were debated in your presence, but without any reference to your possible witness. If there were a cold wind they shook their heads with decision; he was never allowed to walk or drive in a cold wind.

"One was fairly sick of it, and I would not have stayed even the three days I did but that I was on my way to Greta Hall and did not like to incommode the Southeys."

BAGGAGE SMASHING.

An English View of American Methods and Our Big Trunks.

A fact to be sternly borne in mind, especially by those who voyage round the world, is that luggage which will serve for every other place on earth is too often useless on American railways. The wanton breakage of luggage goes on on every American railway. A trunk may travel round the world, on all the European railways, and in the hold of every kind of boat; it may be heaved in and out of campaigns, dumped about by bullock carts and knocked around by coolies and carriers, and arrive fit, let us say, San Francisco, as sound and serviceable as when it left the London terminus, and before it has journeyed half across the American continent be smashed and useless. Many thousands of pounds' worth of European travelers' luggage is thus gratuitously destroyed every year.

The American press, and in some degree the public, treat the "baggage smasher" as a joke, instead of being, as he is, an almost criminal survival of the barbarous days of America, one of the last points on which the United States fails of being a civilized country. To this abuse are due the monstrous, iron bound trunks which mark the average American traveler, a nightmare to the porters of less reckless countries, and for the transportation of which the owners on continental railways not seldom pay more than they do for their own first class tickets. Just as the struggle goes on between projectile and armor plate, so does the conflict between the American traveler to build luggage which will beat the baggage smasher, and of the baggage smasher by more and more strenuous smashing to beat the traveler and trunk builder.—London Times.

Caribou Horns.

The caribou, or water buffalo, of the Philippines often attain to great length of horn, one specimen, it is believed, standing quite without a rival in that respect. Measured along the curve of the horns, it is over twelve feet from one tip to the other. The spread of this animal's horns is greater than the width of several of the narrow lanes of the town—Iloilo—where his owner lives, and in consequence a brown line of scarred bark on the thickset bamboo hedges often marks the roads which this splendid old giant has traversed.—Wide World Magazine.

ASKED BUT ONE FAVOR.

And Mme. Carnot Shunned Politics While M. Carnot Was in Office.

Under the title "The Women of the Elysee" the Independance Belge in a recent issue relates a number of stories pertaining to the wives of various presidents of the French republic and gives to Mme. Sadi-Carnot the place of honor. She was twenty years old when she married the young engineer, who was then receiving a salary of $500 a year. She had been a student and had assisted her father, Dupon-Withe, in his economic researches.

"Although she exercised great influence over her husband," the writer says, "she never asked a political favor and never was known to meddle with affairs of state. Once in the course of her seven years' residence at the Elysee she asked a favor at the hands of a cabinet minister. Delcasse was secretary of colonial affairs, and after a dinner at the palace Mme. Carnot told him she had a favor to ask. He was surprised when he heard that she wanted some postage stamps for a poor boy collector in whom she had become interested.

"When after Carnot's tragic death a fund was created for a charity to bear his name Mme. Carnot gave a large sum and then sold the jewels which she had worn on state occasions and gave the proceeds also. The government's steps toward voting her a pension were halted by Mme. Carnot, who said she would accept none."

YOUR USELESS CHIN.

What Mechanical or Physiological Purpose Does It Serve?

"What is your chin for?" is the odd query raised by Sir Ray Lankester, the scientist, who says he is unable to find any mechanical or physiological purpose which the chin serves.

"The fact that modern races of mankind have chins and most primitive men whose remains have been found did not have them naturally leads to speculation as to why this is so," he said.

Dr. Forbes Ross agrees with Sir Ray that the chin is useless in itself, but gives the following explanation of the reason for it:

"All animals that browse have no chin at all. Their teeth slant forward to allow them to reach easily things that would otherwise be beyond their reach. The moment man gave up browsing on green things and became less and less an animal his teeth grew erect, and his jaw had to accommodate itself. Erect teeth prove man to be far removed from ruminants, and therefore a man with a well marked jaw is further removed from ruminants than a man without. That's why we are inclined to regard a man without a definite chin as possessing a mind rather like a sheep, without determination, without character."—New York American.

Changing a Name.

How a patronymic may be transformed out of all recognition is shown by an instance quoted by Cosmo Innes in his work on surnames:

"James Halfpenny, a Dublin citizen, throve in trade, and his children induced him in his later years to change the name, which they regarded as undignified. This he did chiefly by dropping the last letters. He was buried as James Halpen. The fortune of the family did not recede, and his son after renouncing retail dealing looked about for a euphonious name. He made no scruple of dropping the unnecessary "h," and, that being done, it was easy to go in for the Celtic rage, which Walter Scott had just raised to a great height. Consequently he who had run the streets as little Kenny Halfpenny came out at the assemblies of the day as Kenneth McAlpin."

Tom Thumb and the Iron Duke.

The Duke of Wellington called frequently to see the little general at his public levees. The first time he called the general was personating Napoleon Bonaparte, marching up and down the platform and apparently taking snuff in deep meditation. He was dressed in the well known uniform of the emperor. I introduced him to the Iron Duke, who inquired the subject of his meditations.

"I was thinking of the loss of the battle of Waterloo," was the little general's immediate reply.—P. T. Barnum's Life.

Pictures on the Rocks.

Art dealers who go to picture sales have a curious expression which they use when the bidding for a picture stops at a price much lower than it was expected to bring. They look at one another and remark, "It's on the rocks already." When they utter that cryptic remark a wreck usually follows.—New York Press.

The Caller.

"Mary, has any one called while I was out?"

"Yes, ma'am; Mr. Biggs was here."

"Mr. Biggs? I don't recall the name."

"No, ma'am; he called to see me, ma'am."—Grand Magazine.

SCARED THE LEOPARD.

A Blow With an Umbrella Routed the Savage Brute.

A remarkable encounter with a leopard is related in "Sport on the Nigeria," Mr. F. W. F. Fletcher:

"One April afternoon I had been over to see a friend about four miles away, and shortly after I left his bungalow on my return home it began to rain. As riding was uncomfortable in the wet, I got off my nag and gave him to the housekeeper. After a mile the rain stopped, and the sun came out, but I shut my umbrella and determined to walk the rest of the way home. Before me trotted five little terriers, behind me came the syce leading my horse. We reached a sharp bend in the road, and the doggies had disappeared round it when I saw the whole pack rushing back full tilt, with a leopard at the heels of the hindmost dog.

"Just as they reached me, the leopard seized Flirt, and at the same moment I 'landed' him a blow on the head with all my force with the umbrella, which flew into splinters. The leopard dropped the dog, but his impetus was so great that he could not stop, and, rushing past me, he knocked my syce clean off his legs. Then he jumped into the grass bordering the road.

"The change that came over our peaceful procession in that one instant was astounding. There stood I in the road, flabbergasted, with a broken umbrella handle in my hand; my syce was roaring blue murder on his back; my horse was bolting for home like a runaway engine, and my five little dogs were shivering at my feet. I picked up Flirt and carried her home. She was badly bitten in the neck, but frequent applications of phenyl soon made the wounds heal, and in a fortnight or so she was well again. But she was a changed dog. She would come out with me, but she always stuck to my heels, and nothing would induce her to enter the scrub or join the other dogs in a hunt of any kind."

Change of Climate Helped.

Some time ago the Virginia state line was altered so as to include a patch of territory heretofore belonging to North Carolina.

A section of the land thus transferred included a tumbledown cabin where dwelt an aged negro woman.

An inquisitive neighbor, calling to see how the negress enjoyed the idea of becoming a Virginian in her old age, began the conversation by asking:

"How is the rheumatism, auntie?"

"Bettah, praise de Lawd!" was the reply.

"And the neuralgia?"

"All gone. Clean departed!"

"And the stiff knee?"

"Frisky as a lil' colt!"

"Why, auntie, how on earth do you happen to be so much better all of a sudden?"

"Well, miss," replied the auntie proudly, "Ah always done heah dat Virginny climate's a heap healthiah'n de climate of No'th Ca'lina. Ah reckon dat sho' 'counts fo' me change fo' de bettah."—Detroit Free Press.

When Bees Beat Troops.

It is on record that a swarm of bees as weapons of war were used not once, but twice, and with the best possible effect. When Themiseyra, in Pontus, was besieged by Lucullus, the Romans employed turrets, built mounds and made huge mines beneath the city. While they were creating the mines the people of Themiseyra dug down through the earth to the mines and, cast in upon the Roman workers bears and other wild animals, together with a swarm of bees. History repeated itself in England when the Danes and Norwegians made their attack upon Chester about ten centuries since. The town was held by the Saxons and some Gallic allies, who tried stones and boiling water upon the besiegers without effect. As a last resource they collected all the beehives and upset them into the enemy's camp beneath the city wall. This had the effect of making things "hum," so to speak, and it is recorded that the enemy were so badly stung that they could move neither arms nor legs.

BUILDING UP A WORD.

It Appears to Be Something of a Fine Art in Germany.

The following is the authentic history of a formidable German word:

Among the Hottentots (in German, Hottentotten) many marsupials are found. The works on natural history do not reveal this fact, but the story is as good as if they did.

Whenever the marsupials are caught they are put into a cage, there known as Kotter, provided with a cover to keep out the rain (the cover is called in German Lattengitter). The cage then becomes known as Lattengitterwetterkotter, and the marsupial after his imprisonment in one of them is a Lattengitterwetterkofferbeuteiratte.

One day an assassin (in German, Attentater) was arrested for an attempt on the life of a Hottentot woman, the mother of two stuttering and stupid children, who was called on this account Hottentottenstrottertrottelmutter. The malefactor was confined in a marsupial's cage, whence he escaped. He was recaptured by a Hottentot, who put him in a safe place and came to the chief of the nearest German South African station and said, with beaming eyes, for he thought he had mastered the German tongue:

"I have captured the Beuteiratte."

"What Beuteiratte?" asked the chief.

"We have several."

"The Attentaterlattengitterwetterkotterbeuteiratte."

"But of which Attentater are you speaking?"

"Of the Hottentottenstrottertrottelmutterattentater."

"Ah! Then why do you not at once say the Hottentottenstrottertrottelmutterlittentaterlaftengitterwetterkotterbeuteiratte?"

Whereupon, and naturally, the Hottentot fled in dismay.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Tokyo's Pool of Tears.

One spot in Japan shunned by all is the "Pool of Tears," a little pond on the execution ground of an old prison at Tokyo. It never dries, and even the hottest weather seems to have little effect upon it. Since the removal of the prison no buildings have been erected on the site occupying the brow of a hill. By night it is supposed to be haunted by the ghosts of the many prison victims, and no person, it is related, is bold enough to venture that way after dark. In the daytime the hill is the resort of students who seek fresh air and exercise.—Argonaut.

He Got It From Pa And Ma.

Little Jack was struggling through his home lessons, and there were many signs of woe and perplexity written on his impish young face.

"Ma," he began in rather a quavering voice, "what does heredity mean?"

Mother wasn't quite sure herself, but she was sufficiently artful not to say so outright, so she answered vaguely:

"Well, John, it's—er—it's something to do with what you get from your father or me."

Little Jack pondered deeply for a few moments. Suddenly a look of knowledge, the outcome of past unhappy experiences, appeared on his countenance.

"Then is whipping heredity, ma?" he asked.

Save on Soap

It's a waste of good money to buy 5 cent cakes of soap, when a 15 cent bar of N.P. contains more soap—and far better soap—than 4 or 5 of the 5¢ cakes. Prove this on the scales! 15¢ the big bar.

Bovril gives Strength to resist Colds

It takes a joint of Beef to make a bottle of Bovril.

An Anodyne.

"An anodyne," patiently explained a well known physician to a woman patient, "is a delusion. And medicine that soothes pain has this drawback—it relieves the attack, but the next attack comes on much sooner. Understand, I'll cure your headache, but you're bound to have another headache in a day or two."

The woman pondered a bit.

"I know just what you mean, doctor," she said. "I've noticed it about Henry, my husband, you know. A doctor prescribed whisky for his cough. My husband says it cured his cough quicker than anything else ever did, but I notice that he gets a new cough almost every week now."—Louisville Times.

Wasted Effort.

"Now, waiter," said the new customer in a certain restaurant of the less fashionable type, "I want an oyster stew, and I want you to give the cook particular directions. The milk must be carefully heated first—just short of boiling. Then the oysters must be added without the juice. That must not be put in until the seasoning is added. As for the oysters, I want Mill Ponds. Use the best milk and gilt edged creamery butter. Now, do you think you understand?" "Yessir," said the waiter. And he went to the kitchen wicket and yelled, "I'ut on one!"—Newark Star.

SINGING CRICKETS.

They Are Kept in Cages Like Canary Birds in Japan.

Selling crickets is a lucrative business in Japan, where the insects are raised for their songs and kept in cages like canary birds. In Tokyo there are two wholesale merchants who send their agents into the streets of the large cities. The insects are carried in little bamboo cages. A good seller clears approximately from 90 cents to a dollar a day. An insect valued for its music brings from 2 to 7 cents. The Kusa hibari is the most valuable of all the songsters, but the common cricket and the grasshopper are considered excellent singers.

The singers are collected from the fields in September, before laying time. They are taken from the grass and shut up in glass jars. Soon after they are imprisoned the females lay their eggs and die almost immediately afterward. The jars containing them are kept in a temperature of 90 degrees C.

The young come forth in March.

The loss of eggs is about 50 per cent. The male is the singer. He only is an object of commerce, and from a hundred eggs the cultivator, despite all his care, has only fifty salable insects. The lot of the locust is a martyrdom from birth to death. The locust is the toy of the Japanese child. He is caught on bamboo twigs rubbed with a gluey substance and tormented according to the ignorance or the cruelty of his keeper. The life of the singing insect never exceeds a term of five weeks.—Harper's Weekly.

FISH AND THEIR FOOD.

Queer Ways by Which Some of the Toothless Species Get a Meal.

The curious ways in which fishes eat form quite a study. Some fishes have teeth and some have none at all. In some the teeth are found upon the tongue, in some in the throat and in some in the stomach. Some draw in their food by suction; the sturgeon is one of this class. The jellyfish absorbs its food by wrapping its body around the prey it covets. The starfish fastens itself to its victim, turns its stomach wrong side out and engulfs its dinner without the formality of swallowing it through a mouth first.

So there are all sorts of methods for those regularly toothless, and the fishes which have teeth show almost as great a diversity in the number, style and arrangement of them. The ray or skate "has a mouth set transversely across its head, the jaws working with a rolling motion like two hands set back to back. In the jaws are three rows of flat teeth, set like a mosaic pavement, and between these rolling jaws the fish crushes oysters and other mollusks like so many nuts."

The carp's teeth are set back in the pharynx, so that it actually masticates its food in its throat, while the sea urchin has five teeth surrounding its stomach and working with a peculiar centralized motion, which makes them do as good service as if they numbered hundreds.—Harper's Young People.

The Mystic Number Five.

Five is the great sacred Chinese number. There are five virtues, five colors (yellow, white, green, red and black), five household gods, five planets (Saturn, Venus, Jupiter, Mars and Mercury), five ranks of nobility, five tastes, five cardinal points (the middle, east, west, south and north respectively) and five tones.

Great Britain's Forests.

Of the total area of Ireland only about 1.5 per cent is wooded, while forests cover 5.3 per cent of England, 4.5 per cent of Scotland and 3.9 per cent of Wales.

BREAKING THE BANK.

A Feat That Is No Longer Possible at Monte Carlo.

Among the classic system players who gained great sums at Monte Carlo was Charles Wells, adventurer and inventor, who went to Monte Carlo with the money of other people, to "win or lose it all" in testing his great idea. He played, also on the simple chances, a modification of the famous method of D'Alembert, the great mathematician. Wells began with a stake of ten units, decreasing to nine if he won, but increasing to eleven if he lost. His game was a kind of swinging of the pendulum, going up one way to twenty units and the other down to one.

For a time he contrived to prosper so sensationally that the tables at which he played had occasionally to stop for a few minutes until more money was brought. This was "breaking the bank" and gained Wells the honor of becoming the hero of a popular music hall song.

Nowadays, however, no successful player can have the thrilling joy of breaking the bank. As soon as it is seen that one gambler or more may reduce the funds of a table to a low ebb more money is unostentatiously brought by one of the footmen, and play never stops for an instant.

Charles Wells figured in the criminal courts of Paris, where he boasted he had won $400,000 from the casino.—C. M. Williamson in McClure's Magazine.

In Ashanti many families are forbidden the use of certain meats. In like manner others are forbidden to wear clothes of a certain color.

The Foxglove.

The flowers of the foxglove are like the fingers of a glove. The name of foxglove is said to be a corruption of "folk's glove" or "fairy's glove."

The word textile means any kind of woven fabric made from wool, cotton, silk, flax, hemp, ramie, goat, camel's hair and beaver, or the filaments drawn out of leaves, gold, or any other metal, all of which are webs formed of textiles.

Thin People Gained Weight Quickly

By Following this Simple Suggestion

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy "stay there" flesh should try eating a little Sargol with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good test worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look or feel or what your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and many thin men and women we believe can easily add from five to eight pounds in the first fourteen days by following this simple directions. And best of all, the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but simply aids your food it aims to turn the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten into rich, ripe fat producing nourishment for the tissues and blood—prepares it in an easily assimilated form which the blood can readily accept. Much of this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Sargol works to stop the waste and do it quickly and to make the fat producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive. All the leading druggists in this vicinity sell it in large boxes—forty tablets to a package—on a guarantee of weight increase or money back as found in each large box.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00 to the Sargol Laboratories, 74 St. Augustine St., Montreal, Quebec, and a complete sixty days' treatment will be sent you postpaid.

THE DUCKING STOOL.

Betsy Didn't Think It a "Pleasant Mode" of Punishment.

In colonial days hog stealing was considered one of the most serious of crimes. At the first offense the thief's ears were slit, at the second his ears were nailed to a pillory, and at the third he suffered death "without benefit of clergy."

Deceitful bakers and careless fish dealers had to "lose their ears," while he who spoke detracting words had his tongue bored by a bodkin.

A Frenchman traveling in America in 1790 describes the ducking stool as a "pleasant mode" of punishing a scolding woman.

In 1685 Thomas Hartley of Virginia wrote of his witnessing the execution of a ducking stool sentence:

"Day before yesterday at 2 of ye Clock, I saw this punishment given to one Betsey Walker, who by ye violence of her tongue made her house and her neighborhood uncomfortable. They had a machine for ye purpose, yt belong to ye Parish. It had already been used three times this summer.

"Ye Woman was allowed to go under ye water for ye space of ½ minute. Betsey had a stout stomache and would not yield until she had been under five times. Then she cried piteously. Then they drew back ye Machine, untied ye Ropes and let her walk home a hopefully penitent woman."

ROTHSCHILD AS A BEGGAR.

The Sequel to Baron James' Posing as an Artist's Model.

Many stories, with or without good foundation, are told of the Rothschild family. In a book, "The Romance of the Rothschilds," by Ignatius Balla, one is related of Baron James Rothschild, who looked after the interests of the firm in Paris. The famous painter, Eugene Delacroix, who was struck with the features of Baron Rothschild, decided that he would like to have the baron for a model dressed in beggar's rags.

The baron liked the idea and consented. On the following day he went to the painter's studio attired in costume proper to his part, and when he knocked one of the artist's pupils opened the door. He looked compassionately at the "poor beggar" and gave him a coin or two. He was not a little astonished when on the following day a servant of Baron Rothschild handed him the following letter:

Dear Sir—You will find inclosed the capital which you handed me at the door of M. Delacroix's studio, with the interest and compound interest on it, a sum of 16,000 francs. You can cash the check at my bank in the Rue Laffite whenever you like. BARON JAMES ROTHSCHILD.

It's a good story, and we have no doubt it is true.—Westminster Gazette.

Camels and Dromedaries.

No matter to what extent the railway may be constructed in certain parts of the world, the camel will probably never cease to be the principal means of transportation in the desert, over the greater portion of Egypt and the Sudan.

The desert would, of course, be absolutely impossible without this animal. He was created for it and thrives in it better than anywhere else. His broad, soft foot enables him to traverse deep sands where the horse would sink to its knees and quickly perish.

The camel lives on almost nothing, the scanty herbage of the desert and the twigs of the thorny mimosa being his favorite food; but, as everyone knows, his most valuable quality in this relation is his ability to travel many days during the fiercest days of summer without drinking.

The African camel is a native of Arabia and has only one hump.

The camel and the dromedary differ only in breed, just as the draught horse differs from the racer. The burden camel, called gamal by the Arabs, never changes his regular walk of two and a half miles an hour under a load which never exceeds 300 pounds for a long journey, for his strength must be estimated by what he can carry when exhausted by hardship and privation.

The dromedary, or riding camel, is much swifter. With no other load than his rider, a bag of bread, dates, and a skin of water, he can accomplish 100 miles a day in an emergency.

Voltaire's Poser.

Voltaire's test to ascertain the sense of responsibility of an individual was to ask him to suppose that he had in front of him a button. The effect of pushing the button would be to obtain one's dearest wish—love, fame, wealth, power, or what not—and at the same time to cause the death of an unknown Chinaman? What would he do?

BRONCHITIS

COMES FROM A

NEGLECTED COLD.

Bronchitis starts with a short, painful, dry cough, accompanied with rapid wheezing, and a feeling of oppression or tightness through the chest. At first the expectoration is a light color but as the trouble progresses the phlegm arising from the bronchial tubes becomes of a yellowish or greenish color, and is very often of a stringy nature.

Bronchitis is usually at its worst in the morning on account of the phlegm becoming lodged in the bronchial tubes during the night, and it very often takes some time coughing and gagging before you can get the throat clear of the phlegm.

When this happens you may be sure that if the bronchitis is not attended to immediately it will sooner or later develop into pneumonia, or some other more serious lung trouble.

The best remedy for to cure the cold is DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

Mrs. Ray Conner, Greenwood, Ont., writes: "I must tell you what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. Whenever I got a cold I would be troubled with bronchitis, and sometimes I would almost choke to death. After taking two bottles of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup I was cured."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is 25c and 50c. per bottle. See that you get the genuine.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SEMI-PRINCESS SLIP.

By Anabel Worthington.

7855

A princess slip is most worn because it is most in the fashion to-day, its popularity being due mainly to the vogue of the one-piece dress; they are partners, we may say. Of course there are many women who always make their underwear, and they are quick to see the good points in a pattern because of experience with patterns. To those who are always providing themselves a dainty undergarment that will fit the figure and outlive a bought one, we suggest the one illustrated in No 7,855. This semi-princess slip has the corset cover in one piece. It is made of flouncing, to which this design admirably lends itself. Shoulder straps of beading through which wide ribbon is run, finishing in a perfect bow on the shoulder, hold the garment in place. In like manner, the waistline fulness is confined and the three-gored petticoat joined; the deep flounce on the skirt is outlined with ribbon run beading also, finishing a handsome slip. If preferred, the same pattern may be followed in the making up with one material, the style of the illustrations showing the result.

Pattern is cut in sizes 34 to 42 inches bust measure.

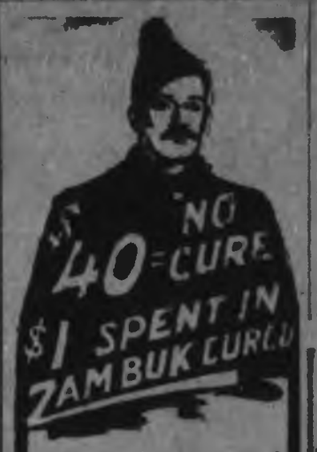
To make in size 36 requires 1¾ yards material 36 inches wide, 2¼ yards flouncing if 16 inches wide, 3½ yards beading and 3½ yards of ribbon. In making of one material in the same size, one will require of 36 inch material and 2 yards insertion.

To obtain the pattern, send 20 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.



This was the experience of Pte. C. Oakley of the 96th Highlanders, Saskatoon. He writes:

"While employed in a stone yard, I cut my leg very badly. I immediately went to a doctor who sewed up the wound and attended me for five weeks, during which time I was obliged to give up my work.

At the end of that time the wound had not healed, and the doctor advised me to go to hospital. As the doctor's charge was $40, and he had done me absolutely no good, I determined to try something on my own account, and hearing Zam-Buk highly recommended, I commenced using it. In two weeks the wound had so healed that I was able to return to my work and perseverance resulted in a complete cure. One dollar's worth of Zam-Buk did what a forty-dollar treatment had failed to do! I shall never be without Zam-Buk again—Am taking a supply with me to the front, and think every other soldier should do the same."

Profit by others' experience, and when you sustain an injury, apply Zam-Buk in the first place, and save yourself needless suffering and expense.

Zam-Buk is equally good for burns, bruises, and all other injuries; also for eczema, ulcers, abscesses, eruptions, boils, piles, running sores and blood-poisoning. Best for children's cuts. All druggists 50c. box, 3 for $1.25, or direct from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Send 1c. stamp and trial box will be mailed you.

ZAM-BUK

English and Irish Glass.

Each country has its distinctive types of glass, but it requires special and well trained perception to tell the difference between some of the English and Irish specimens of the last century and the careful copies which are now being made of them in European factories. The latter, however, can generally be known by their greater whiteness and lightness of weight. Waterford glass is now the most sought after by collectors, but equally beautiful pieces were made in the Cork and Dublin glass houses. Glassmaking can be traced back for about 2,300 years to the people who lived on the eastern shores of the Mediterranean, but its origin has never really been fixed. Its ingredients are still the same, and their proportions seem to have varied very little. Silica and an alkali—that is, quartz or flint and potash or soda—are still used. —Argonaut.

You Saw Me.

A tramp stopped at a prosperous looking country house and asked for food.

"Certainly you may have it," replied the owner, whom he happened to address, "and if you will saw some wood I will give you, besides, 50 cents. You might be at it while the breakfast is being prepared." And he led the tramp to the wood pile.

Presently, when the meal was ready, he went to call the tramp, but found he had disappeared. Near the wood pile fluttered a little white paper. He picked it up and read the scrawled words:

"Just tell them that you saw me, but you didn't see me saw."—New York Times.

Fierce Battle Northwest of Verdun

Germans Have Lost 200,000 in Big Battle

Terrible Fighting On Six Mile Front Northwest of Verdun

Under Tremendous Hammer Blows the French Line is Holding Firm---Battle Grows More Violent as if it is to Culminate in a Grand Assault on Both Banks of Meuse ---20,000 Germans Killed or Wounded in First 48 Hours of New Struggle.

THE FRENCH LOSSES ALSO VERY HEAVY

LONDON, April 11.—Under the most tremendous hammer blows in the history of the world, the French line is holding firm in the great battle raging about Verdun. Wave after wave of German grey coats are rolling up against the French barricades on the six-mile front north-west of Verdun. Bursting shell storms have shattered the trenches, parapets and redoubts of the defenders. The French are driving back the German legions in savage hand to hand fighting on the southern banks of Forge's Brook. Beginning with heavy infantry attacks delivered last Saturday, the battle has hourly grown more violent, as if it is about to culminate in a grand assault on both banks of the Meuse. "If the French hold them this time, Verdun is saved beyond doubt," said an English authority to-day. Twenty thousand Germans were killed or disabled in the first forty-eight hours of the new Verdun attack, Paris reported to-day. It is admitted that the French losses have been very heavy.

GERMANS REPULSED WITH HEAVY LOSSES

French Official Report To-day States That Liquid Fire Was Used in Several Attacks—Foe Captured Small Fragments of French Trenches on Ridge, East of Deadman's Hill.

PARIS, April 11.—(French Official).—Attacking Dead Man's Hill with liquid fire, the Germans captured small fragments of French trenches in furious fighting last night, but at every other point in the fighting were repulsed. The Germans debouched from Crows' Wood, the War Office stated, but were quickly caught under hot artillery and infantry fire and routed. The captured trench portions were on the ridge east of Dead Man's Hill. In a bloody fight on the east bank of the Meuse, the Germans were checked, with heavy losses, when they attempted to recapture the trenches taken by the French south of Douaumont. Liquid fire was also brought into play in this attack, but the German ranks were torn by the French artillery. A violent bombardment continued last night in the region of Douaumont and the village of Vaux. Artillery exchanges of considerable violence also occurred in the Woevre region.

The Third German Army Corps alone has lost 22,000 men, or about half of its original number. The Eighteenth German Corps has lost 17,000 men in the recent attack on Vaux Village. The Sixteenth and Nineteenth German regiments lost 60 per cent. of their forces in killed or wounded. The Eleventh Division lost 50 per cent. in attacking Avocourt.

GERMAN LOSSES HAVE REACHED 200,000 MARK

Examiner Special:

PARIS, April 11.—The German losses in the Verdun battle have now reached two hundred thousand, the War Office estimated in an official statement to-day.

GERMANS BITTER OVER THE U. S. ATTITUDE

Special to the Examiner:

BERLIN, April 11. — Much bitterness has been caused here by reports that Americans are questioning the honour of the German Government, without waiting for a presentation of all the facts, in the Sussex and other cases. The Berlin newspaper to-day reprinted several American newspaper editorials, as cabled here from English sources. These editorials charged that Germany has violated the pledges given by Ambassador Bernstorff. The final draft of the German reply to President Wilson's inquiries regarding the Sussex and the our freighters, has been approved by Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg and Admiral Von Holtzendorff. It will be transmitted to Ambassador Gerard for forwarding to Washington within a few hours.

WOUNDED AT YPRES IS LIEUTENANT IN SURREY REGIMENT

Gerald Ellis of 57th Regt. Peterboro' Received a Gunshot Wound in Left Shoulder

Lieut. H. Ellis, R.N., inspector for Ontario of naval munition contracts who was in the city to-day, stated that his brother, W. G. B. Ellis, is now a lieutenant in the 2nd Royal West Surreys. The latter was a "non-com" in the 57th Regiment and upon the outbreak of war enlisted in the first contingent. He was one of the Peterborough men wounded at Ypres, having been shot through the left shoulder. After months of convalescence he was able to report for duty and secured a commission in the Surrey regiment. By the way, Lieut. Ellis is a native of Richmond, in Surrey country, and his home is there. He is now in the reserve battalion of the Royal West Surreys. Prior to his enlistment in Peterborough he was for a time engaged in the business office of the Review.

Roman Meal is Granulated For a Purpose.

This purpose is defeated if it is stirred while cooking porridge. Roman Meal is cut into little granules, so that it will mix thoroughly and at once with the digestive juices. It cannot then ferment and become acid or produce indigestion, and it will not pack in the bowel and cause constipation. If cooked properly, without stirring, in a double boiler, or a boiler set in a basin of water, it is the most delicious porridge known. It's cooling, strengthening and positively relieves constipation. Ask your doctor. Try also the ready-cooked form known as Roman Meal Nuggets.

MANY POSITIONS FOR THE RETURNED SOLDIERS

Advice comes to the Local Branch of the Soldiers' Aid Commission, at the office of the Patriotic Fund, that a large number of military clerks will be required for the concentration camps this coming summer.

In addition to these vacancies there are positions open for returned soldiers at St. George, Ont., such as experienced bench carpenters, millwrights and men acquainted with building and contracting. Also several men capable of setting up and erecting farm machinery. Vacancies at Galt, Ont., include brass polishers, brass moulders, monitor lathe hands, and on plumbers' supplies.

Men cannot be at present secured for these industries, but it may be that suitable men can be found among those returning or who have been discharged. Numbers of men seem to be unable to pass medical inspection, but such hindrance will not interfere with civil occupations. Any who wish to secure a place will call at the Patriotic Fund Office and the applications will be forwarded promptly.

PETERBORO' MEMBERS OF MOUNTED RIFLES ARE INVALIDED HOME

Ptes. McLaughlin and Scullie Arrived Last Evening From Overseas---59th Battalion is Safe in Old Country Welcome News For Peterboro' People Geneaally---Today's Orders and General Military News.

Ptes. W. McLaughlin and W. E. Scullie, two Peterborough members of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, reached Peterborough last evening, having been invalided home. Pte. McLaughlin did not reach the firing line, being stricken with rheumatism at Bramshott Camp, which rendered him unfit for service. Pte. Scullie was at the front and was wounded. Mayor Duffus and Lt.-Col. Walker met the two returned soldiers at the G. T. R. station at 5.30 o'clock and welcomed them home. Pte. Scullie resides on Patterson street and Pte. McLaughlin, with his brother, on Water Street, opposite the market.

PROMOTIONS.

Lieut. J. H. Eastwood 57th Regt., 93rd Battalion, C.E.F. is promoted to the rank of captain in the O.E.F. dating from April the 4th, in accordance with Divisional Orders No. 354 on the 10th inst.

ESTABLISHMENT—Married—

No. 196542—Pte P. C. White has permission to get married and is placed on the married establishment of the 93rd O.S. Battalion from the 8th inst.

CLOTHING—

Extract from Divisional Orders No. 345 reads as follows:

It is published for the information of all concerned that many complaints are being received by the Militia Department to the effect that proper supervision is not being given to the fitting of clothing, etc., for troops. From England there comes a report that in a large number of cases the jacket is so tight that the sweater coat cannot be worn beneath—consequently a new jacket has to be provided. It is pointed out that Officers Commanding, C.E.F. units should take greater care and exercise greater supervision to the fitting of jackets and see that they are large enough to permit of the sweater jacket being worn underneath in comfort. Unless this supervision is actively carried out Commanding Officers may find this clothing charged back against their units.

Boots, Ankle: Here again there is lack of proper supervision in the fitting of the men; this is unquestionably the most important duty of the company and junior officers of a unit. Where a proper interest is taken in fitting men with boots foot trouble is quite unknown. Every man enlisted should be fitted in the pregence of an officer. In infantry the Sergt. Shoemaker should also be present. Where this supervision exercised there will be little complaint about the boots. Upon investigation the vast majority of these complaints are due to lack of proper supervision on the first fitting of the men. This is strongly impressed on all officers commanding units.

POSTINGS—

Capt. J. H. Eastwood is posted to B. Co., as second in command dating from the 11th inst.

EQUIPMENT—

It has been brought to the Commanding officer's notice that a quantity of equipment is being held in the Quartermaster's stores. Officers Commanding companies will, kindly draw this and have it issued and taken into use by the men under their command.

J. F. R. MUNRO, Captain, Adjutant 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

The news of the safe arrival in England of the Olympic carrying the 59th Battalion, C.E.F., and the Empress of Britain with the 74th, 75th and other units on board will be especially grateful in view of the wild rumours that were circulated several days ago that a vessel carrying several of these battalions had been sunk. Where the report started is unknown, but it was general in many parts of Canada and caused much uneasiness. The news of the arrival of the 59th will set at rest the anxiety in the hearts of the citizens of Peterborough, as many local boys were with the 59th, including Capt. Maurice Park, Lieut. Rackham, Bandmaster Peryer and many bandsmen, non coms. and men.

The Hamilton Spectator says: Lieut. Col E. E. W. Moore, who returned from England a few days ago on account of the illness and subsequent death of his brother, Col. A. H. Moore, spoke to-day in an interesting manner of the work being done at the front by the Canadians, and more particularly with reference to the pre-

RELIEF FORCE STILL HELD UP BY THE TURKS

An Attempt to Get Through the Enemy Lines and Rescue British Force at Kut-El-Mara Failed Says General Lake

LONDON, April 10.—At dawn Sunday the British relief force attempting to form a junction with General Townsend's beleaguered force at Kut-el-Amara delivered an attack on the Turkish position at Sannayyat, the last remaining Ottoman defences below the Kut, but failed to get through the enemy's lines, the floods, which are extending, hampering the British. After the capture of the Felahie positions, extensive preparations were made by Sir George Gorringe for the assault on the Sannayyat defences, which are about three miles beyond Felahie, and a second success was hoped for, although the floods had curtailed the frontage on which the attack could be delivered.

The Mesopotamia statement, given out this evening by the Official Press Bureau, says:

"No attack on Sannayyat was made on April 6 as reported in the Turkish communication of April 10.

"Sir Percy Lake reports that an attack made at dawn on the 9th failed to get through the enemy's lines. The operations were much hampered by floods, which are extending."

Disappointment in London.

Failure of the British troops to penetrate the Turkish positions at Sannayyat will come as a disappointment to the British public, which had hoped after the recent victory at Umm-el-Hannah that success would speedily attend the operations for the relief of Gen. Townsend and his men besieged in Kut-el-Amara.

The check of the British operations, according to the official despatch, was due to the floods, which are rapidly extending and seriously hampering the British movements. The relieving force consists of two divisions, one under Lieut.-Gen. Gorringe, in chief command on the left bank of the Tigris, and the other under Gen. Keary, on the right bank. It is supposed there is another division in reserve, but of this nothing is officially known.

The Sannayyat position extends about two miles on either bank of the Tigris, the left bank resting on the Suwekie marsh and the right flank on the nameless marshy ground stretching twelve miles between Orak and Essinn. Apparently the Turkish position at Sannayyat has been strongly reinforced since the Turkish defeat at Umm-el-Hannah.

Even should Gen. Gorringe succeed in driving the Turks from Sannayyat, there is still another strong Turkish position at Essinn, both flanks of which are protected by water defences, before reaching Kut-el-Amara. Gen. Gorringe has had great experience in river warfare. He was with Kitchener in the famous advance to Khartoum, but owing to the fact that the Turkish positions are only vulnerable to frontal attack, intense anxiety prevails in England, which is being compared to the anxious period while waiting the relief of Ladysmith during the Boer War.

Crown Prince Brought to a Halt on Every Sector Except Near Dead-man's Hill—French Are Striking Fierce Blows.

BATTLE IS TERRIFIC

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 11. — Furious French counter attacks and shocked artillery fire are checking the mighty drive launched by the Germans on the northern fronts at Verdun. The French are striking blows rivalling in power the tremendous smashes directed by the Crown Prince against Dead Man's Hill, and the positions northwest of Verdun. The Crown Prince has been brought to a complete halt on every sector excepting on the barren northeastern ridge of Dead Man's Hill. Official statements from both the German and French War Office this afternoon indicated that the stubborn French resistance is breaking the power of the German offensive. A terrific battle is still going on northwest of Verdun, but the fighting has narrowed to the three mile front of Dead Man's Hill.

Debouching along the Chattencourt road the French attacked the German flank with such viciousness that the German assault against Dead Man's Hill was almost completely checked.

Imprisoned at Lift Lock

On Sunday, while a number of young people, armed with cameras, were exploring around the lift lock, a dozen or so made their way down one of the passage ways which is equipped with an iron gate. After they got inside, several members of the 93rd Battalion, perhaps imagining they had nailed a bunch of spies, slammed the door shut. It happened to be fitted with a spring lock and the party were imprisoned. There was a long search for a caretaker with a key and the party were just a little angry when they finally got out.

TRUE TO BELGIUM.

The preservation of the integrity and independence of Belgium was what put Britain into the war, is what keeps her there. And she has added allies for the same object. Great Britain, France and Russia has agreed to guarantee to Belgium the integrity of Belgium's African colony,— the Belgian Congo. When we have the big nations standing by the little nations we have demonstrated an expression of one of the principles of democracy, the right of the weaker nations to national integrity and autonomy. Democracy properly applied means the recognition of the rights o the individual as against the menace of the state. In Germany the state is everything and the individual nothing but a tool of the state. In Britain the rights of the individual generously conceded, collectively constitute the right of the state. This is the principle that is now being tried in the white-hot furnace o this terrible war. Autocratic tyranny when this war is over and the victory won, will have had its fangs drawn and its claws clipped.

ONLY WANT THE TRUTH.

The Ottawa Journal points out that the investigation into the Kyte charges are "not so limited as the Opposition would probably like t have the country believe." It adds that the order-in-council creating the Royal Commission provides for investigation of the Kyte charges and "whatever other matters may be brought to the attention of the government." Here rests the point. It is to be remembered that the reference to the Commission of "whatever other charges" rests solely with the government, which can, if it will, refer such "whatever other matters" to the Commission by order-in-council. But will the government do this without a good deal of urging and prodding, similar to that which has had to be employed in respect of other charges. The government would have much more fully demonstrated the bona fides of its desire—if it has any—to see the truth brought out, by including in the Royal Commission full power to investigate everything that has the least shady tone. Such inclusion seems to be necessary in view of the fact that the government has not heretofore shown any extravagant desire to get at the bottom facts of the disastrous manipulation of the work of furnishing war supplies. Nobody wants any more than the truth.

DRASTIC PUNISHMENT.

The Toronto News is evidently not an admirer of Hon. Andy Broder, called by some of his colleagues in Parliament, the Abram Lincoln of Canada. While Mr. Broder denounces piratical profiteering in the manipulation of munitions contracts, The News defends it. While Mr. Broder demands investigation to the nth, The News defends a little surface treatment of the ulcer. There is no sympathy between his points of view, between these two standards of national honesty and patriotism. The News, in obedience to its cult, is denouncing those who unearth wrongdoing, furnish prima facie evidence of it, and demands that they be hanged side by side with the profiteers from munition contracts. That is, The News would hang profiteers and alongside them the men who took and take the initial steps to bring the criminals to justice. The organ or the grinder of the organ, condemns the "partizan miscreants" whose offence is no greater than that of the biggest-souled man of the Conservative party who thinks enough of the charges brought by these same "partizan miscreants" to use them as a basis of demand for full, not perfunctory, investigation.

Is Hon. Andrew Broder a "partizan miscreant," who should be hanged alongside the profiteers The News wants brought to the rope?

The organ claims that Sir Robert Borden and the Government are obsessed with a deadly anxiety to expose wrong-doing. It says:

"Neither the Liberals in Parliament, nor the Liberal press, ever insisted that the lid should be removed as Conservatives from Sir Robert Bordan down, and the Conservative press have done.

The News must have an active and inventive mind to have conceived this extraordinary concatenation and contrast of "imaginative inaccuracies." By the way its phraseology is unfortunate—"Conservatives in Parliament from Sir Robert Borden down," might be well amended by substituting—from Sir Robert Borden up—to men like Andy Broder, who seems to have more honesty and courage than all the members of the Government with which he has taken issue. We can easily see how his action blows into the air all the specious defensive works of apologetic pleading and condonation of The News and those who think with it. If there had not been and were not, to Mr. Broder's unprejudiced mind, something enormously wrong and dangerous in the charges brought by Liberal "partizan miscreants," would he have revolted against the Government he has faithfully supported, and have broken on this issue with the Conservative party with which he had been honourably associated for twenty years of continuous public life? One can easily see what a wrench it must have been to him after such a consistent course of fidelity to party; after being newly singled out for special honour by the Government, to put behind him all the party traditions of his career and in obedience to the voice of conscience, and the call of duty, stand for honesty and for the insertion of the probe to the hilt. His recent action, which cannot be said to have been dictated by partizanship or any sinister motive, but by enforced conviction, and sense of duty, furnishes a valuable endorsation of the general course of the "partizan miscreants" to whom alone—to whose insistent urging—the exposures of "graft" that have been made are due. The News charges that—

> "Partizan miscreants have continually set false charges afloat with the deliberate object of crippling a government which carries the heaviest responsibility and the gravest burdens ever imposed upon a Canadian administration."

There is truth in the declaration of the heavy responsibility the Government is carrying, and the grave burdens it has to bear. But it is to be remembered that the Government is responsible for itself adding to the weight of its responsibility and the gravity of its burdens, by failing to keep a watchful eye over the expenditure of public moneys, in the public interests, in the interests of the cause for which they were voted. The Liberal party in Parliament did not think its whole duty done when it patriotically joined with its Conservative colleagues in Parliament in unanimously voting enormous sums for war purposes; it was equally a duty to see that these great sums were not squandered, wasted, or stolen. The Government has been better situated to watch the expenditure of war funds, and to detect wrong-doing; it had to use a turf phrase, "the inside track." In failing to keep watch and detect wrong-doing; in failing to meet its responsibility in this regard, it has thrown the responsibility upon the Liberal Opposition, to whose action almost entirely has been due the fact that graft, stealing and waste, have been exposed. If the Government had been as careful and watchful in preventing wrong-doing as Liberal "miscreants" have been in exposing it, there would not have been wrong-doing to expose. The Liberal Opposition in Parliament have not hindered, but helped the Government to discharge two important elements of its responsibility—to provide money for war purposes, and to prevent its being wastefully expended.

MAPLE SUGAR FOR SOLDIERS

A correspondent's suggestion that Canadians send maple sugar to the Canadian soldiers abroad is a happy thought. The maple leaf is our national emblem, and maple sugar is our native sweet. A present of this kind to those in the muddy trenches will bring to many, cheery thoughts of sugaring parties in the Canadian bush, and show that when the sap was running we did not forget those who could not be with us to enjoy it. It will also bring before the Old World one of the most wholesome and delectable of sweets, especially identified with Canada, while carrying, as our correspondent says, a happy "breath of home" to the boys in the trenches.—Montreal Herald.

THE RETORT NEAT.

Mr. Maughan, formerly of this city, and now assistant general passenger agent of the C.P.R., at Montreal was recently appointed an honourary colonel. Next day after the appointment was announced in the press it is reported in Montreal that he received from his old Toronto friend, Mr. T. C. Irving, a telegram ringing like this:

"Congratulations upon your new title of colonel. You are, however, doubtless in accord with the thoughts of that eminent Scotchman, Burns, that

"The rank is but the guinea's stamp,
A Maughan's a Maughan for a' that."—Toronto Star.

Open Joints in Armour of Ontario Administration of Justice

When the Hon. I. B. Lucas became Attorney-General of Ontario, there was a widespread belief that the administration of justice would be less of a scandal than it had been under his predecessor, and that flagrant failures to punish influential offenders like Pollman-Evans and Moyes would cease. The strange case of A. F. Lobb and the relation of Mr. Lucas to that case must greatly disturb public confidence.

Mr. Lobb was a prominent barrister of Toronto, a well-known Conservative politician, and a friend of Sir James Whitney. At various times he held official relations with the city law department and with the Provincial Hydro-electric Commission. He became deeply involved in real estate speculation and as solicitor for a citizen to whom the civic Treasury owed several thousand dollars for land taken for public purposes Mr. Lobb converted—that seems to be the proper word to indicate theft by a solicitor—the money to him own use. When he could no longer hide his speculations Mr. Lobb fled to the United States. The city refused to pay again the money misappropriated by Lobb, and the case is still in the courts.

When the facts became generally known through the court proceedings a demand was made that Lobb be extradited. The Attorney-General said proceedings must be initiated by the city. If they were, his department would, on the city's complaint and upon an undertaking to defray expenses, bring Lobb back. Now it appears from the evidence of the Provincial Auditor, Mr. James Clancy, before the Public Accounts Committee on Friday, that Mr. Lobb "converted" Hydro funds to his own use as well as funds of the city of Toronto. How much he bagged does not appear. A loose reading of Mr. Clancy's evidence might rouse the suspicion that a large part of the deficit of $172,000 alleged by the Auditor to exist in the Hydro accounts was due to Mr. Lobb's pilferings. The Globe is informed that the total was probably not over ten thousand dollars.

That is a very considerable sum of money. Did the Attorney-General of Ontario, who is also a member of the Provincial Hydro-electric Commission, and as such the trustee in a very special sense of the public money invested in the Hydro enterprise, know that Lobb had been stealing from the Hydro as well as the city when he asked the city authorities to institute proceedings against Lobb if his extradition was desired? If he did know, does Mr. Lucas think he was doing the duty he swore to perform as Attorney-General of Ontario? Here was an influential offender—another Pollman-Evans or Moyes—whose crimes were being covered up and glossed over by the very man who should have exposed them. If Mr. Lucas knew of Mr. Lobb's frauds when he threw back on the city responsibility for the initiation of extradition proceedings he should be given to understand by the Legislature in the plainest of terms that he fails in his duty alike as Attorney-General and as a Commissioner of the Hydro-electric system of the Province.

In the Legislature on March 16th, answering a question by the leader of the Opposition as to whether proceedings were being taken in connection with the extradition of Messrs Moyes and Lobb, Mr. Lucas drew a distinction between the two cases. Speaking first of the case of Mr. Lobb he said that an order-in-Council was passed many years ago providing that if there was a serious case affecting the public generally the Province might undertake at its expense to extradite. It was a well-known and long-established rule, as he was advised by the officers in the Attorney-General's Department, that it must be a serious crime affecting the public generally, otherwise the party who wanted expensive extradition proceedings taken must be prepared to pay the cost. In the case of Mr. Lobb the city of Toronto was interested, and if the city asked the Attorney-General's Department to extradite Mr. Lobb and signed the ordinary form they would give them the same treatment as any other person, and they would extradite him. The case of Moyes was in a different class.

Mr. Lucas at that time must have known Lobb, like Moyes, had stolen public money, and moreover money that it was Mr. Lucas' sworn duty to guard. If he knew of Lobb's stealings on March 16 he was misleading the Legislature and deceiting the people. If he did not known on March 16 of Lobb's raid on the Hydro Treasury what has he been doing to earn his salary of $4,000 a year as a Hydro-electric Commissioner?

It is only by putting influential men in jail when they go wrong that political rottenness will be stamped out in Canada. Why should the man who steals food or clothing that he needs go to prison when the leading citizen who from cupidity steals thousands he does not need, goes scot free?—The Globe.

paratory work done in England, before going to the firing line.

For a time the colonel was in charge of the 1st Canadian base depot, and when the change was made he was placed in command of the 9th reserve battalion.

In speaking of the Canadians, Col. Moore paid the men a compliment, for the cheerful spirit they maintained in some of the English camps, for he said that during the first year conditions there were worse, in some cases, than in the trenches. In spite of this, the men maintained their good spirits and did their work well. At present Col. Moore has about thirteen hundred Canadians under his command; his next in command being Lieut.-Col. Clegg, of Peterborough.

The Ottawa Free Press says: Cupid's activities among the soldiers are to be discouraged. The winsome youth with the quiver full of arrows has been harvesting heavily in the militia ranks. While in a general way the government looks on the marriages of militia men with a fatherly and indulgent smile, it proclaims that there is such a thing as carrying a good thing too far. Applications for permission to marry which are now coming in will be shelved.

The reason given is that the separation allowances are intended to provide for the families of married men who enlisted as such, and whose families would otherwise have been in want, or become a heavy burden on the patriotic fund.

It has been found that a great many recruits are marrying after enlistment. This gives them the double incentive of patriotism, and provision for their wives. This also necessitates placing their wives on the pension list.

Those who are betrothed will be treated more leniently. The application for separation allowance here will be granted providing the request has the sanction of the officer commanding the unit. This application will be recognized only after April in the case of those who apply for permission after enlistment, and if not married in twenty days the permission will be cancelled and the separation allowance rights forfeited.

Major Porter is here to-day examining the 93rd non-coms. class in Part C of their examinations. This is the final part of the examination for sergeant's certificates.

The headquarters staff of the 93rd Battalion will meet the Cooks in a football match to-night.

The following will represent the Headquarters' Staff:

Goal, Pte. V. Dallin (Q.M. Stores); backs, Pte. W. Loader (Band), Pte. Badley (Band); half backs, Pte. C. Hartshorn (P.M. Office), C. S. M. Calladine (B Co.), Lieut. J. Ketchum (Attached); forwards, Pte. McFadden (M. Police), C. S. M. Hartshorn (A. Co.), G.M.S. King (Batt. Ord. Rm.), Sgt. Toone (B.O.R.), Pte. Worral (Band).

Captain—C. S. M. Calladine.
Referee—Lieut. R. P. A. Crisp.
Kick off—6:15 p.m. sharp.

The following circular letter has been sent out to commanding officers by Colonel Hemming, with the instructions which follow:

Your immediate attention is drawn to the appended notes on:

(1) Use of arms in marching.
(2) Use of arms in doubling.
(3) The position of the feet in marking time.
(4) Turning right, left or about.
(5) Dressing right or left.

Officers and N.C.O.'s who have attended the Headquarters or District 21 day schools for assistant instructors in bayonet fighting and physical training will be specially relied on to teach these corrected positions and it is desired that Commanding Officers give them every support in cases where existing practice may require modification."

Use of Arms in Marching.

In quick time the arms should swing naturally from the shoulder, the right arm swinging forward with the left leg, and the left arm with the right leg. The movement of the leg must spring from the haunch and be free and natural.

The arms must not be stiffened but should swing freely and naturally from the shoulders, the right arm swinging forward with the left leg and vice-versa. If the arms are swung in this way, they will bend naturally at the elbow as they swung sufficiently clear of the body as they swing back, the movement being free without being forced.

The men should be encouraged to swing the arms with the thumb leading, preferably with the thumb lightly pressed on, the forefinger. This corrects the tendency to swing the hand with the knuckles forward, which always results in the forearm coming up across and in front of the body. Correct dressing in each four of a column is essential to good marching and can be picked up by the eye unconsciously from the swing of the arms alongside. This is impossible if some men have a long straight and others a short crooked swing. The straighter the swing the less energy is wasted in rocking the arms and equipment from side to side.

Use of Arms in Doubling.

The arms should swing easily from the shoulders and should be bent at the elbow, the forearm forming an angle of about 135 degrees with the upper arm (i.e. midway between a straight arm and a right angle at the elbow), fists clenched, back of the hands outward and the arms swun sufficiently clear of the body to allow of full freedom for the chest.

The prevalent practices of maintaining the upper arm and shoulders rigid and swinging the forearms from the elbows only, or, of setting the arms stiffly with a right angle at the elbows and then swinging them with, instead of from, the shoulder should be discouraged from the beginning of the training.

Position of Feet in Marking Time.

The foot then advancing will complete its pace, after which the time will be continued, without advancing, by raising each foot alternately about 6 inches, keeping the feet almost parallel with the ground, the knees raised to the front, the arms steady at the sides, and the body steady. On the command "Forward" the pace at which the men were moving will be resumed.

Raise each foot alternately about 6 inches from the ground, keeping the feet almost parallel to it, the knees raised to the front, the arms steady at the sides, the body steady, and the cadence the same as in quick march.

By raising the knee with the shin hanging vertical and the toe just visible over the knee the sole of the foot will be found to be parallel to the ground.

Many of the physical training exercises selected are specially designed to teach this movement correctly.

It is impossible to continue the time or maintain the cadence of quick march if the feet are only tramped up and down vertically, nor can the foot be raised "Parralel to the ground" without carrying it forward.

When properly executed it is impossible to accelerate the cadence above "quick time."

Turning Right, Left or About.

In turning two distinct movements are required with a noticeable pause between, during which the leg with the raised heel should be firmly braced. The tendency to throw the arms about when turning is due to hurry and want of control.

Dressing Right and Left.

The prevalent habit of closing on the word "dress" is to be discouraged. It occasions great waste of time and nearly always results in less than 27 inches of laterial space per man. The paragraph above referred to deals with men taking their "own dressing without orders" but says nothing about closing on the command "dress." The instructor or officer in command is in the best position to judge whether closing or easing off is required and should act accordingly.

Word was received this morning in the shape of cablegrams from Capt. M. H. Park, Lieut. Gerald Rackham, Pte. E. White and other Peterborough members of the battalion that the 39th Battalion, C.E.F., has safely arrived in the old country. A number of Peterborough people went to Brockville two weeks ago to say good-bye to their friends in the 39th.

Pics. C. Kerr, Ed. Rose and Geo. Hall of No. 3 company, Canadian Army Service Corps, who have been on duty here in connection with the supplies for the 93rd Battalion during the past winter, leave to-morrow for Kingston, where they will join an overseas draft that is leaving shortly. The three boys, whose homes are in Ottawa, have made many friends both in and out of the 93rd Battalion, and they will be missed. Two new men for the Army Service Corps arrived yesterday. They have been on duty with the 59th Battalion at Gananoque.

WAS FRIGHTFULLY WORRIED

Indigestion, Loss of Sleep, Heart Palpitation

A Case That Proves Prompt Action is Wise When Health is Poor

"At night I would wake up with vague feelings of fear and numbness in my hands and other parts of the body," writes Mr. E. X. Smeaton, of St. John's. "I had grown thin and pale, and at night it was very difficult to get enough warmth in my feet to get asleep. My digestion was poor, and appetite very uncertain. The form of nervousness that worried me most was starting at every little thing, which resulted in such violent heart action as sometimes frightened me. Finally I had to give up my work, which was inside office work, so languid, nervous and weak had I become. Through the intervention of a friend I was induced to use Ferrozone. My appetite improved at once, circulation also improved and Ferrozone accomplished the renewal of my blood and natural warmth seemed to come back to my limbs. At the same time Ferrozone built up my constitution. I became quite strong and resumed my occupation. In brief, I am well."

Ferrozone is the only remedy of its kind in the world—it makes you feel better at once; when you are tired, dull, dispirited—when you feel there is nothing in life for you, that's the time to take Ferrozone.

What a change Ferrozone makes! Your blood sings through your veins, carrying nourishment to every nook and corner of the body, you feel the exultant thrill of abundant nerve force, you learn the luxury and delight of being at your best—in perfect good health.

Just try Ferrozone and see how much better you feel; it's the one remedy in all the world that will get you bracing health at once. Sold everywhere, 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers.

Sulphuric Acid Plant at Trail, B.C.

MONTREAL, P.Q., April 11.—The Trail smelter, in which the Canadian Pacific has a large interest, has started construction of a plant where the manufacture of sulphuric and hydrofluoric acid, which is expected to be ready for operation in two months. A site is also being cleared for a copper refinery and the existing land refinery will also probably be extended. The new plant for the manufacture of zinc is now in operation, though shipments have not yet commenced. The copper converters now in course of installation are nearing completion, and should be working shortly. The new lead mill is in operation and working well.

GERMAN BANKERS HEDGE.

Hasten to Get Their Money Out of Germany.

ROME, April 11.—German bankers according to reports received in financial circles here, are transferring their reserves to neutral countries without heeding the losses incurred by the unfavorable exchange as long as they succeed in getting their money safely out of Germany.

These steps are ascribed to reports that the last war loan was a failure and that coercive measures are feared.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or implying attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Never in the history of Canada has the truthfulness of the claim that we, as a people, have few Milton-minded leaders been so evident as now. Politics and commercialism have made this country, with all its possibilities, a great disappointment.

True we have some honest and noble characters at the head of affairs, but they lack that fearlessness that should prompt them to exalt the nation to their own noble standard.

What we want is leaders who will fashion circumstances and conditions; who will not only use events but will make them; men who are big enough to defy partyism and dismiss ministers before their wrongdoing is brought home to them.

The present state of affairs brings out the inconsistency of our present representative in no uncertain manner. What a grand opportunity he missed when he did not line up with the much-admired Hon. Andrew Broder.

What are we to think when we witness our Member blindly following a lead that is directly contrary to what he promised? Articles 3 and 4 of his address to the electors at the last election states:

"That we should see to the instant abolition of all privileges whereby money-sharks, in defiance of legitimate business and of the rules of common honesty are enabled by lax laws to plunder the people who are then required to prosecute the criminals practically at their own expense. Our laws are an ingnominious failure in this respect. I appeal to you upon my record. Am I one likely to stand for such a state of affairs?"

Can it be that he, Dr. Edwards, and the other self-created apostles of purity are dumbfounded at the magnitude of the charges?

After all the lofty statements made in regard to a spirit of independence that we could expect from our Member when it came to a matter of principle is it any wonder that many have been disappointed from time to time. If he had not the courage or freedom to vote against his party some of his supporters expected to at least hear from him.

Our representative has some qualities no doubt, but his actions as a politician I would not care to think is a fair sample of Canadian culture.

In regard to the Auburn Mills inquiry, the grounds for suspicion were so weak that there appears to be something of a dark lantern nature about the whole affair? What protection did this industry get from our Member against this injustice? We have heard him state from the public platform and seen the statement in the press over his name, that things were rotten, but what has he done to mitigate the curse? Practically nothing. From his actions or want of action, what are we to conclude that he does not find it to his personal or his party's advantage to be consistent. If he is a weakling and has no weight, we are partly to blame, and this can be forgiven; but if it is insincerelty and deception he should be condemned.

Now, Mr. Editor, if our Member is satisfied and enjoying his position (while not admiring his taste) I am pleased to know that the tainted atmosphere agrees with him. If he has some kind of an excuse let us have it, and if he has not got a new bogey some of the old ones will do.

What are we going to do to bring about a change for the better? I don't know, but I have an opinion as to what ought to be done, and here it is:

Discourage appeals to the passions of the elector for they are our worst enemy. They have brought our democratic institutions into discredit. Can we regard the electors' vote as an expression of reason and conscience, when we lose reverence for one another? We are drifting away from the true basis of democracy.

What this country wants is strong men of character; men whose lives will be dominated by lofty and holy ideals furnished by Christianity. We have some such, but partyism and politics bar the way. The two greatest engravers of character are very much not in evidence amongst the supporters of the present government in this district. They are environment and education. We Canadians, like others, are forgetting the true meaning of the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man.

JOSEPH BEGLEY.

Peterborough, April 11.

QUAKER MUST GO TO WAR.

London, April 10.—Exemption from service with the colours has been refused to Vernon George Green by the tribunal at Sheerness. Green pleaded ill-health and conscientious objection, and also made the claim that he was the descendant of William Penn. In his written appeal he said: "I was brought up under strict Christian principles not to take life in any form, my ancestor being William Penn, Quaker, founder of Pennsylvania."

HAD WEAK HEART
HAD TO STAY IN BED

Many women are kept in a state of fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable, and are unable to attend to their household, social or business duties, on account of the unnatural action of the heart.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief. They do this by their calming, strengthening and invigorating action on the heart causing it to beat regularly and naturally, and in addition to this they tone up the whole nerve system.

Mrs. J. Day, 234 John St. South, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I was so run down with a weak heart that I could not even sweep the floor, nor could I sleep at night. I was so awfully sick sometimes I had to stay in bed all day as I was so weak. I used three and a half boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am a cured woman to-day, and as strong as anyone could be, and am doing my own housework, even my own washing.

"I doctored for over two years, but got no help until I used your pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25. They can be had at all druggists or dealers, or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Back Was Lame and Ached; Could Do Very Little Work

Suffered Much From Kidney Disease for Years, But Cure Came With the Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Doctors had tried to cure this man but failed to get at the cause of trouble probably because they relied on medicines which act on the kidneys only. The strong feature about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills is their combined action on liver, kidneys and bowels. In many of these cases the disease is so complicated that ordinary kidney medicines fail to be of much benefit. Under such conditions Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills usually touch the spot and effect a cure.

Had they been only moderately successful Dr. Chase would never have selected them for world wide distribution. As it was the demand for these pills resulted naturally from their superior merit and there was nothing else to do but supply them in large quantities.

Mr. Simeon Shiloff, Birchbrook Orchards, Birchbank, B.C., writes:

"For several years I suffered greatly from kidney disease. I was weak and could do very little work. My back was lame and ached and I suffered much from headaches. Tried doctors and obtained no relief. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills were recommended by a friend and after taking four boxes I think that I can say that I am cured for I feel as well as I ever did."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. Harry Anderson, J.P., who writes:

"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. Simeon Shiloff and believe his statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

Declares Allies May Land a Big Army in Holland

Vienna Hears Paris Conference Discussed Possibilitieins Move

Berlin, April 11, via wireless to Tuckerton, N.J.—Among the items given out to-day by the Overseas News Agency for publication, were the following:

"Vienna newspapers report that the Dutch government was informally informed that at the recent conference of the Entente Allies in Paris there was discussion of the advantages of the eventual landing of 200,000 men in order to force a passage of the Scheldt. Although at Paris no definite decision was taken the Dutch government felt itself compelled to adopt all necessary measures of precaution.

"The Swiss newspaper Neue Zurcher Zeitung reports that a few days ago large quantities of ammunition ordered by Holland in Germany were sent to Holland."

CEMETERY SITUATION SERIOUS IN WINDSOR

City May Be Without Protestant Burial Ground

WINDSOR, April 11.—This city may be without a Protestant burial grounds in a few days unless trustees of the Windsor cemetery board are able to find $1,000, which amount was awarded Dr. Abraham Soper of Detroit for land for an extension of Windsor Grove Cemetery.

The board has acknowledged that it is without funds to make the payment, and the city council has been appealed to for a loan. City Solicitor Davis has ruled that the corporation had no power to lend the money. The situation has grown so serious that Barrister F. C. Kerby, acting for Dr. Soper, declared yesterday that he would wait but a few days longer. He said that all the land not sold as grave lots would be seized if the money is not forthcoming.

It is the opinion of the civic finance committee that it would be unfair to ask the Roman Catholic ratepayers to contribute money by way of taxation for a cemetery which is used exclusively by other denominations.

An amusing competition was then enjoyed by the assembly, Miss Daisy Williams winning the prize for the same.

At the conclusion refreshments were served.

Japs Are Annoyed By British Activity

OBJECT TO THE DETENTION AND EXAMINATION OF STEAMERS.

TOKIO, April 11.—The frequent recurrence of detention and examination of Japanese merchant steamers by British converted cruisers in Indian and Chinese waters, especially the recent firing on the Nippin Yusen Kaisha liners, Chikuzen Maru and Miyazaki Maru, has excited public resentment in Japan. The press and prominent naval officers denounce the reported action of the British warship as unlawful and go even to the limit of calling it an insult to the national flag of Japan as well as a menace to Japanese shipping, involving losses to overseas trade.

The Nippon Kaigokai (Japanese Maritime Association) and the Kaiji Rengo Tsushinsha (Associated Maritime News Agency) jointly started a movement to arouse public opinion in connection with the incidents and yesterday they presented a memorial to the foreign minister urging the necessity of lodging a complaint to the British government.

It is reported that the government has requested Great Britain to explain the recent seizure of nine Hindu passengers from the Japanese steamer Tenyo Maru. The matter is one requiring delicate handling but it is believed here that Great Britain and Japan will settle the question in a manner satisfactory to both countries.

We therefore appreciate, and thank them, for their contribution to the Fund.

J. A. Aylmer,
For Trustees.

The cheque was accompanied by the following letter:

April 10th, 1916.

Messrs. T. F. Matthews and J. J. Aylmer, Trustees of Patriotic Fund, Peterborough, Ont.

Gentlemen,—Kindly find enclosed my check for $231.00, which represents portion of salary of the Agents of the Peterborough District, comprising the towns of Cobourg, Port Hope, Bowmanville, Oshawa, Port by, Campbellford, Lindsay, and the City of Peterborough, which we ask you, as trustees of the Patriotic Fund at Peterborough, to accept.

I believe that perhaps insurance men, realize more fully the great assistance and help which the Patriotic Fund is proving in the homes of the men, who are fighting for their King and Country. We know that the Patriotic Fund has been the means of bringing sunshine, and clearing the cloud of depression where the bread-winner has donned the soldier's uniform.

Trusting that this will be turned over to the General Patriotic Fund, and that our small endeavour may help along the work which has proved of such great value.

With best wishes, I remain,
Yours very truly,
J. T. ALLAN,
Superintendent.

RIVER IS HIGH WITH WATERS OF SPRING

The Otonabee river has overflowed the Street Railway Wharf and is away up to the height of Spring freshets. It has backed up into the Lock Street sewer, Park Street drain, and Monaghan Road drain, in each, however, only a comparauvely short distance. While the water is high, it has been much higher. At Crawford's Grove it spreads across to the opposite shore as wide as a lake, submerging the weeds, the marshy shore line and the low-lying bank.

SHE GAINED 35 POUNDS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Marlowe, Ont, writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy. I had nervous headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, and was in fact, a confirmed invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up but by using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 35 pounds in weight.

No Wonder The Farmers Are Now Worshipping The Golden Hog

With hogs bringing eleven cents a pounds live weight there was more than the usual activity on the market this morning. A number of farmers who had sold to Mr. Breckenridge for Toronto shipment weighed in on the market scales. One of them brought in six Yorkshires that aggregated 1,370 pounds which at eleven cents id realize $150.70. Alas the poor farmer, in what evil times he finds himself. Hogs bringing eleven cents, too valuable to eat. And the worst of it, hogs are scarce in the back forties. Probably if they were plentiful the price would be down to eight or nine cents. And there you turn again to the farmer's circle of complaint, high prices when supplies are scarce, low prices when there is plenty. Besides the weather is inclined to be erratic at times instead of raining only when rain is required and pouring warm sunshine only when the sun is needed. Alas the poor farmer, he commiserates with himself if no one else does.

Closing Meeting of Evangelist Sharpe

Evangelist G. M. Sharpe, who has been conducting a big campaign in Bethany Tabernacle during the past two weeks, will deliver his closing address to-night.

The results of the meetings have been most gratifying. At last night's service nearly the entire audience arose at the Evangelist's invitation when he requested all those who would henceforth "surrender all to Christ" to stand. A good, old-fashioned after service was held, and closed with a joyful time of praise and testimony. Many told of what great blessing they had received through the meetings, and not a few spoke of having made their first decision for Christ.

The following are a few of the Evangelists pointed remarks:

"You and I don't get very far down the road of sin until we come in contact with the Cross of Jesus Christ."

"I don't want to go into God's kingdom with an empty game-bag on my shoulder."

"I believe that if at the present time every preacher would preach the Word of God as God would have him preach it there would be the mightiest revival in Canada that the world has ever seen."

"A man doesn't get very far into sin but what he finds the Holy Ghost in his way, trying to turn him back."

"Why men and women will sin against Jesus Christ when they know He is in the way, trying to turn them back from destruction, I can't understand."

"A dead fish doesn't know there is a current, but a live one does. A lead Christian doesn't know there is a devil, but a live one does."

The service to-night will begin at 3 o'clock. This will be your last chance to hear Evangelist Sharpe.—Com.

ST. THOMAS, April 10.—About 200 members of the 91st Battalion left Saturday to assist farmers throughout Elgin County during seeding time.

NORTH SEA FIGHT GUNNERY PRACTICE

London, April 11.—The heavy firing heard on several evenings in Kiel Bay west of Bagnkop, on the Danish Island of Langeland, which has given rise to rumours of a naval battle, is explained by Reuter's Copenhagen correspondent as having been due to German naval gunnery practice of unusual proportions. Many of the ships have been out each evening, firing at targets towed by fast cruisers. This practice always takes place after dark by the use of searchlights.

Capture by a German torpedo boat of the Swedish steamship Vega, from Stockholm for Copenhagen, is reported in an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Copenhagen. The message says the Swedish government has protested against the capture and demanded the release of the steamship.

PROBING HIGH PRICE OF GASOLINE

Preliminary Report Made by U. S. Federal Trade Commission.

Washington, April 10.—A preliminary report on the investigation of the increased price of gasoline, now being conducted by the Federal Trade Commission, to-day was submitted to Congress. The report explained the method which the commission is pursuing in its investigation and submitted some "tentative" statistics as to production and price. The commission explained that the gasoline investigation necessarily involved an inquiry into the whole petroleum industry.

A series of tables showing monthly production of crude oil and gasoline during 1915, average monthly price for crude oil, kerosene, gasolipe and fuel oil and other statistical matter accompanied the report.

The price table showed that while crude oil in the western field increased in price from 1.5 cents per gallon in August to 2.67 in December the price of gasoline in the same period increased from 6.61 to 11.49 cents. In the eastern field crude oil advanced from 3.50 to 5.05 cents, and gasoline from 9.5 to 15 cents per gallon.

"POTASH AND PERMUTTER"

"Potash and Permutter," described on the programme as "an up-to-date garment in three pieces," was responsible for the heartiest laughter of the season at the Grand last night. To those who are familiar with the doings of "Abe" and Mawruss," as described in the famous stories by Montague Glass, in the Saturday Evening Post, it was like meeting old friends, while those who had not yet read the stories were equally pleased to make the acquaintance of Messrs Potash and Permutter. The troubles of the firm kept the audience in gales of laughter. Phil. White and Harry Fist, in the title roles, got the most out of two splendid parts, and their portrayal of the two Hebrew business men was very effective. They were supported by a large and capable company and the production was one of the best seen at the Grand for a long time.

If Women Get Vote After War, They Will Rule England's Electorate

Losses in Field and Emigration May Leave 2,000,000 More Women Than Men in British Isles

LONDON, April 10.—Women will have a great deal to say about running England after the war. If they get the vote they will rule England's electorate, as there were 1,00,000 more British women than men before the war.

The suffragettes abandoned militant tactics when fighting began with the Germans, but they have been conducting an educational campaign ever since.

Its keynote has been the thorough-advertisement of the extent to which women have taken the places of the men at the front. Since the women can do men's work, the suffragettes argue, why weren't they entitled to the franchise on the same footing with men?

Practical Proposition.

There is on theory about this proposition. If is practical. The women etually are doing work it used to be taken for granted only men could satisfactorily do. In a good many instances, it is conceded, they are doing it better than the men did. The country, too, is mighty glad to get them. It is begging for their help.

Munition making is largely in women's hands. Women are rapidly taking over the positions of the men street car bus conductors.

Women are running elevators. Women are acting as ticket sellers and choppers.

A woman's army is being recruited to do England's farming. Women clerks are behind the counters of the retail stores of all kinds.

Women chauffeurs are numerous Women run delivery waggons.

Women are doing all sorts of clerical work in banks, wholesale houses insurance offices and counting rooms generally.

This drafting of women has been far more general on the European continent than in England. On the continent however there has been no such corresponding effort on the women's part to get value received for their wartime help, in the form of subsequent political concessions.

After all women have done during the war, it is hard to see how England can refuse what they demand later. At any rate, it is a safe conclusion that they will get a respectful hearing when they present their claims next time. Instead of the contemptuous dismissal which their efforts met before the great European struggle.

Comment by the new women workers, too, shows that women suffragette representations are making an impression on the rank and file.

Women Will Demand Vote.

The next demand, consefuently will be mere dilentantte movement Instead, it will come from the womn who have done as much as any man in the field to aid the country in an emergency, whose services and sacrifices already have been publicly recognised and who can speak, and act, with a genuine determination never hitherto characteristic of suffragettoism in England.

If they fail to get what they want it will be suprising. Should they get it, England will be ruled, electorally by women.

Census figures show that, before the war there were about 1,000,000 more women than men in the British Isles.

After the war, between the losses of men in the field and the expected heavy emigration, which will be largely of young, unmarried men, the dispropriation will be still larger—perhaps another 1,000,000.

HAL JOHNSON COMING

The Greatest Living Female Impersonator Here Next Saturday in a New Play

Especially prepared for laughing purposes, "Miss Modiste," the sensational comedy used to exploit the starring ability of Hal. Johnson, the man who made "The Arrival of Kitty" famous, comes to the Grand on Saturday next, April 15. with the prestige of an enormous success everywhere it has been presented, and with the promise of unlimited fun presented in the most attractive form. The tendency of theatrical entertainment of the present day is all towards amusement, and the plays that can set audiences laughing and makes them forget their cares are the ones that are welcomed and patronized. "Miss Modiste" promises the full measure of enjoyment, and theatregoers of this city have the first opportunity of seeing the great laughing success of the year. It is seldom that such a galaxy of sparkling comedy stars as Hal. Johnson, Arthur Rowland, Lillian Forrest, Eva Swinburne, Luceil O'Dea, and Billy Moran are brought together to shine in one single production, but such is the case in this charming comedy with tantalizing tunes. The story of the play has to do with a young college boy, just fresh from school, who in order to extricate himself from difficulties which he has with his relatives, resorts to the impersonation of a young lady. How his plans work out is ably told by the clever company. Besides being hilariously funny it has ten big song hits, and no doubt its melodious, merry music will be whistled after one witnesses a performance of "Miss Modiste."

A Single Application Banishes Every Hair

(The Modern Beauty)

Here is how any woman can easily and quickly remove objectionable hairy growth without possible injury to the skin: Make a paste with some powdered delatone and water apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is a painless, inexpensive method and, excepting where the growth is unusually thick, a single application is enough. You should, however, be careful to get genuine delatone.

NEW YORK, April 10. — While walking with a man attendant in Central Park, "Junior," an aristocratic bulldog, wearing a jewaled collar and plush robe, was attacked by a tramp terrier. Junior lost a large part of the robe and a section of his tail in the encounter.

MORE POSITIONS TAKEN IS ENEMY REPORT

Special to the Examiner.

BERLIN, April 11. — (Official). — The capture of more French positions north-east of Verdun in the fighting south-west of Fort Douaumont was announced by the War Office this afternoon. On the east bank of the Meuse French counter-attacks south of Crows' Forest were repulsed, the Germans taking 222 prisoners.

LONDON, April 11.—The British steamer Ellaston, 4,000 tons, has been badly damaged, and is believed to have sunk. The crew was taken off.

Giant Aeroplanes Are Being Built

Special to the Examiner:

MARVLE HEAD, Mass., April 11.—Twenty of the largest aeroplanes the world has ever seen are being constructed at the Burgess plant here for an European power, said to be Great Britain. The hulls of these giant airships are now under way. The machines will be known as the "Curtiss Flying Boats," and will have a tremendous carrying capacity. Each will be equipped with 1,000 horse-power engines and will carry enough gasoline to fly across the Atlantic Ocean.

"NOT THE LAST EFFORTS OF AN EXHAUSTED NATION" SAYS MINISTER

BERLIN, April 11.—The German War Minister, Gen. Adolf Wild von Hohenborn, speaking of the Verdun offensive in the Reichstag, said:

"These are not, as our enemies pretend to believe, the last efforts of an exhausted nation, but the hammer blows of a strong, unconquerable people provided with sufficient human reserves and all necessary means for backing up the hammer blows, which will be repeated until our adversaries weary. To attain our aim I have set to work with all my skill. A hundred metres of trenches have more value for me than the finest speeches.

"This war will not be terminated by speeches about victory, but by strong blows on the battlefields and strong will at home to hold on to the end. The words 'hold on' do not adequately express the necessity for the national will backing up the work of our troops and the entire conduct of the war. Only if those at home hold on can the army do its utmost.

"The cooperation of Germans at home in this war is a spectacle of gigantic and historic importance, and the army expresses its gratitude to the German people for its strong-minded heroism at home. Supported by this spirit the army will give its all in an effort to secure a peace, the importance of which will be in proportion to our sacrifices and safeguard us in the future against similar assaults. Until then patience. Decisions are ripening slowly, but surely toward an inevitable complete victory."

Hon. Bob Discloses Grit Wickedness

Capt. "Ram's" Heroics Amuses the Members

OTTAWA, April 10.—Hon. "Bob" Rogers has landed the wicked Grits at last. He made his startling disclosures when the House was in Committee of Supply on the Postoffice estimates to-night. He read a letter signed by C. M. Goddard of he Liberal Press Bureau, which, he said, had been sent to the Postmaster at Poplar Point, asking for a list of the active Liberals in his district. Mr. A. K. Maclean, Halifax, challenged the truth of the statement that the circular was addressed to the postmaster while Mr. F. F. Pardee (West Lambton) refused to regard the indiscretion—of such it was—as a complete offset to his charges that the tender and contract system in the Postoffice had become a make-believe, and that the whole department under Hon. L. P. Pelletier had been turned into a political machine.

But Capt. J. H. Burnham re-read the circular. It manifested the terrible fact that "the disease of political corruption had burst forth suddenly with extraordinary vehemence." He was startled, amazed and shocked that a man had in the high esteem of the Senior Whip of the Liberal party should for a moment seem to condone "this most flagrant instance of political and moral obliquity which has come to light in this year of grace or disgrace."

"Disgrace, I'm afraid," mildly interposed Hon. Dr. Pugsley.

Should All be Put in "Pen."!

Captain Burnham refused to be diverted from his anathemas by such reference to fuse contracts. If the heinous offence of endeavouring to get postmasters— men charged with the sacred care of private and personal correspondence — to act as political agents was to be tolerated or condoned "there is no need for holding investigations; we should all be put in the penitentiary.

"Hear, hear," put in Hon. "Bob," enthusiastically. Then he blushed, as both sides of the House rocked with laughter, finally ending by joining heartily himself. Hon. "Bob" is one of the few Government front-benchers who appreciates the situation when the joke turns in his direction.

Before all this happened Dr. Chisholm (Iverness) paid tribute to the Pelletier-Casgrain mail delivery as it operated in his home constituency. There were, he said, six offices established close together. They were opened for political purposes, and a man had to visit all six before he was sure of getting his mail. This was good neither for war-time nor for peace-time.

TURNBULLS

WAR BREEDS MANY LEGENDS EXPLODED SAYINGS

BLACK HOLE OF CALCUTTA NEVER EXISTED—TWO EXAMPLES IN THE PRESENT CONFLICT CITED.

Wars are fruitful breeders of legends, and always have been. Nor is the present war any exception to the rule, says London Answers.

Everybody, to cite but two instances will be able to recall the story of the Mons angels, and that other one about the Russian soldiers who came through England from Archangel.

Possibly these yarns, and other similar ones, will be incorporated in the history books of the future. It is a fact that stories equally without foundation are taught in our schools to-day.

Take for example, the one about the Black Hole of Calcutta. Every schoolboy and nearly every grown up person is familiar with the details of that ghastly story. It relates how the Nawab Suraja Dowlah shut up 146 Britons, captured by him in Calcutta fort, in a small, unventilated dungeon, and how, after a night of agony from thirst, heat and lack of air, only twenty-three were found alive the next morning.

For more than 150 years the story has been implicitly believed. Yet now along comes Mr. Little, and proves, in his "Bengal, Past and Present," not only that it is not true, but that it could not possibly be true.

Nine persons only were, it appears from contemporary records, confined in the black hole, which was really the common prison, and none of these suffered any very great inconvenience. The remainder of the garrison, numbering some 120, were either killed or wounded in the fighting, and the latter were treated by their conquerors with every consideration.

Similarly, Wellington never said: "Up, Guards, and at them!" at Waterloo, nor did Blucher exclaim, on first seeing London, "What a place to sack!" While the phrase, "Providence favors the big battalions," which is usually attributed to Napoleon, is found in the writing of Cicero.

There never was a person named William Tell, and consequently he never shot an apple from his son's head at the bidding of the Austrian tyrant, Gessler.

At Waterloo, the commander of Napoleon's Old Guard is said to have replied to the challenge of surrender pompously: "The Old Guard dies, but it does not surrender!" In the French army, however, it is a tradition that his answer consisted of but one word, not at all fitted for ears polite.

Similarly, the Girondins had no last supper together. Columbus could not have foretold an eclipse of the moon in order to frighten the natives of Jamaica into submission, as has been asserted, for the simple reason that the moon was not in eclipse during the time the famous explorer was on that island.

NOBODY IS EVER SCARED AFTER DANGER IS PAST

Passengers on Ships in Submarine Zone Frame Up Laughable Alibis

ON BOARD A BRITISH LINER—Feb. 10.—No corsair ever stole through the night with more caution than ships observe in approaching the shores of England.

On the ship every man, woman and child, passenger and crew adjusted their life belts and responded to a roll call, standing in front of the lifeboat to which they had been assigned. For the children there are special cork bodices, the regulation belts being too large.

A good many passengers determined to be chic at any cost, wore unfastened overcoats. These were more becoming to lean than to stout persons.

Late in the afternoon the vicinity of the dangerous Irish coast was reached. A run for Liverpool through the darkness was evidently the program.

NOT A LIGHT SHOWING.

When the sun went down every port hole and quadrant was closed. Access to the decks was forbidden so that light might not stream through open doors. Stairs, corridors, saloons, and cabins were dimly lighted and, without a light showing anywhere, about the vessel, we zig zagged northward into the Irish sea.

Now the ship is a ship of snores, for few passengers slept last night. Everybody is alibying.

"Funny thing" one passenger exclaimed. "I sat up reading and before I knew it it was daylight. I wasn't a bit afraid of the German subs. I was so interested in my book that I just plumb forgot to look at my watch.

WANTED TO HELP SAILORS

"I stayed up" another passenger carolled, "so I could help the sailors launch the boats in case of trouble. I used to be a sailor when I was a young man."

"It was only a coincidence that I stayed up all night," a third said. "You see I got playing poker, and a winner can't very well quit on the losers."

"I stuck around because I thought I might get a glimpse of Ireland," a fourth declared. "I haven't been back to Ireland in twenty years."

Nobody stayed up on account of nervousness. Just a lot of accidents and coincidences happened to keep the passengers out of their bunks.

When you start for Europe with your passport and other necessary documents provide yourself with a couple of good alibis or so. One hears some pretty rotten ones of the impromptu kind.

Most people err not so much from want of capacity to find their object as from not knowing what object to pursue.—Sir Joshua Reynolds.

A SERUM TO REVIVE DROWNED

BALTIMORE, Md., April 11. — Experiments are being made by specialists at John Hopkins University Hospital which, if successful, will greatly aid in the resuscitation of persons apparently dead from drowning or asphyxiation. The new treatment is the injection of a serum to stimulate the blood to such an extent as will form a reaction on the heart. This will keep the persons alive until the apparatus perfected some time ago, to clear the lungs, can be put into use.

The serum, the ingredients of which the experimenting physicians will not divulge at this time, has been tried on a number of animals in the laboratories of the institution, and in a number of cases has proved successful. However, in most of the cases there has been after effects, such as high blood pressure or hardening of the arteries.

According to the physicians, if the serum can be perfected, and there is every assurance at this time that it can, the serum can be injected in the body several hours after the accident and restore life. In one case on an animal the serum was injected four hours after the drowning took place and the animal was brought back to life, but died later of a high blood pressure.

The physicians are now engaged in trying to overcome or prevent the excess of blood pressure.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Humour of the Race Track
Stories of Fred Wallbaum

One of the most unique and interesting figures of the old racing days was Fred Wallbaum, erstwhile proprietor of the Guttenburg and Saratoga race tracks, bookmaker, and member of the Metropolitan Turf association, the famous "Mets".

Wallbaum possessed shrewdness and business acumen above the average, wit and a power of repartee truly brilliant, and as kindly a disposition as ever found lodgment in a human breast.

His pronounced accent and some slight eccentricity of manners made him the central figure in numberless sparkling stories and anecdotes.

A follower of the bangtails of the time mentioned above was a little roly-poly fellow who was known as "Grif". During a racing season at Saratoga he induced Wallbaum to "stake" him to a bank roll to make book with. At the end of his first day's efforts Wallbaum strolled over to inquire as to his success.

"Well Grif" he said, genially, "vat did you done to-day?"

"O," was the nonchalent reply, "we lost a little."

"So? How much you lose?"

"O, somewhere around a thousand," Grif answered carelessly.

The following evening Wallbaum was around once more to investigate.

"Vell, liddle feller, how it vas to-day?" he propounded.

"Ain't struck my stride yet, Mr Wallbaum," was the reply. "I quit a little loser."

"So? How much you lose dis time?"

"O, I guess a trifle over twelve hundred or so."

The third day's results were about the same as the other two.

At the conclusion of the fourth day's racing Grif jumped off the block to meet his backer.

"Well, got 'em to-day, Mr. Wellbaum. I knew they couldn't beat me all the time," he chirped jubilantly.

"Ah so; you beat 'em to-day? Hey! You haf a goot day? Yes?"

"Pretty good; pretty good," came the self-satisfied answer."

"Vell dat's goot. Py de vay, how much you vin, anyhow?"

"Pretty near four hundred," replied the bookmaker proudly.

Wallbaum eyed his protege curiously. "Grif," he finally announced slowly and deliberately, "you're a goot liddle feller, you're a fine liddle feller, you're a shmart liddle feller, ain't it? But I tink you work too hard; you need a rest, you shoud haf a vacation. I tell you vat I do: If you vant to go to Europe for a holiday I buy you a ticket—one vay!"

One of Wallbaum's employes while booking around New York was a heroin scarum sort of a chap, named Max Adler, who was used principally as betting commissioner.

One day booking at Gravesend, the genial German came up to the last race about $6,000 loser and he was pondering earnestly how to recoup and get out.

Just then old "Pa" Bradley came along and made him a small bet on his entry, Iceberg, which was at 30 to 1.

Like a flash the idea struck the bookmaker that here was his chance. A few hundred dollars invested in tickets on this horse, if he could win, would more than even up the previous losses of the day.

Turning to his cashier, Wallbaum whispered: "Say, gif Max tree hunnert tollers to pet on Iceberg.

Now it happened that the favorite in this race was a horse named Voeburg and Wallbaum usually was a favorite player. Anyway, the commissioner got his orders mixed and bet the $300 on the 8to 5 shot. Iceberg won and Willbaum, who had been out watching the race, returned to his block in great glee.

"Vell," he exclaimed, puffing out his chest defiantly. "I guess dey can beat dis Dutchman all de time? Hey? Vat?

Then leaning over to the sheet writer.

"How much ve vin to dis?

The clerk looked up in surprise. "Win?" he asked; why you don't win at all. You lose."

The bookmaker flew in a rage. "Say you tam little shnip," he shouted; "at you mean? Im you drawing $10 a lay to kit me?"

"Why no, Mr. Wallbaum, you didn't bet on Iceberg. You bet on Vesburgh.

The German's face turned purple, and he choked and gasped for breath.

"Vere iss dot Mox? Vere iss dot shcoundrel?" he finally blurted out.

But that worthy had overheard enough of the conversation to convinces him that was no place for him and had silently hied him hence. Dreading his employer's just wrath he did not return to the track the next day, nor the next, nor for any number of days thereafter. Finally, one day in the city he and the boss he had deserted met face to face.

"Vy Mox," Wallbaum explained cordially, "vere you pin? Vy you don't come out to de track?"

"I've been sick, Mr. Wellbaum," replied Adler, weakly.

"So you vas sick? Dot's too bad. Vas you very sick? Iss you sick yet?"

"Yes, I'm still pretty bad off," was the mournful reply.

"Say Mox," inquired the bookmaker, casually, "will you do me a favor?"

"Of course Mr. Wellbaum."

"Vell, den, go die, roared his former employer. "I'll sent you more flower den vas effer seen py a funeral in Manhattan.

Wallbaum was booking at the Ingleside track at Frisco and a jumping race was next on the card. His outside man, a gent named Isaacs, brought him in information that the favorite, as they say in racing parlance, was "dead" or, expressed in plain English, was not intended to win.

The opening price was 8 to 5, and Wallbaum immediately put up 2 to 1, only to notice that his neighbor was laying 3 to 1. Rubbing, he started to chalk up four when the lookout informed him there was five, and he changed it to six. In a few minutes the news pervaded the ring, and the price soared like a rocket, with the public refusing to bet a dollar. Wellbaum disgustedly quit at fifteen.

"Dot's a fine lobster you pringed me," he snorted at his assistant.

Just then a swarthy featured Brasilian meandered up and extended two silver dollars to the man on the block.

"Deesa, deesa, deesa one," he gurgled, pointing to the disgraced favorite.

Wallbaum eyed him critically. "You want to bet on dis vun?" he asked.

"Ya, ya, deesa one, deesa one," wheezed the foreigner.

"But, my frent, dot vun iss a lobster," exclaimed the bookmaker placidly.

"Ya, ya, deesa one, deesa one, two doll," persisted the bettor.

"My frent, you don't shpeak English?" questioned Wallabaum earnestly.

"No, no,"

"Und also you don't undershtand English?"

"No, no."

"Dot's vot I t'ot, because even if you couldn't shpeak English if you shust could understand it every sucker on de race track vould haf told you dis iss a lobster. I keep your $2 because, if not, somepody else vould take it away from you anyvay.

The death occurred this morning at ten o'clock at his late residence, 615 George street, of Mr. Robert E. Shera, at the age of sixty-three years. He was born in Cobourg and came to Peterborough forty years ago. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Wareham. On coming to Peterborough he entered the employ of the Dickson Lumber Company and remained with that company until their interests were taken over by the Peterborough Lumber Co., when he came superintendent of their mills at Burnham's Point, which position he held until the time of his illness. His death was the result of an accident when he was seriously injured at the mills some three years ago. The late Mr. Shera was a recognized authority on timber and timber limits. He was widely known and highly respected throughout this section of the country.

New York Stock Market

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

NEW YORK, April 11.— Trading was rather slow to-day. U. S. Smelting sold up to 2, to a new high record at 77. Otherwise the market was dull itself.

BRITAIN PURCHASED 250,000,000 LBS. OF COPPER

Options Were Exercised and Contracts Definitely Closed.

New York, April 10.—The purchases of copper by the British Government during the past few days aggregated at least 250,000,000 pounds. This tonnage was not covered by a blanket order, but comprised large blocks on which options had been given to Great Britain by several of the largest American copper producers. These options were exercised and the transactions definitely closed on the basis of a price that will very closely approximate 27 cents a pound.

Active negotiations are now under way for other big transactions that may rival even the enormous business just closed.

Conservative authorities express the opinion that the entire 1916 output of American copper has nearly all been sold.

RUSSIA CANCELS ALL EXPORTS TO ROUMANIA

BERLIN, (by wireless to Sayville, L. I.), April 11.—"The Russian government has cancelled all permits for exports to Roumania, according to a despatch from Bucharest," says the Overseas Agency to-day.

"This measure is considered an outcome of the recent Paris conference of the Entente, and as having been taken in order to put pressure upon neutrals and multiply the difficulties of relations with the Central Powers, with whom Roumania's commercial relations have recently been drawn closer."

STARVING BELGIANS AWAY FROM THE FRONTIER

Several recent indications point to the fact that the Germans in Belgium intend to entirely clear the region immediately next to the frontier of its inhabitants with a view presumably to further facilitating their strict control of the Dutch boundary. They have already evacuated the strip of country situated between their two barbed-wire fences in a part of Flanders, and the arrival here of many refugees from the Belgian villages of Putte (situated just north of Antwerp,) strengthens the view generally held in the frontier districts that the people who have so far stuck to their homes in the rest of this zone will, in due course, suffer the same fate.

The latest lot of fugitives, men, women and children, fled through the barbed-wire entanglement of the first German barrier in order to escape the more bitter want reigning in their village. It was a sad sight, these penniless and homeless people who arrived in the market place in their wagons, there to apply to the Dutch police for a temporary shelter and for a ticket enabling them to proceed to one of the Belgian refugee camps in this country. The immediate reason for their expatriation was that for a fortnight past the Germans have refused to allow any further food to be brought to this region prisoned between their two formidable barbed-wire fences, while from the Dutch side practically nothing could reach the villagers.

Mrs. Skinflint—Did you hire that poor little girl to shovel off the sidewalk?

Skinflint—Yes; she is going to do it for something to eat, and she will not eat half as much as a boy.

BISHOP OF VERDUN SAYS TOWN IS SAFE

May Demolish Houses, But They Will Never Get the Place

Left Ruined Town For Paris on Footboard of a Locomotive.

Paris, April 11.—Monsignor Ginisty, Bishop of Verdun, is the latest arrival in Paris from the shell-swept city, whose cathedral and bishop's palace are now in the centre of smoking ruins. The Bishop departed from the city on the footboard of a locomotive, the only means of conveyance which was available for a civilian. He came to Paris to see those of his parishioners who have taken refuge here. Regarding conditions at Verdun in the last days of his stay there, he said:

"During five days of intense bombardment I went back and forth from the cathedral to the bishop's palace to encourage the inhabitants, although there really was nothing but valor in Verdun. I accompanied to the railway station the last convoy of civilians to leave, and then returned to the palace. But I could not remain there, as the military authorities ordered everyone out.

"I set forth on Saturday evening. There were no more trains for civilians, no more horses, automobiles or other conveyances. At the railway station I found a locomotive which was just about to leave for water. I jumped on the footboard, and the engineer consented to take me as far as the locomotive was going. I made the rest of the way on foot to a hospital behind the front.

"The Germans are assailing Verdun with fury, but while their shells may demolish houses, they will never get the town."

The Bishop has established temporary headquarters at Bar-le-Duc, 30 miles south of Verdun, to care for the homeless persons who have been compelled to leave Verdun.

ELECTS MEDICINE CAREFULLY

Purgatives are dangerous. They gripe, cause burning pains and make the constipated condition worse. Physicians say the most ideal laxative is Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Buchu Nut; they are exceedingly mild composed only of health-giving vegetable extracts. Dr. Hamilton's Pills restore activity to the bowels, strengthen the stomach and purify the blood. For constipation, sick headache, biliousness, and disordered digestion, no medicine on earth makes such remarkable cures as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Try a 25c box yourself.

SMITH IS COMING BACK NOT UNDER ARREST

REGINA, Sask., April 11.—E. L. M. Smith the missing bank manager, for whom a warrant has been issued for arrest in connection with the alleged roadwork frauds by J. P. Brown, late of the Highways Department, Provincial Government, will return at once not under arrest.

Word was received to-night from the Chief of the St. Paul police that Smith was willing to return, not as an arrested party, and a member of the Saskatchewan Provincial Police leaves to-night to escort him back.

Smith is also suspected to be an important witness in charges of bribery of members of the Legislature, now before the Royal Commission, and is expected to be back in time to give evidence at the sitting on Saturday.

THE CAUSE OF ANAEMIA

It is universally known that iron is a very important element of the blood, and lack of it is the direct cause of run-down conditions and anaemic. It may interest our readers to know that Druggists McDermid & Jury and E. L. Payne, of this town, have in Vinol a reliable, constitutional remedy for such conditions. Vinol supplies iron to the blood in its most soluble state, then there's the nourishing properties of beef peptone and the medicinal curative extractives of fresh cod livers, without oil, all dissolved in a pure native tonic wine. That's what makes Vinol so successful in overcoming run-down and anaemic conditions.

$1,100,000 AUCTION SALE IN HALF AN HOUR

NEW YORK, April 11.—The first ship auction ever held in this country netted $1,100,000 in 25 minutes yesterday. The sale took place on the floor of the Maritime Exchange and as prospective buyers Joseph P. Day, the auctioneer, had the Four Hundred of New York's shipping business.

A motor tanker building at Baltimore, delivery on which was promised for August 31, 1916, was sold to Max Strauss, son of Max Strauss, General Manager of the Russian-American Line, who bid $509,000. He said he represented a Norwegian owner.

The second steamer sold was a 7,500-ton general cargo steamer in course of construction at the yards of the Seattle Construction and Shipbuilding Company, Seattle, Wash. Her contract calls for delivery on the Pacific Coast July 12, 1917. On an offer of $660,000 the Universal Transportation Company took the steamer.

Face Peeling Habit Becoming Fashionable

Women of fashion and refinement in this country as in Europe seem to have been acquiring the mercolized wax habit, depending less and less upon cosmetics for their complexion difficulties. It does seem a lot easier to just peel off the wornout skin when it loses its youthful color and appearance—now that this can be done so easily, safely, painlessly and economically. There's no trouble getting mercolized wax at any drug store (an ounce will do), since its virtues have become generally known here, and there's no trouble using it—just as you use cold cream, applying at night, washing it off next morning. The wax takes off the old scarf skin, in tiny flakes, a little each day. The new under-skin which gradually appears, is velvety soft and beautifully white, radiant with girlish loveliness. Any surface trouble like pimples, red or yellow patches, freckles, etc., vanishes of course with the discarded cuticle.

It has also become the fashion, when wrinkles begin to appear, to bathe the face once a day for a while in a harmless solution made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. This is remarkably effective in erasing the hateful lines.

MUST NOT SELL WILD FOWL

"Market" Hunters Wiped Out by New Order—Many Important Game Regulations Passed

GAME COMMITTEE DECIDES

The Fish and Game Committee of the Ontario Legislative has decided that the "market shooter must be wiped out, and they passed a law prohibiting the sale of wild duck, wild geese or any wild water fowl. The object of the law is to put out of business men who stood for monetary purposes and slay the fowl in great numbers for the purpose of supplying the retail markets. The committee also passed an amendment to the present act prohibiting any non-resident of the province to carry or shoot with a gun without a license from the province.

IMPORTANT CHANGES.

Other important laws passed were: Prohibition of trapping fur-bearing animals without a license, which is to cost $5, farmers and farmers' sons exempt; close season partridge and grouse until October 15, 1918; close season for woodcock except between Nov. 1 and 15; shooting of quail allowed from Nov. 1 to Nov. 15, with provision that no more than six quail be shot in one day nor more than 25 shot in one season. Shooting season for black and grey squirrels and wild turkey to be for the same period; ducks may be shot anywhere in province from Sept 1 to December 31; in Ontario reduced from $50 to $25.

MUST NOT WASTE FOOD.

The committee decided on a close season for cottontail rabbits can be shot on a person's own property at any time or taken by other means anywhere at any time; when cottontails are shot they can be kept by the shooter instead of being turned over to charitable institutions as formerly; muskrat season fixed at Dec. 1 to April 30 for the south district and at April 1 to May 30 for north district, the shooting of muskrats at any time prohibited; no hunter shall leave the carcase of any animal which he has shot and the meat of which would be good to eat, to spoil in the woods, and no hunter shall allow the skin of a fur-bearing animal to spoil in the woods.

ALLOW MORE DECOYS

After listening to prominent hunters the committee decided to allow the number of decoys to be set in a flock to be 50 instead of cutting the number to 25 as formerly favored. Shooters can shoot within 100 yards of each other, but no closer, and flocks of decoys are to be placed no closer. The committee finished its work for this session.

CHAMPION CANOEIST KILLED IN FRANCE

The casualty list published yesterday contains the name of one of the greatest canoeists in Canada—Pte. Allister McKenzie. He came to Toronto from Muskoka to attend University in Toronto, and while here paddled in singles and doubles with the Toronto Canoe Club. He was a splendid athlete, and, besides his clever work as a canoeist, was also a good gymnast and wrestler.

WORLD'S FUTURE FISH SUPPLIES.

The sea bends upon 25,000 miles of Alaska shore line, a distance greater than the circumference of the earth. All of the vast stretch of water is teeming with the most edible fish on earth. Every bay is a harbour where these fish can be prepared for the markets of the world, and the greatest ships afloat can anchor in safety while taking on their cargo of food for the hungry of all climes. In a few years Alaskan fish will be famous wherever ships sail and men exchange the products of their toil.

SCIENCE IN AIR "SNIPING."

LONDON, April 11—The Mail's correspondent at the British headquarters, who has been studying the work of the famous German airman, Lieut. Immelmann, says in a despatch printed recently:

"Immelmann is a doughty enemy, but his methods are less heroic than scientific. He does not seek adventure as such or run avoidable risks; but he hunts deliberately with the single aim of destroying enemy aircraft. His plan is simple but effective. He mounts to a great height—usually 18,000 feet, which of course can only be reached under favorable weather and cloud conditions.

"Thus he has great reserve of speed and striking power and can observe with impunity even well over the British line, because the anti-aircraft artillery cannot reach him. As soon as he observes an enemy plane below he swoops in one long, straight and even dive. His plan is to pass in a rapid diagonal just behind the enemy at whom he fires continually as soon as he comes within range. It is hit or miss with him.

"Just as some hawks strike once—and once only—and if they fail they make no effort to retrieve the issue, so with Immelmann. Whatever his success or lack of success while emptying his drum of bullets he does not alter his tactics. He makes no effort to pursue but continues to dive until its brings him safely home."

Afflicted with Lame Back

THREE YEARS AGO

COULD NOT SWEEP THE FLOOR.

Women are coming to understand that weak, lame and aching backs from which they suffer so much excruciating pain and agony are due to wrong action of the kidneys.

The kidneys are overtaxed—given more work than they can do, and when the back aches and pains it is hard for a woman to look after her household duties, for no woman can be strong and well when the kidneys are out of order.

On the first sign of any weakness in the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken. They go right to the seat of the trouble, cure the weak, aching back, and prevent any serious kidney trouble liable to follow.

Mrs. L. Goudshaw, 683 Manning Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I take great pleasure in writing you, stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About three years ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad I could not even sweep the floor. I was advised to use Doan's Kidney Pills, and before I had used one box there was a great improvement, and my back was completely cured. I highly recommend 'Doan's' for lame back."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"Flower of the Gorse"

BY LOUIS TRACY

"Yes, Dear. He risked his life for your sake, and carried you here unaided."

"A good man," came the low murmur. "I was not worthy of him."

"Mother, you are to try and sleep now. The doctor's orders must be obeyed. Otherwise you will be very, very ill."

"I am sick unto death already, dear one. But I shall do as you bid—to please you—and John. One word! Tell him—tell him—that I am poorer than when I left him. Rupert is here. He gloated over my downfall. He knows everything, and would hear of no terms. No, it is not Raymond's doing. I asked that. He met some man, who knew us in the old days, and who had read the account of the wreck. I am a pauper of sorts, Yvonne. Please ask your father not to turn me out."

"Mother!" wailed the girl in a voice strangled with grief. "You must not talk like that! You'll break my heart!"

"Ah, tout passe, Yvonne, even broken hearts! You will be far happier in your cottage than ever I was in a mansion. Yes, I'll sleep—if only to please you—and John. Tell him I said that, will you?"

Next morning Ingersoll, who, thanks to the exertion demanded after the plunge into the river, was not one whit the worse for the wetting, sent the following telegram to Bennett:

"Rupert Fosdyke met his death here last night, and Mrs. Carmac was nearly drowned. Both events closely bound up with succession to Carmac estate. Probably you will understand. Can you come at once? —Ingersoll."

That afternoon came the erply:

"Profoundly distressed. Crossing to-night. Wire reports concerning Mrs. Carmac's health Southampton and St. Malo.—Bennett."

Yvonne wept with sheer gratitude when her father said that, with Dr. Garnier's permission, he would visit her mother. She had not dared to suggest it; but Ingersoll knew that his action had added one more link to the chain of love that bound his daughter and himself. Dr. Garnier, of course, was aware of no reason why the woman should not meet her rescuer; though he might have been startled had he seen the look of terror that darkened her eyes when she found her husband bending over her.

"Don't be afraid, Stella," said he. "I am not here to reproach you. Be content, and live! We want you to live, Yvonne and I."

"John, forgive!" she murmured.

"I do forgive, Stella, as I hope to be forgiven!"

"John, how could I have left you?"

"That is all passed now—merged in the mists of long years. You will be made happy here. I mean what I say. You are in Yvonne's care, and in mine, and always in God's. Believe that, and you will soon be restored to health and to such happiness as life can bring."

She sobbed convulsively, and he called Yvonne in haste, thinking that perhaps he had done more harm than good. However, the invalid rallied after he had gone, and seemed to gain strength, though slowly. Next day she was wracked by the first symptoms of pneumonia.

When Bennett arrived she was conscious and free from pain. He had not been seated by the bedside many minutes before he put a curious question.

"Do you feel able to sign a will?" he said.

She smiled wistfully. "Have you not been told?" she said. "I shall lose everything. My second marriage can be proved illegal."

"I am not quite sure of that. I only want you to pull through this present illness. But this well to prepare against all eventualities. Would you wish to constitute your daughter your sole heiress?"

She was beyond the reach of surprise, and contented herself with a fervent yes.

"I have prepared the necessary documents. Listen now, while I read."

and the woman's weary, puzzled eyes dwelt on the lawyer's grave face as he recited the testamentary clauses by which "Stella Ingersoll, otherwise known as Stella Carmac," left all her real and personal estate to "her daughter, Yvonne Ingersoll."

"Now we'll get witnesses, and remember that you sign your name Stella Ingersoll," said the lawyer, with a cheerful and businesslike air. "Mr. Tollemache will be one witness, my clerk another, and little Barbe Pitou a third; so you need not worry at all because of the change of signature."

Forthwith, in the presence of Lorry and Bennett's clerk, and the scared Barbe, Mrs. Carmac signed her name in a way that was strangely familiar, though she had not seen it written that way during two decades. A precisely similar will was executed in the name of "Stella Carmac."

Bennett had not erred in his judgment. The pneumonia developed a high temperature that night, and Yvonne's mother died without recovering consciousness. She was buried at Nizon. To silence gossip, and by her husband's emphatic wish, she was described on the monument erected to her memory and to that of Walter Carmac as "Stella, wife of the above-named Walter Carmac, and formerly known as Stella Ingersoll."

The lawyer's extraordinary haste and anxiety with regard to the two wills was explained after the funeral. "I have always had reason to believe that the validity of the marriage might be questioned," he said, when he had drawn Ingersoll, Yvonne, and Tollemache into the privacy of the studio. "When Mr. Carmac executed the will which may now, under advice, be set aside, he caused two copies to be made with blank spaces for names and dates. A few days later he lodged a sealed envelop with me and another with his bankers, and each bore the superscription:

"'This document is to be kept always in its present condition, and never opened unless my wife's succession to my estate shall be disputed. In that event the document must be produced and acted on.'

"I broke the seal yesterday, soon after Mr. Ingersoll's telgram came to hand, and was not surprised to find a will, properly filled in, signed, and attested, leaving Carmac's estate to 'Stella Ingersoll, formerly wife of John Ingersoll, artist, at one time resident in the Rue Blanche, Paris,' and dated subsequently to that already in existence. So, you see, all these tragic happenings might have been averted. Rupert Fosdyke could never have touched a penny of his uncle's money beyond the provision made for him in both wills."

But a white-faced girl looked at her father, and their eyes met, and each knew that a Power not of be controlled by any human agency had brought about the horrors that had agitated their beloved village during that memorable month.

And, when the clouds disappeared, and the sun shone on a Brittany pink with apple blossoms, Yvonne herself had to ask that absurd fellow Lorry whether or not he really wanted to marry her, because he was hanging back shamefacedly, for no better reason apparently than the ridiculous one that he had no right to woo and wed a girl so rich as she. At least if she didn't exactly say did the next thing to it by telling him that she and her father had decided to regard themselves merely as trustees of the Carmac millions for the benefit of their fellows. They would touch little, if any, of the money for personal needs. The notion was thoroughly distasteful to both, and they would help each other to find the best and wisest means of getting rid of the incubus.

"So, you see, Lorry, with the exception of some of my mother's jewellery, which I know she would wish me to keep and wear, I shall be quite poor," said Yvonne demurely.

That settled matters completely. They were in a secluded part of the Bois d'Amour. How could locality be better named? The wedding took place before the summer, and they roamed through Switzerland in June.

Madeleine? Madeleine is a certificated nurse in a big Paris hospital, very smart in her nice uniform, and thoroughly devoted to her profession.

Peridot? What French jury would convict Peridot of murder when his story was told? His advocate almost moved the judge to righteous indignation against the iniquitous Fosdyke, and Peridot was let off with a light sentence. He came back to Pont Aven, was received with open arms by the village, and sailed away in his own vague to pursue the elusive sardine. Last year he married little Barbe. So Mere Pitou's views anent fishermen as husbands must have been modified by Peridot's ownership of a fine boat and good money invested in French rentes.

Pont Aven, save for the riotous month of August, is still unchanged. A new house springs up here and there, and rumour has it that sometime soon, maybe when the gorse is in flower next summer, a new hotel will replace the old one which has to be coaxed daily to Port Manech and back during the season.

But that is all—nothing to make a song about. Mademoiselle Julia, ever busy, growing younger each year, still cracks jokes and encourages art; though, to be sure, her opinion of cubism and futurist pictures is distinctly unfavourable to both forms of excess. She is always ready with a smile and the right word. If, for instance, anyone asks her if she knew Yvonne, and Ingersoll, and Lorry, and where Mere Pitou's cottage stands, you should see the way she jerks her head on one side, and hear her rattle out, with a merry twinkle in her eyes:

"Qu'est-ce que tu veux que je te dise, moi?"

THE END.

APPEALING TO PUPILS.

Germany Seeks Subscriptions to War Loans from Scholars.

With subscriptions to the fourth German war loan scarcely under way, appeals to the school children to repeat their efforts during the earlier loans are already being sent out. This time especial emphasis is being laid on the possibility of pupils in higher schools, who are now or have been earning money of their own, subscribing even more than they did last time.

School children subscribed to the loan about forty million marks, it is estimated. In twenty institutions in Berlin alone the pupils put in 83,683 marks in sums of from one mark upward. To encourage a repetition of this willingness to subscribe, the magistrate of Berlin has arranged to supply to the schools such clerical necessities as appeals to parents, receipts and subscription blanks, so that no school will be under any expense and may subscribe, clear, as much as possible.

Many boys in higher schools, it is said, have of late been earning even more money than many adult in normal times, and yet, of course, do not have an adult's expenses. "These higher schools and continuation schools must be mobilized," says the first appeal. "These sums must wherever possible be made liquidable for the fourth war loan."

A WEAK CHESTED BOY.

"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and cramps on her head," writes Mr. E. W. Lear, Port Elmsford, Nfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her and on recommendation of a friend I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

LIFE.

What am I, Life? A thing of watery salt
Held in cohesion by unresting cells
Which work they know not why, which never halt;
Myself unwitting where their Master dwells,
I do not bid them, yet they toil, they spin
A world which uses me as I use them.
Nor do I know which end or which begin,
Nor which to praise, which pamper, which condemn.

So like a marvel in a marvel set,
I answer to the vast, as wave by wave
The sea of air goes over, dry or wet.
Or the full moon comes swimming from her cave
Or the great sun comes north; this myriad I
Tingles, not knowing how, yet wondering why.

—John Masefield, in the January Atlantic.

TO SAVE EYES

Is the object of This Free Prescription—Try It If your Eyes Give You Trouble.

Thousands of people suffer from eye troubles because they do not know what to do. They know some good home remedy for every other minor ailment, but none for their eye troubles. They neglect their eyes, because the trouble is not sufficient to drive them to an eye specialist, who would, anyway, charge them a heavy fee. As a last resort they go to an optician or to the 5c and 10c-cent store, BUT oftentimes put glasses that they do not need, or which, after being used a few months, do their eyes more injury than good.

Here is a simple prescription that every one should use: 5 grains Bon-Opto dissolved in ½ glass of water. Use three or four times a day to bathe the eyes. This prescription and the simple Bon-Opto method keeps the eyes clean, sharpens the vision and quickly overcomes inflammation and irritation; weak, watery, overworked, tired eyes and other similar troubles are greatly benefited and oftentimes cured by its use. Many reports show that wearers of glasses have discarded them after a few weeks' use.

It is good for the eyes, and contains no ingredient which would injure the most sensitive eyes of an infant or the aged. Your own druggist can fill this prescription or the Warner Drug Co., of Toronto will fill it for you, postpaid, for 75c and handy Bon-Opto Eye Cup Cabinet is included. Don't wear glasses if you don't have to.

A prominent City Physician to whom the above quotation was referred, said: "Bon-Opto is a good preparation for the purpose for which it is recommended. Its continuous use will relieve many cases of eye trouble, and I have no hesitation in recommending it to my patients."

The Warner Drug Co. fills many Bon-Opto prescriptions, and will gladly fill yours.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Forgotten Ediet

Historical Story of the Sixteenth Century

By F. A. MITCHEL

Harry, the great king, the bluff king, he who married six wives and beheaded two of them, was dead, and his son Edward, a mere lad, was on the throne of Great Britain. But the boy being too young to govern, the Duke of Somerset, having assumed the title of lord protector, was sovereign in his stead in all but in name.

But Somerset was supplanted by John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland, an ambitious man, and planned that the crown should rest upon the heads of his descendants. Having married his son, Lord Guilford Dudley, to Lady Jane Grey, who had royal blood in her veins, before the young Edward died in 1553, the duke persuaded Edward to name his daughter-in-law to succeed him.

It was on May day of this year that a number of young persons were dancing around a pole in a field in the county of Essex. Among them was young Robert Woodville, son of Sir Thomas Woodville, a young man much beloved by all who knew him. Many a lass cast covetous eyes upon him, but they were all forced to give way to Mary Edmonson, who was the most comely, and withal, modest and amiable.

These two were swinging round the circle hand in hand when a man rode up to Woodville and asked to have speech with him apart from the others. The dancing stopped, for there was a grave look on the stranger's face, and all waited while Woodville and he talked earnestly, but in low tones. The newcomer appeared to be endeavoring to persuade the young man to something which he did not approve. Presently Woodville broke away from him, beckoned Mary Edmonson aside and said to her:

"The young King Edward is dead and has named Lady Jane Grey to be his successor. There will be other claimants—Mary, the late king's daughter by his first wife, Catherine of Arragon, and Elizabeth, his daughter by his second wife, Anne Boleyn. This man is an emissary of the Duke of Northumberland, beating up adherents for his daughter-in-law, the Lady Jane Grey. He offers me a commission in the army and when Jane is firmly established on the throne a position at court. I am persuaded to accept his offer."

"I beg that you will not," replied the girl. "The rightful sovereign is Mary, the daughter of the only rightful wife of the late King Henry. The Duke of Northumberland will bring sorrow on the poor girl, on whose head he is endeavoring to place a crown. More likely he will set an ax to her neck. She is too young to decide such a matter for herself or she would refuse to be made the dupe of her father-in-law."

"No one," replied Robert, "can tell where the crown will eventually rest. If on the head of the Princess Mary, I gain nothing; if on the head of Lady Jane, and I help to place it there, our wedding, instead of taking place among rustics, will be celebrated within a palace."

"Nay, rather, in a dungeon."

"No, no, sweetheart. I have confidence in the duke. Think of the place I shall be able to offer you as one of the supporters of the successful claimant."

Ambition proved stronger than the pleadings of the girl, and the end of the matter was that Woodville went off to London to report in person to Lord Guilford Dudley, who had sent for him, while the messenger went on to enlist further recruits.

Well had it been for the young man had he listened to the advice of his betrothed. The Lady Jane Grey at first refused to accept a crown to which she knew she was not entitled, but was at last persuaded by the entreaties of her father-in-law and her husband to accept it. She was queen but nine days when her adherents were overpowered, and the Princess Mary, afterward called Bloody Mary, became sovereign. The Duke of Northumberland, Lord Guilford Dudley and Lady Jane Grey were imprisoned in the Tower of London and later suffered death on Tower hill.

News came to Mary Edmonson of the collapse of the scheme her lover had supported and that he was a prisoner in the Tower of London. Mary was a ward in chancery to a man of the law named Roger Bradford. To Bradford she went and implored him to go with her to London and defend her lover when he should be tried for high treason. But when the lawyer learned that Woodville had been one of Lord Guilford Dudley's lieutenants in the conspiracy he told Mary that any defense was useless. The queen was very bitter against the conspirators and was resolved to punish all who were concerned in the plot.

"But," added Bradford, "I will try and think up a plan by which Robert Woodville may escape death. Come to me on the morrow, and if my knowledge of the law serves me I will tell you."

When Mary went to him the next day he told her that the only way he could get her lover out of the Tower was to accuse him of having committed a crime against the church. The government might consider a sacrilege of more importance than high treason. If he could bring Woodville to his home to be tried for an offense against religion he would have an advantage. But if he were acquitted the sovereign would claim him to be tried as a traitor.

"What I propose," added the lawyer in conclusion, "is to bring him here if possible, try him for sacrilege and convict him."

"Convict him?" exclaimed Mary.

"Yes. He must be convicted."

"And the punishment?"

"He will be hanged."

Mary could see no advantage in being hanged over dying at the block, but Bradford, who knew more law than most of his craft, told her that there was a royal edict on the records which might help him to save her lover's life. It was a hundred years old, belonging to a period when matters of justice were very crude. With more civilized methods of court procedure it had become obsolete, but had never been repealed.

A church bear by where Robert Woodville lived had been robbed and the communion service taken. Roger Bradford had got wind of the thief, and after forming his plan to get possession of the body of Robert Woodville he sent for the man who had confessed the sacrilege and asked for a piece of the silver communion service. Having received it he gave it to Mary Edmonson and told her to place it in Woodville's house. This she did, and the next day a search was made of the house and the plate found there.

Bradford went to London and demanded the body of Robert Woodville that he might be placed on trial for the stealing of the church plate. The lieutenant of the Tower refused to give up Woodville, since he was to be tried for high treason. Bradford insisted that his demand be referred to the queen. Mary declined to consider a crime against herself in preference to one against the church. She ordered that Woodville be sent to his native county to be tried for sacrilege, but that he be returned in case he was not convicted, to be tried for high treason.

The queen's order must be obeyed to the letter, and bringing Woodville from the Tower would be of no avail unless he were convicted. As soon as he arrived he was brought into court, and the person who had found the plate in the accused man's home having sworn to the fact, Woodville was convicted and sentenced to be hanged. No defense was made; none would have secured the prisoner's acquittal, and it did not accord with Bradford's plan that the trial should result in an acquittal.

An officer of the queen's household had been sent with the prisoner from London to bring him back in case he should not be found guilty. This man insisted that Woodville be hanged immediately, since he had orders not to leave while the prisoner lived. But Roger Bradford succeeded in getting a stay while the condemned man's betrothed went to London to petition the queen for a pardon. The officer yielded, though he assured the lawyer that there was no hope of a pardon.

Bradford, accompanied by Mary Edmonson, at once set off for London, and on their arrival the former went to the Tower and demanded to be permitted to inspect the statutes deposited there. As an attorney he was not to be denied this privilege, and, going to the rooms where the rolls of parchment bearing edicts of England's sovereigns were kept, he found one which he copied.

The next morning he asked for an audience of the queen, basing his request on the fact that if his client Robert Woodville were hanged the execution would be illegal. This excited at once an interest in the queen, and she granted the audience, giving permission also for Mary Edmonson to be present.

As soon as the two were in the queen's presence Bradford said:

"May it please your majesty, this girl, Mary Edmonson, claims for her husband Robert Woodville, sentenced to be hanged for sacrilege."

"If it pleases the wench," replied the queen, "to marry a man who is to die she has our royal permission."

"I hold in my hand," rejoined Bradford, "a copy of an edict of his majesty King Edward IV, decreeing that if any man sentenced to death within his royal domain and a woman shall claim him in marriage he shall go free."

"Have you seen the record of this edict?"

"I have, your majesty."

"And it has never been repealed?"

"It has not, your majesty."

"Then I will repeal it."

"This may be your majesty's right or it may be only the right of the parliament. In either case it cannot be made ex post facto."

"Do you alone possess a knowledge of this edict?"

"So far as I know, your majesty."

The queen thought, "Might not others who conspired against me avail themselves of this method of escaping punishment?"

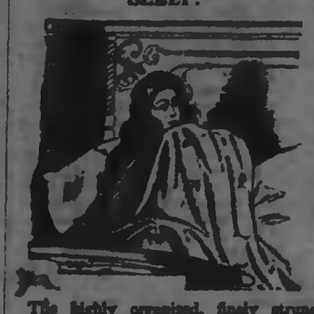
"I will issue a pardon in this case," she said presently. "But if we hear of this edict of my ancestor and predecessor before we are ready to take steps for its repeal you will incur our royal displeasure."

When Mary Edmonson returned to her home she bore a pardon for her lover.

Mary chose to be married on the same graveward from which her betrothed had gone to support the cause of Lady Jane Grey. When they had been pronounced man and wife she said to her husband:

"This is a better place for our wedding than a palace. The Lady Jane was wedded in a palace."

"WHY WOMEN CANNOT SLEEP."



The highly organized, finely strung nervous system of women subjects them to terrors of nervous apprehension which no man can ever appreciate.

The poise of mind, the mental poise and calmness under difficulties, which are necessary for happy womanhood, are only possible when the sensitive organism is in a perfectly healthy condition. If there be any derangement in this respect no remedy in the world so completely restores womanly health as the wonderful "Favorite Prescription" invented by Dr. R. V. Pierce.

Chatham, Ont.—"A few years ago I suffered a general break-down and got very weak and thin. I was in an awful state. I was very much discouraged and at times thought I would lose my mind. I knew of Dr. Pierce's medicines so I got his 'Favorite Prescription.' It gave me immediate relief, and completely cured me in a very short time. My sister used it with good results also. She was in a very delicate condition. I got her to take it and two bottles cured her completely.

"I take great pleasure in recommending Dr. Pierce's medicines; they are all that is recommended of them."—Miss. Margaret Bryant, 37 Park Ave., Chatham, Ont.

Unsightly Pimples Covered His Face.

All diseases and blemishes of the skin are caused by the blood being in an impure condition.

You cannot make a good complexion from the outside; you must get to the seat of the trouble. You must make the blood pure and rich by taking a medicine that will drive out all the impurities and poisons from the blood; one that drives out everything from the system that is the cause of these unsightly skin eruptions.

The best blood cleansing medicine on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters; a medicine that has been used with the greatest success for the past forty years; a medicine you don't experiment with when you buy it.

Mr. Lennox D. Cooke, Indian Path, N.S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. Last winter my face was covered with pimples. I tried different kinds of medicine, and all seemed to fail. I was one day to a friend's house, and there they advised me to use B.B.B., so I purchased two bottles, and before I had them taken I found I was getting better. I got two more, and when they were finished I was completely cured. I find it is a great blood purifier, and I recommend it to all."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

PILES Do not suffer another day with itching, blind, bleeding or protruding Piles. No surgical operation required. Self Poisoning by Food

The food which is taken to nourish the body and keep up vigor and strength becomes a poison to the system when digestion fails. You feel drowsy after meals, lose appetite, suffer from constipation, have pains in the bowels and through the body. Instead of being digested, the food ferments and gives rise to gas or wind on the stomach, which crowds about the heart, causing suffocating feelings and derangements of the heart's action.

Resort to aids to digestion cannot afford more than temporary relief, for the trouble is caused by torpid, sluggish action of the liver and bowels. These organs must be awakened so that they will filter the poisons from the blood and remove from the system the accumulating waste matter.

Here lies the cause of indigestion and dyspepsia, and neglect only leads to chronic and complicated derangements, which destroy all comfort and shorten life.

The ideal treatment for indigestion is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, because they promptly and positively remove the cause of trouble. Acting directly and specifically on the liver, kidneys and bowels, they cleanse the system of all impurities, and their occasional use keeps these filtering and excretory organs regular and active. The blood is purified, pains and aches disappear, and such derangements as indigestion, constipation, biliousness, backach and kidney derangements are cured.

One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations disappoint.

TRIED TO STOP WARS

Doukhobors and Quakers Made Spectacular Attempts to Keep Peace

Hen. Ford had had many forerunners in connection with other singular conflicts in the past, but history does not record the success of any one of them. Perhaps the nearest approach to such a result was attained by the famous "Three Quakers," who, in 1854, on the eve of the outbreak of the Crimean War, journeyed all the way from London to St. Petersburg in order to try and induce the Czar Nicholas to favor peace methods. The names of these three gentlemen were Henry Pease, Joseph Sturge and Robert Charlton. They left England amid a storm of ridicule, but greatly to everybody's surprise the Czar received them with every mark of favor. Later on, however, when he learned the furiously warlike tone of the British Press, his manner changed entirely, and the three self-accredited peace envoys returned, chagrined and disappointed, to their own country. The first sound that greeted their ears on their arrival at Gravesend was the thunder of the Tower guns announcing to the citizens of London that the war they had striven so hard to avert had that moment been declared.

Other pacificists have fared far worse. During Wellington's campaign in the Peninsula, for instance, three cranky individuals who tried to stop the war by fomenting a sort of strike amongst the soldiers, were hanged for their pains; though not by Wellington's orders, or even, it is believed, with his knowledge. During the last Russo-Turkish war, again, several "doukhobors"—a Russian sect of teetotal vegetarians who advocate the doctrine of non-resistance—were summarily executed for preaching their peculiar views to the soldiers in the trenches.

"Throw down your arms," they said. "Refuse to fight, return the Turks good for evil; then there can be no more war, since it takes two to make a quarrel." To the eternal credit of the Czar Alexander be it said he refused, as soon as he realized the earnestness of these people, to sanction any more executions. The doukhobor peace missionaries were simply interned until the war was over. Some time afterwards, as they insisted on continuing their propaganda, the entire doukhobor community, to the number of some ten thousand souls, were packed off to Canada, where they settled on a large tract of land set aside for them by the Dominion Government.

Preserving King's English

A story is going the rounds of the London clubs concerning a certain British divisional general who greatly objects to what he thinks slang. For instance, in their reports, his under officers must speak of a "sniper" as a "observation-scoter"; a "trench" must be called an "earthwork." In the "earthworks" the Britisher is out to speak of a certain German shell and its mutilation as a "whizbang" or "pip-squeak," but in the reports only a "light high velocity gun" appears.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES.

"My boy, Frank, seemed weak abouts and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Ningo, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him. No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

LEAVES COLLEGE TO JOIN THE AMERICAN LEGION.

Tired of the humdrum life in college, Edgar T. Adams, son of a wealthy Mason, Mich., farmer, enlisted in the American legion on Thursday morning. He was attending the Michigan Agricultural College at Lansing up to a few days ago when, not desiring to seek adventure, the fellow-classmates on foreign soil.

Upon the reports that he will send back from Mexico to college mates depends whether they will enlist or no. A number of them he said are anxious to join the American legion and will leave only Windsor when the present term at college is over.

GIRL LARGE LAND OWNER.

Probably the most extensive girl land owner in Missouri is Mabel Dale, a 14-year-old Yale, Okla., lass, who has just purchased 720 acres of land near Carthage, for $65,000.

She is the daughter of the mayor of Yale and because of her Indian descent acquired land in the famous Cushing oil field from which she gets a royalty said to be $12,000 a month. It is said that thus far she has received $350,000 in royalties.

Her father formerly lived in Carthage and it was upon his advice that his daughter made the investments.

VIOLENT ATTACKS OF DYSPEPSIA

Suffered Tortures Until She Tried "Fruit-a-tives"

Mr. JEAN DE MATHA, Jan. 27th, 1914.

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been made well by "Fruit-a-tives." I suffered so much that at last I would not dare to eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives" and after taking them I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was well. I quickly regained my lost weight—and now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am fully recovered, thanks to 'Fruit-a-tives.'"

IRISH STEW FOR TROOPS.

Order Calls for Beef, Rice, Onions, Carrots and Beans.

Philadelphia is to have a large part in the order of the British Government for 600,000,000 one-pound tins of Irish stew for the men at the front, calling for prodigious quantities of beef, rice, onions, carrots and beans, says the Public Ledger of that city.

Though dietetic experts habitually disagree, and one man's meat is another's anathema, Tommy in the field is likely to agree with some laboratorians at home that this is a good fighting diet, calculated to hold the scurvy at arm's length and easy to prepare under the arduous conditions of field service, where the resources of genteel cookery are not at hand. The Japanese waged war against the Russians upon rice, but Tommy requires something more substantial.

This Irish stew concocted for his behoof appears to be enriched by several ingredients that do not belong to the usual definition. One of the dictionaries says it is "a palatable dish of mutton, onions and potatoes, seasoned and stewed in water mixed with flour." Probably in this country beef is much commoner than mutton, and it is a theme for a sophomere debate or a commencement essay whether it is fair to admit carrots and still call it an orthodox recipe. In any event this lowly dish, first aid to the landlady and not despised by the connoisseur when properly prepared, will be appreciated in the trenches and on shipboard if our culinary artists made it as appetizing as they can.

Sure Way to Get Rid of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

MAP SHOWING LAST WEEK'S GERMAN ADVANCE ON WEST OF THE MEUSE TOWARD VERDUN.

GERMANS DRUGGED BEFORE BATTLE

MAKES TROOPS ABNORMALLY RECKLESS — CONDITION OF PRISONERS PROVES LORD NORTHCLIFFE'S ASSERTION.

For many months mysterious and indefinite reports have come from the battlefields of Europe that the German infantry were being sent forward out of the trenches under the influence of drugs. The first definite statement as to the exact nature of the drug which was being used came the other day from Lord Northcliffe, the proprietor of the London Times and the Daily Mail.

This distinguished British editor was given the unusual privilege of visiting the battlefront at Verdun. So complete an opportunity of observing was given Lord Northcliffe that he was permitted to go forward even into the first line of trenches.

This statement is from Lord Northcliffe's own written words:

"The ether with which they were drugged before facing the French and the giant guns, 2,000 in number, under whose fire they advanced, alone enabled them to survive the terror under the influence of which some of them were almost unable to speak."

Still further Lord Northcliffe says: "This week Thursday, was a black day for Germany, when, drugged with ether, the men came on in mass formation to be mown down by the French 75s and the machine guns."

Another significant observation was his remark that the German prisoners who escaped the raking fire of the French 75s presented a wild, haggard, terrified appearance that would "move a heart of stone."

If the German troops are drugged, is there any drug which would provide a temporary false courage and indifference to danger and yet not react with disastrous results? Does ether fulfill the requirements?

A distinguished New York physician with wide experience in surgery, and the use of anaesthetics, when questioned, did not hesitate to say that ether would have the effect described. Being an American of somewhat pro-German sympathies, he was inclined to resent the suggestion of Lord Northcliffe that it was necessary to drug the German soldiers in this manner, but nevertheless he declared that ether in liquid form in small doses could certainly be administered to give men an abnormal recklessness.

The important point about ether is that it stimulates a man's motor centres and depresses his sensory centres, thus making him abnormally active and daring, while rendering him more or less unconscious of impressions of pain and terror.

A person who has suffered from severe and habitual ether drunkenness, exhibits shivering or trembling of the hands and feet, muscular weakness, cramps in the calves of the legs, pain in the breast and back, intermittent headaches, palpitation, singing in the ears and vomiting. The French newspapers have stated many times that they have found German prisoners presenting all these symptoms. It was supposed that their condition was caused by the poisonous gases of shells or the concussion of shell explosions, but the medical evidence shows that it may have been due to ether.

Jump from Bed in Morning and Drink Hot Water

Tells why everyone should drink hot water each morning before breakfast.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness.

If we all would practice inside-bathing, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic looking, sour, pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms ptomaine-like poisons which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn of constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomachs, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone, its cleansing, sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.

TAKE "CASCARETS" IF HEADACHY, BILIOUS AND CONSTIPATED

Best For Liver And Bowels, Bad Breath Bad Colds, Sour Stomach

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, coated tongue, head and nose clogged up with a cold—always trace this to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months.

EGYPT IS SAFE FROM THE TURKS

Great Britain Has Had Ample Time to Prepare for Attack — Invaders Face Staggering Handicap.

SUEZ, Egypt, April 11.—If it has been necessary for Britain to make a vast expenditure in money, and labour to secure the freedom of the waterway connecting the seas of the East and the West—the expenditure is an insurance premium which no home or colonial Briton will grudge—how much greater must be the adequate preparations of the German? He has to cross a practically waterless waste, with nothing to sustain his army except what he can carry from his base, 100 miles away.

Prudence prompted the British to construct numerous light railways on the eastern side of the canal, and to lay an elaborate system of pipe lines for the water supply. Unless the Turks make similar arrangements over ten times the mileage they cannot bring an army equal in numbers to that which they have to meet, nor keep them opposite the British lines for more than two days, even without a shot being fired at them.

Plan for Serious Attack.

British preparations are planned to resist the most serious attack that could, in any circumstances, be made against Egypt. The British have stores carried miles into the desert by rapid little trains over 100 miles of metalled roads made for wheeled transport. The hum of the motor is carried far in the desert air, but even the aid of almost every modern appliance for speedy locomotion is not sufficient for the purpose.

While long clouds of dust raised on the roads by selfpropelled vehicles tell the story of an up-to-date transport service, you see camel trains moving, as in Pharoah's time, larger, perhaps, than ever before in history, carrying different loads, but in the same slow, methodical, follow-my-leader way.

This curious blend of ancient and modern transport is necessary and desirable to bring to the service of the army every possible means of carriage, and it is due to the employment of all available resources that such astonishing defensive works have been completed.

It is certain that if ever there were chances of a Turkish success they have completely vanished.

Gallipoli Victims.

In one sector the preparation of the lines has been given to a division composed of veterans who proved their courage and martial spirit in the stern days on Gallipoli. Some had held on to their duties longer than health warranted, because they wished to see the quality of the reinforcements, and to impress upon them how vital it was that the younger nations should show the mother country that the stock was true.

They came to Egypt with nerves unshaken, for the Gallipoli ordeals had merely tempered them; but jaundice and other forms of sickness preyed on troops who had lowered systems.

After recuperating for three weeks at the desert rest camp, they were ready for fresh trials. Indeed, the divisional commender said that the news that his men were to prepare and occupy the first line gave intense satisfaction, and though the subsequent toil was heavy and the calls upon cheerfulness and endurance great, their health was splendid.

A new form of trench has been planned to meet the drifting sand difficulty. The latest design involves infinitely more labour in the initial stages, but it prevents damage by storm or pressure of sand. These elaborate trenches will stand the ravages of time and the desert storm. Perhaps some future excavators for relics of an ancient people will come upon these and wonder what they are.

St. John Sustains Commission Rule

ST. JOHN, N.B., April 11.—After four years of civic administration under commission government the citizens to-day voted for a continuation of the system with a larger majority than when it was instituted in 1911.

Frank L. Potts, for the last two years Commissioner of Public Works, was eliminated from the final contest, and the labour candidate, James L. Sugrue, won fourth position on the ticket with 73 of a majority over Potts. G. Fred Fisher, who was a defeated candidate in the election of 1914, led the polls. H. R. McLellan, present Commissioner of Public Safety, came second, and Arthur W. S. Sharp, who recently resigned as chairman of the assessors, won third place.

The results follow: G. Fred Fisher, 4,870; Harry R. McLellan, 3,697; Arthur W. Sharp, 2,923; James L. Sugrue, 1,719; Frank L. Potts, 1,647; Herbert Eagles, 109.

For commission government, 4,091; for ward system, 1,795.

Final election two weeks later.

NEUTRALS MAY USE INTERNED FOE SHIPS

LONDON, April 11.—Any proposals put forward by neutral Governments with the idea of obtaining immunity from capture for vessels owned by nations at war with Great Britain and placed in service by neutrals will receive careful consideration from the British Government. The War Trade Minister, Lord Robert Cecil, made this statement yesterday in response to a question in the House of Commons. He said the Government considered the question of employment of vessels belonging to hostile nations and sheltered in neutral ports was a matter for neutral Governments to decide. In arriving at a decision the neutral Governments concerned no doubt would take into consideration that destruction of merchant vessels by Germans had the effect of diminishing the world's tonnage and consequently affected the trade of neutrals not less than the trade of belligerents.

MEAL TICKETS FOR A FARM.

"I have no money to put into a Wisconsin farm," insisted Angus Cameron, the proprietor of a St. Paul, Minn., hotel, when urged by F. W. Lapham, a real estate man, to purchase an equity in a farm.

"Then give me $1200 in meal tickets," suggested Lapham as he started to leave.

"If you will take the meal tickets I will give them," snapped Cameron. Lapham considered a moment, then accepted. Cameron is now a farm owner and Lapham is taking friends to Cameron's hotel for dinners.

GIRLS! DRAW A MOIST CLOTH THROUGH HAIR, DOUBLE ITS BEAUTY

Try This! Hair Gets Thick, Glossy, Wavy and Beautiful at Once

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

REALLY AN ART.

The art of boiling a potato, one would think, was the simplest thing in the world, but as a matter of fact, it is astonishing how few people seem to know anything about it and consequently potatoes come to the table soggy, hard in the middle, or all crumpled up, instead of mealy, white lumps of deliciousness, as they ought to be. The most general mistake is that they are boiled too rapidly and not enough and are then not properly drained. Here is the right method: Put the potatoes in enough boiling water to cover them well, add a pinch of salt, and then boil gently but constantly. That is to say, keep the water boiling all the time, and do not permit it merely to simmer. Keep the lid on. When they are done long enough to stick a steel skewer or a kitchen fork into the largest you have and if it is tender right through, turn all the potatoes into a colander, so that all the water may be poured off. Then return them to the saucepan, cover them with a dry, clean cloth; leave the lid off and put by the side of the stove for a few minutes to permit them to dry out. This is the genuine Irish way of boiling potatoes, so that they may be mealy and "laugh."

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for 50 cents a large bottle, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

SMALL WOMEN'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

7681

In making a dress after a reliable pattern one chooses the certain way of having a garment of novel design. Even though it may be made of inexpensive material, the original features will commend it to the wearer and to all who see it, and it will be remembered. A very attractive model on this order is shown in the illustration.

No. 7,681.—This garment has a one piece gathered skirt attached to a guimpe. The overblouse is gathered at the front sides just above the waist line and embellished with a belt, this giving a ripple to the section below it. A unique collar is a further attraction. In the general effect there is the suggestion of "jacket style." The deep cuffs on the sleeve are headed with a frill. Closing of the dress is at the back. The gathered skirt that is stitched to the guimpe has the lower edge turned up on the outside to form a band or facing. This is mounted with a one inch strip of the material that has been gathered in frill effect. If the material employed in the making has a right and a wrong side a piece may be cut off for the band and stitched to the lower part of the skirt, the result being equally effective. Long sleeves may be substituted for the short length if preferred.

This pattern is cut in sizes 14, 16 and 18 years. To make the 16 year size will require 4½ yards of 36 inch goods for the dress, and for guimpe ⅞ yards.

The pattern may be obtained by sending [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

GERMANS RENEW ATTEMPT TO CRUSH NORTHWESTERN DEFENCES OF VERDUN

Advance Was Preceded by a Heavy Liquid Fire Attack--Germans Claim to Have Advanced at Several Places ---3000 British Killed Near Felahie, the Turkish War Office Announces.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, April 12.—With a heavy liquid fire attack against the Caillette woods, the Crown Prince early to-day resumed the attempt to crush the northwestern defences of Verdun on the fifty-second day of the battle for the fortress. A narrow sector of the French front from a point northwest of Dead Man's Hill is under attack.

BERLIN, April 12.—German troops have advanced at several places in the fighting in the Caillette wood, northeast of Verdun, the War Office announced this afternoon. German troops raided English positions near Labiselle during the night taking 39 prisoners.

HARD FIGHTING FOR DEAD MAN'S HILL

German Attack to Break Through French Centre Failed Again and Crown Prince Once More Shifts His Attack to the North-west—Enemy Suffers Terrible Losses

LONDON, April 12.—Shifting the attack back to the west bank of the Meuse, the Germans have opened a heavy drum fire on the Dead Man's Hill positions, presaging another hammer blow against the French line. A terrific concentrated fire was poured in all day yesterday on the northeastern ridge of Dead Man's Hill, where a heavy German attack Monday night gained a foothold on the slopes. Having gained this grip on the French second line of defense the Crown Prince began a systematic artillery preparation for a renewal of the assault, creating a diversion meanwhile by attacking east of the Meuse. This blow falling between Douaumont and Vaux, was finally beaten back. The Germans first penetrated the French advanced trenches but were driven out by counter-attacks of great violence. The grand assault begun by the Germans Saturday and continuing until early yesterday, was designed to break through the French second line northwest of Verdun, Paris reported to-day. The Crown Prince smashed heavily against the French centre in the fighting Sunday. During Sunday night large forces were transferred to the French right wing, and at daybreak on Monday the Germans launched an attempt to roll up the French flank. Caught under the combined fire from Dead Man's Hill and Hill 304, the Germans were beaten back in their assault against the French centre. Paris despatches to-day brought word of spectacular night fighting on the Dead Man's Hill front. Sprays of liquid fire from the attacking German forces swept the French trenches on a front of nearly a mile. In anticipation of such attacks the French had prepared clay shields. They raised these to the trench parapets and the flames glanced off harmlessly. In one bitter hand-to-hand fight, French soldiers captured the German "flame gun," and turning it down the communicating trench, burned to death a score of Germans, who made frantic efforts to escape by scaling the sides. When French outposts signalled the approach of the Germans, scores of illuminating rockets were sent up all along the front. They cast a ghastly green glare over the battlefield, while machine guns and "75's" bit into the charging German lines.

FOE'S ATTACKS ARE EVERYWHERE REPULSED

Special to the Examiner.

PARIS, April 12.—Transferring their activities again to the west bank of the Meuse, the Germans early this morning attacked French positions in Caurette wood, on the northeastern approaches of Dead Man's Hill. Flaming liquids were again employed in the attack which spread from Dead Man's Hill southward to Cumieres. The War Office announced that the Germans were everywhere repulsed.

GERMANS ATTACK ON GREEK FRONTIER

Special to the Examiner:

ATHENS, April 12.—Greek newspapers announced to-day that the Germans have begun an offensive movement on the Greek frontier, capturing the Dove Tepe fortifications from the Allies.

BERLIN CLAIMS A SUCCESS

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, April 12.—More than 3,000 British soldiers were killed and thousands of others wounded in an unsuccessful attack on the Turkish lines east of Kut-El-Amara, the Turkish War Office reports to-day. The fighting occurred near Felahie, 23 miles east of Kut-El-Amara in the bend of the Tigris river.

Germans Were Shifting Their Base

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, April 12.—That the Germans seized from the American liner China were engaged in unneutral service, and were shifting their base of operations from Shanghai to Manila, is the contention of Great Britain in her reply to this Government's protest against their seizure from an American boat. This was revealed by the State Department to-day making known the British reply.

SIR ADAM BECK TAKES THE WHOLE RESPONSIBILITY

Head of Hydro Commission Angry Over Questions Asked by Hon. T. W. McGarry--Talks of Electrification of London and Port Stanley Railway

IMPORTANT STATEMENT

TORONTO, April 12.—Testifying before the Public Accounts Committee to-day, Sir Adam Beck took full responsibility for the electrification of the London and Port Stanley Railway by the Hydro Commission. Provincial Auditor Clancy had objected to this expenditure as unconstitutional.

Sir Adam admitted that he did the work off his own bat, and that no other members of the Hydro Commission knew of it. Sir Adam had said that Auditor Clancy's protests against the expenditure of certain monies had been versed since 1909. He had, however, brought this to the attention of the cabinet and they had approved of the businesslike methods of the commission.

"The electrification of the London and Port Stanley Railway was an exceptional matter," said Sir Adam. "It was the first radial proposition in the province, and was to link up Lake Erie with London, Stratford and other cities. Engineers would be given an opportunity to experiment with the scheme."

"Was any minute of the board passed," asked Provincial Treasurer McGarry.

Sir Adam Beck—"Well, I take the whole responsibility if it is a violation of the act. If we are to carry on the Hydro, commercialize it and make it a businesslike proposition, we must have some latitude and the confidence of the government and the municipalities. If the members of the commission have not the confidence of the government the remedy is the governments—" Sir Adam sat was plainly ruffled by Mr. McGarry's questions and statements.

Leader Rowell asked Sir Adam down suddenly at this juncture. He how much time he devoted to Hydro affairs.

"I try to give six days a week, four days at the commission and two at home. I give anywhere from ten to 24 hours a day."

DAYLIGHT SAVING FOR ST. JOHN.

ST. JOHN, N.B., April 11.—This city is likely to adopt daylight saving. Business men last night met and endorsed it and will circulate a petition asking the City Council to set the clock ahead an hour for the period from April 30 until September 30. The Automobile Association and the Rotary Club are strong supporters of the movement.

NOTED AUTHOR AND WAR CORRESPONDENT DIES

NEW YORK, April 12.—Richard Harding Davis, the noted war correspondent and author, is dead.

Davis dropped dead from heart failure while talking over the telephone in his home at Mount Kisco last night. He was receiving a telegram over the 'phone when stricken. He died at 9:30 before medical aid could be summoned. He had been feeling poorly for a fortnight.

Davis was born in Philadelphia in 1864. Beginning as newspaper reporter he attracted attention by his magazine writings and war correspondence. A number of his books have been dramatized. He recently returned from the Serbian front. His present wife was formerly Bessie McCoy, the musical comedy star, whom he married after his first wife, the daughter of a prominent Chicago family, who divorced him four years ago.

PTE. RATCHFORD OF THE MOUNTED RIFLES KILLED IN ACTION

Peterborough Boy Who Left Canada With B Squadron 8th C.M.R. Gives Life For the Empire---Was Killed on March 23---93rd Band in Lakefield---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

The only son of a widowed mother, Pte. Chas. Ratchford, a Peterborough member of the 8th Canadian Rifles, has given his life for the Empire. This morning a wire from the Adjutant General's Department brought Mrs. Mary Ratchford, 6 Benson Avenue the sad news that her son Charles, had been killed in action, on March 23rd. Young Ratchford joined the 8th C.M.R. last August when the final call for a number of Peterborough men to fill up B squadron was made. Before enlisting for overseas he had been a member of the 57th Regiment for a short time. He was born in England, but his family came out to Canada five years ago and after residing for a short time near Bowmanville came to Peterborough some ten or eleven years ago. The young soldier (he was only seventeen years old) was employed as a blocker by the firm of Wm. Lech & Sons, a position he had occupied for some two and a half years before he enlisted He was a bright, likeable boy, popular with all who knew him and the sad news of his death will bring grief to many friends. The sympathy of the citizens generally will be extended to his widowed mother and to the two young sisters who survive him. Mrs. Ratchford was moving to-day into a new home on Edinburgh street.

As far as is known Pte. Rachford is the first Peterborough member of the Mounted Rifles to fall in action.

Word was received this morning that Pte. Barrie, a Hastings member of the Mounted Rifles, has been killed.

Wounded April 5th

Lieut. W. C. Bradburn, Old Peterborough Boy, Shot in the Thigh

To-day's casualty list contains the name of an old Peterborough boy Lieut. Wm. C. Bradburn, of the 31st Western Canada Battalion, who has been admitted to No. 7 Stationary hospital, Boulogne, on April 5, suffering from a gun-shot wound in the left thigh. Lieut. Bradburn, who is a brother of Mrs. F. J. A. Hall, Peterborough, and a son of the late Robert Bradburn, who resided on Union Street, was mentioned in despatches only a few days ago for good work on a scouting trip to the German lines.

An announcement which will be a disappointment to a considerable number of officers of artillery militia batteries, has been received from the Royal School of Artillery, Kingston, to the effect that after May 8th, no further courses for training of artillery officers and N.C.O.'s will take place until further orders. The present course, which started in March, will be completed by about May 1st and those present at it will be the last to qualify until the considerable number now awaiting appointments have been absorbed.

The Hamilton Spectator says:

When the Fenians swarmed into Canada some years ago, many of the Canadian volunteers distinguished themselves in the fight to defend this country. Capt. William Tait won distinguished honours at Fort Erie when he held a bridge alone for four hours against 400 Fenians. Of course this manoeuvre was made successful by that gallant officer's cleverness in deceiving the raiders and his sword is on exhibition in the museum at Fort Erie. Two of his nephews are now serving in the 173rd Highland Battalion. They are Capt. Joseph George Tait, the quartermaster of the Battalion, and Lieut. Bernard James Tait, a platoon commander in D Company. Both officers are of pure Scotch descent, and each has had considerable military experience.

Capt. Tait's military career began twelve years ago when he was granted a commission in the 35th Light Infantry. He transferred from this unit to the 7th Fusiliers of London, and later, when he came to Hamilton, eight years ago, to the 91st Canadian Highlanders. He secured his captaincy in 1914 and commanded A Company of the 91st Regiment. Capt. Tait was born in Bowmanville in 1876 and, although a professional man, has taken a keen interest in sports. He was an athletic leader and instructor of the Y.M.C.A. at Peterborough for a number of years.

Lieut. Tait, a brother of Capt. Tait, commands No. 1 platoon of D Company. He is a graduate of the Bishop Ridley College, St. Catharines, and also of the School of Science, Toronto University. He has travelled a great deal and understands men. He was attached to the Peterborough Rangers for two years and held a commission in the 91st Canadian Highlanders for four years.

Don't hesitate, but join up with the Taits.

It may be interesting information to the citizens generally that Peterborough has supplied over 80 officers to the fighting forces of the Empire—of these about 50 have already gone overseas and several others are on their way or will be within a few days. The 57th regiment has supplied in the neighborhood of about 50 officers. There are Peterborough officers in practically every branch of the service in the Canadian forces, infantry, artillery, mounted rifles, engineers, mechancial transport, Army Medical corps, dental corps, Forestry battalion Army veteran corps, etc., while in the Imperial Army Peterborough is represented by Major Jack Fenenden in the Army Service Corps; Lieut. J. Reg. Stratton in the Royal Engineers Lieut. Gerald Ellis in the Royal West Surrey's and Capt. Blanchard in the British Army Vetenary Corps while in the Royal Naval Air Service are Sub. Flight Lieuts. Norman Geale and Leslie Stevens both of this city. Many Peterborough old boys are not included in the number mentioned For instance two former members of the 57th Regiment are commanding battalions, Lt.-Col. R. M. Rennistown, being at the head of the 33rd Western Canada battalion and Lt.-Col Jas. D Clark is O.C. of the 111th battalion, Galt. Major Bennett is the only Peterborough officer who has been killed in action.

Another class for non-commissioned officers of the 93rd battalion will commence on Monday next. The first class which finished with the final examinations yesterday was a great success.

Attacks East of the Meuse Are Repulsed

Heroic French Resistance to German Assaults is Still Unbroken —Infantry Fighting Has Spread to Opposite Bank of River.

ENEMY'S LOSSES HEAVY

PARIS, April 11.—The amazing battle on the left bank of the Meuse continues unabated. The heroic French resistance is still unbroken, and the German attempts upon Dead Man Hill and Hill No. 304 are now almost desperate in their violence.

The infantry fighting has also spread to the opposite bank of the river, and French and Germans were locked in a titanic struggle between Douaumont and Vaux. Late this afternoon the Germans succeeded at great cost in gaining a footing in some of the French advance trenches. They were immediately ejected however, by a counter attack, leaving more than 100 prisoners in the hands of the French.

It is in the Mort Homme region, however, that the greatest struggle of the Verdun campaign is in progress. Towards the end of the day the infantry for the moment gave way to the artillery and a terrific bombardment of the French positions is now in progress, apparently in preparation for another attack.

Four German Divisions.

With the exception of one small section of approximately 800 yards the French line from the Meuse to Avocourt remains unbroken despite the utmost efforts of four German divisions (80,000 men). The Germans made this advance by the aid of a tremendous artillery fire, and hundreds of jets of flaming liquid, which burned and suffocated the defenders. The Germans behind cover of the blazing streams of chemicals advanced from the southern fringe of Corbeaux Woods. They were able to win a foothold in some trenches on the extreme eastern section of the Mort Homme (Dead Man) position.

The Germans again called their chemicals into play in the Douaumont fighting, a tornado of tear-producing shells being directed against the French. Here their gain was only momentary.

Battle For Dead Man Hill.

The fighting around Dead Man Hill is the transcendant effort of the Germans on this front, however. From every available side, west, north and east, frantic efforts with large forces, including the best troops of the Germany army, are being obstinately made to capture either by frontal attack or by flank movements both of these hills.

But the defenders are still holding out with great stubbornness. The nearest point to either height which the Germans have reached is Hill Number 295, but this crest is immediately at the foot of Dead Man Hill, which is 100 feet higher, and where the French forces with unconquerable resistance bar the way.

The extraordinary doggedness with which the defenders withstand all attacks is the amazement of the attacking forces. Thanks to the unexpected endurance of his troops, the French commander is able to pursue steadily his plan, which is while holding his ground and yielding only inch by inch when absolutely necessary, at the same time to husband his strength in men to the utmost, and to keep as powerful reserves as possible fresh for later operations.

Foe Using Best Troops.

Meanwhile the Germans are throwing their best forces into the fight regardless of the cost. By now they have brought up something like thirty-three divisions (660,000 men).

A single instance shows what the German losses before Verdun must be. The Third Battalion of Brandenburg Chasseurs, numbering 1,200 men, up to date has lost 1,076. The total includes twenty officers.

TWO PETERBORO' DELEGATES WILL ATTEND CONFERENCE

Mr. J. A. Aylmer and Mr. R. B. Rogers Will Visit Ottawa on Friday—Demand a Military Census

AVAILABLE MEN

At a meeting of the Speakers' Patriotic League, held last evening, it was decided to have Mr. J. A. Aylmer and Mr. R. B. Rogers attend a conference that is to be held in Ottawa on Friday noon.

There is a demand through the country for a military census, says Col. Mulloy, though the exact terms of the census will likely be settled in Ottawa. It is possible that the form of the memorandum which will be the subject of the conference will call for the classification of industries and the registration of citizens with the view of employing some means to raise the 500,000 men who were promised by the Canadian government for the war.

Enough Men.

Lt.-Col. Mulloy has gone into the possibilities of Canada's quota being raised without seriously handicapping the necessary industries of Canada and his findings have been interesting. According to the last census there were 900,000 men in Canada who were between the ages of 18 and 29. Over half of that number was under 25. As far as the conference is concerned it is felt that there are many men who are not indispensible who could don the uniform and go to the front.

It is contended that there are enough of these men to supply the number needed by the government to make the 500,000 men promised. The classification of the men and their registration are likely to be announced in a short time after the conference.

ARE CLOSE TO VILLA

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, April 12. —The American expedition to-day is nearer the capture of Villa than at any time since the chase started. This was the belief of General Funston, expressed to-day in the face of discredited rumours of Villa's death, believed inspired by Mexican sources.

HARDWARE BUSINESS CHANGED HANDS

Import Business Deal by Messrs. John Bailes & Sons, of Oshawa

An important business transaction was consummated last week by which the hardware firm of Morgan Co. passes into the hands of Messrs John Bailes & Sons of Oshawa.

During the past week, an inventory of the stock has been in progress and this week the official announcement of the re-opening by Messrs. Bailes & Sons will be made public.

John Bailes and Sons have been identified with the hardware business for many years and have operated stores at several different points in Ontario, including Sault Ste. Marie, Thessalon, Cobalt, Guelph and Toronto. Their home town and head office is at Oshawa, Ont.

With a business experience of so wide and influential a character, it is but natural to assume that Peterborough has secured a sound and reputable addition to its business activities. ld-1w

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 12, 1916

NOT PROUD OF HIS PRODUCT.

Arthur Hawkes is an irreverent scoffer. You know he helped, by his big "British-Born" crusade, in 1911, to save us from the calamity of trucking and trading with the Yankees." He did this by helping elect a truly patriotic parliament of all the talents. Now that he has got into a higher, purer atmosphere, by rising from politics into journalism he changes his note. He has now a place in the parliamentary press gallery and looks down on the parliament he helped create, and has the effrontery to say that it isn't a parliament, but a gas works. He should know, for he created the two-to-one majority of the members.

A CALL TO CANADIANS.

The Toronto News says that "the French and foreign-born population of 3,000,000 aside, English-speaking Canada has done better (recruiting) than Australia." While there is little use in such comparisons, except the noble rivalry they suggest, they should at least be fair. If we exclude, in addition to "the French and foreign born" the British born population of Canada, we shall find that the native Canadians have not recruited up to the mark. Such a comparison has this value that it should stimulate the Canadian born to measure up to the standard of the other British born. We have in this country very few British born, as distinguished from native Canadians that are not in the ranks, while there are still thousands and tens of thousands of native Canadians, that have not faced medical inspection. If native born Canadians had enlisted as freely in proportion to numbers as the British born residents in this country, there wouldn't be a very wide gap between the number of Canadians in the ranks and the 500,000 aimed at. There are good reasons why the native Canadians who are fit should answer the call—because the need is great and because native born Canadians make good, if not the best soldiers. In training, in action on the sanguine stage of real warfare, Canadians have never been a disappointment, but have shown themselves possessed of a courage, level-headedness, coolness and resourcefulness, that has reflected glory on the name, "Canadian." From king to comrades all classes have borne testimony and gives praise to the all-round fighting qualities of Canadian soldiers. Therefore we want more of them.

THE CURSE OF CENTRALIZATION.

We have enough evidence of the curse of centralisation of power in the Germanic empire—Prussia, with its ghastly ideals, the dominating centre around which revolve the helpless subject states of the Empire—not to take warning in Canada. We need to watch the Ontario government. According to the Toronto World, a rational Conservative journal, there is danger that the government is proposing to "hog" the Hydro—make its management a function of the party machine, and divert its revenues to the government coffers. The realisation of the first suggested danger would be a death blow to the hydro principle; much more serious than Sir Adam Beck's "death blow" administered at Ottawa, in respect of radial railways. Hydro is essentially a municipal enterprise, for the promotion of municipal interests, and it should be kept clear from government entanglements and partisan influences. It is non-political and non-partisan now, as it has been from its inceptive stage. Hydro money is the money of the municipalities, and it should be kept religiously apart and sacred. There is too much tendency and practice on the part of the Ontario Government to get, and of getting, its hands on money belonging by right to the municipalities. The Government grabs half the license money paid by the municipalities. It grabs all the license fees paid by automobiles. This is not right; and a Liberal member of the Legislature was well employed in moving a resolution that this money should go to the municipalities; for two reasons. In the first place the money comes from the pockets of municipal ratepayers; and, secondly, automobiles ride and wear out rapidly municipal roads that are built and have to be kept in repair by municipal funds. The World does well to cry hands off the Hydro, and to this should be added—hands off municipal revenues.

SUFFICIENT PROOF.

The Ottawa Free Press has long occupied a prominent, if not crowding, place at or near the head of the procession of Liberal newspapers. The liberality of its comments upon the Shell Committee scandals, seemed to indicate a temporary doubt of its continued Liberality. But there should be no longer any doubt about its party classification. At any rate there is no ground for describing it as a Conservative journal — it does not have a supreme faith in the infallibility and simon-pureness of the Borden Government, which it would have if it were a truly orthodox Tory journal. The Free Press in an article on Tuesday says government organs are appealing to "Canadian patriots everywhere" to support the Borden Government in meeting the "intolerable situation" created by the financial difficulties of the Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways." The Free Press doubts the ability of the Borden Government to satisfactorily handle the situation, single handed, and demands a coalition government as the solution of the problem. Not only does the Free Press, by its doubt of the ability of the Borden Government to do big things, absolve itself from the charge of having gone over to the enemy, but it furnishes other evidence in doubt of the wisdom and high dealing of the Borden Government. It says:

> The appeal to "Canadian patriots" now would come with more force if there had been less evidence in the last year of a continuation of that peace-time curse, the spoils system, and a more genuine effort made to sink all purely partisan differences.
> So long as one political party hogs all the power and its privileges, it must not complain if the weight of the resultant responsibility is almost greater than it can bear.

If the Free Press is not entirely in the Grit fold—with both feet—it certainly does not talk as if it had free access to the jealously guarded party crib.

SUCCESS CERTAIN.

The grim determination of the British and their allies to see the thing through is shown by a speech of Hon. Mr. Asquith, the British Premier, yesterday, which is a confirmation of the declaration made by him in November, 1914, seventeen months ago. It reads:

> We shall never sheathe the sword until Belgium recovers in full measure all, and more than all, that she has sacrificed, until France is adequately secured against the menace of aggression, until the rights of the smaller nationalities of Europe are placed upon an unassailable foundation, and until the military domination of Prussia is wholly and finally destroyed.

This declaration at that time had the moral force of determination and national resolve, and allied resolve behind it. The declaration made by Premier Asquith in London on the occasion of the reception to the visiting French deputies or members of parliament and senators, on Monday night, has all the same but more obstinately fixed determination and national resolve behind it, as witness these words:

> "As a result of the war we intend to establish the principle that international problems must be handled by free negotiation on equal terms between free peoples, and that this settlement shall no longer be hampered or swayed by the overmastering dictation of a Government controlled by a military caste. That is what I mean by the destruction of the military domination of Prussia — nothing more, but nothing less."

It has the added strength of added material force and material preparedness behind it. In the interval between the enunciation of the first declaration of unalterable and unswerving policy and intention, a space of seventeen months, Britain has immensely increased her armed forces and heaped up immense stores of munitions. Not only Great Britain, but France, Russia and the other allies are better prepared materially—in every sense—to carry out the programme solemnly announced upon two occasions by Mr. Asquith, but there has been a specific moral rapprochement in the solemn engagement recently entered into by all the allied countries to make common cause of the war and to agree to no peace proposals, that will not be fundamentally in accord with the two declarations of Mr. Asquith.

We may think, and we are right in thinking, that the war drags along wearily and slowly; but though the progress to the indicated goal is slow, it is steadily onward; and in the direction our wishes and interests desire and demand. While Germany is growing weaker in offensiveness in every sense but brutality of spirit, the Allies are growing stronger in every good way. The financial resources—the arsenal of silver bullets—are kept well up to the mark; the strength of our armies is growing greater—numerically and in efficiency; the stores of munitions are being heaped higher, and the offensive powers of the Allies are growing more and more formidable every day. The night is long, but the dawn of ultimate victory is drawing nearer as inevitably and surely as to-morrow's daybreak.

500,000 LIKELY TO DIE.

Ere Normal Conditions Are Restored in Albania.

PARIS, April 12.—William Willard Howard, of New York, secretary of the Albanian Relief Commission, who left Paris yesterday on his way to the United States from Albania, said that 150,000 human beings had died of starvation in Albania during the past eighteen months, and that 500,000 were likely to die before normal conditions in that country were resumed.

Where the French-Canadian Stands in the Present Conflict — The Habitant's Part — Ready to Serve Once the Situation is Explained to Him

"I venture to say that the habitant is one of the best and safest assets of His Majesty's Dominions over the seas."

Ruined by the governors from the old land during the French regime, ceded to the British conquerors, and abandoned by the wealthier classes of his own race, the habitant became essentially a tiller of the soil.

Lacking the restless energy of the Anglo-Canadian, he settled down on his land in Old Quebec, and the extension of the rights of British citizenship to him under the wise and strong rule of the old English governors, bred in him a deep rooted, though not effusive, loyalty to the Union Jack.

He proved in 1774 and again in 1812, when neither the admonitions of the church nor the money sent from old France by Lafayette deterred him from supporting that which had brought him liberty and prosperity.

And the same holds good to-day.

DREW STRIKING CONTRAST.

In such wise did Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux sum up the attitude of his people to the other members of the Canadian Club in an address which all conceded to be the most brilliant rhetorical effort of the year. He was speaking of the habitant and the part he was playing in the present war. He quoted Tennyson—"The man can speak the thing he will"—and he proceeded to do so. He hit out straight from the shoulder, first painting a most brilliant word background of the part the French had played in the development of North America, contrasting the high lights of the brilliant exploits of voyageurs and couriers de bois with the sombre yet none the less effective shadows supplied by the steady, almost unincidental, yet important development of his people.

PURE HABITANT DESCENT.

There was more than a note of pride in his voice when he referred to the fact that almost all the outstanding French-Canadians of the present day could trace their ancestry back to the habitant stock. He, himself, and the two sitting beside him, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. T. Chase Casgrain were of pure habitant descent. The speaker touched quite briefly on the bilingual situation, quoting the French motto, "bon accord," which the Scotch town of Aberdeen still bears upon its coat-of-arms as the result of its early friendship with the French people. This motto (harmony) he commended to the extremists of both Ontario and Quebec.

* * *

The slander that the inhabitants of Lower Canada were proving negligent in their loyalty to the Empire at the present time was vigorously denied by Mr. Lemieux. "Though he may not be so responsive as his English-speaking brother, his loyalty is none the less sincere," claimed the speaker. "If he is unresponsive it is because he has not been trained to respond. He realizes that this war is a conflict of ideals—and the Habitant is an idealist. He realizes that Britain in fighting for humanity, for his old Motherland, and for the rights of small nationalities—and the Habitant is a member of a small nationality himself. He is heart and soul for Britain in the present war."

THE REAL LEADERS.

"Notwithstanding the insidious appeals which have been made in Quebec," continued the ex-postmaster-general, "common sense still prevailed in Quebec. The province might have and had its Bernard Shaws, but counterbalancing them, were the Lauriers, Casgrains, Lacostes and Bradeurs — the real leaders of the province. Almost all the old French-Canadian families were represented at the front to-day and the habitant was flocking in ever-increasing numbers to the flag, once the necessity of the situation was explained to him. Those who were not with the colours, were none the less doing a real national service in the tilling of the soil."

* * *

In an analysis of patriotism in the Dominion, Mr. Lemieux nailed the canard that his province was so far behind the rest of the Dominion. Quebec was somewhat differently situated from the rest of Canada. Any great influx of population was lacking. Her birthrate was practically her only means of increase. Added to that she had been practically isolated from France for the first half of the nineteenth century, and the Habitant had fallen out of touch with the remainder of the world.

HER RECRUITING RECORD.

Notwithstanding this, the province had contributed twenty-five hundred men to the first contingent, as against only 4,500 Canadian born from the rest of Canada. Quebec, too, was lacking in the big centres of population which facilitated recruiting. With the exception of Montreal, Quebec, and possibly Trois Rivieres and St. Hyacinthe, there was scarcely a manufacturing city to be found. At the present time, however, there were thirteen French-Canadian units either raised or in course of raising, and the speaker was certain, that if the Dominion government would provide proper educational facilities for the rural population, the grand total of Habitants enrolled by the end of the present year would be increased to full twenty thousand. As an example, he cited the instance of the 163rd Battalion, which, by thorough explanation of the circumstances of the war, had been enabled to recruit no fewer than seven hundred men within the past three months.

REACH UNDERSTANDING.

In conclusion the speaker expressed his regret at the calumnies which had been heaped upon his province, but was gladdened by the bright ray of common understanding which was appearing on the horizon. "I am sorry," said he, "that my country should have been singled out by some papers as shirking at the present time. It's bad for our national health. There may be unquestioned obstacle in the memories of the past; but cannot all be wiped out by mutual goodwill in the present crisis? Why should we be feared? In all North America there are barely five millions of us as against one hundred millions of British descent. Little more than fifteen years ago, was the end of the South African war. Did Britain fear the consequences then? No. She gave the Dutch self-government—trusted them in her generosity. Do we need to ask what they are doing for the Empire to-day? We know the answer."

* * *

At the conclusion of the address, the retiring president, Mr. D. A. Thomas, drew attention to the fact that the annual meeting of the club would be held in the evening of April 17th. He especially urged all members to attend as a number of matters of importance were to be discussed.—D M C., in Ottawa Journal.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

The Major League Ball Season Is Under Way To-day

They start to-day in the National and American Leagues, and all the clubs, with the possible exception of Pittsburg in the National and Philadelphia in the American should show a decided improvement.

New York Giants have the same old infield, are much better in the catching department with Rariden, and grabbed a good pitcher in Anderson. Their outfield with Kauff and Rousch should be the best in years.

Boston Braves have a creaking good first baseman in Konetchy, who replaces Schmidt, and a couple of good pitchers secured for mthe Federals in Allen and Knetzer. There is little chance of James getting back to form, and Rudolph will be their mainstay in the box.

The Philadelphia Nationals are about up to their average of a year ago, although Chief Bender will help out the pitching staff if he stays in condition.

Pittsburg Pirates have very little in the new line with the exception of a manager, Jimmy Callahan, late of the White Sox, has a tough job. He has a great pitcher in Mamaux, and secured a good catcher in Wilson, from the Federals.

Brooklyn will be about the same as a year ago, with Chief Myers, of the Giants, added to the catching staff. They were a good team a year ago, but seem to fall down at critical stages.

The only valuable addition to the Cincinnati Club is Hal Chase, at first base, and if he is as big a disturber as reported, it is just a question whether he will be of much help.

The Chicago Cubs are principaly a Federal League aggregation, and their work will be watched with interest. They have a lot of good catchers and pitchers, but in their exhibition games displayed very little class.

Roy Corhan, a new shortstop, is the most valuable addition to the St. Louis Nationals. They generally have a pretty fair bunch of pitchers and catchers, but their outfield looks weak.

New York Americans are expected to create a noise this summer. They have secured Franklin Baker, the home run king, and also grabbed Outfielder Lee Mages and Pitcher Cullop from the Federals. Offhooley of the Buffalo Internationals, is also in the outfield.

Boston Red Sox are the same old formidable club. They have lost a great player in Speaker, but have strength in every position. They are almost sure to run one-two in the race.

Chicago White Sox have added a sensational young shortstop to the staff in Terry, and are strong in every department, "Joe" Jackson, who fell down badly after he was secured from Cleveland, is expected to hit up to his stride this season.

As long as Cobb stays in Detroit they will have a great ball club, and be up in the race. They have nothing much in the recruit line except Pitcher McTigue, last year with the Leafs, but are strong on aggressive play.

A new first baseman in Joe Judge, late of the Buffalo Internationals, is the principal addition to the Washington team. With Walter Johnson as a pitcher, they are sure to be around the first division.

The addition of Speaker to the Cleveland team, while it will help a lot, is not likely to make a real team out of the Naps. However, several recruits give promise and they should be better than a year ago.

St. Louis will be like the Chicago Cubs, the Federal League representative in the American. Fielder Jones is the manager, and he has about twelve of the outlaws on his staff, including Eddie Plank, the ex-star heaver of the Athletics.

"Connie" Mack is going ahead at Philadelphia with the idea of building up a new team, but the material is scarce at present. He has Charlie Pick, the ex-Leaf, at third base, and this does not look like major league calibre.

However, they are off to-day, and one can never tell. Boston Braves, who did not figure two years ago, came through the world's series title, and this may happen again.

Great Dane Who Played For Chelsea

There Will Be No Inter-League Matches in England This Year

When Great Britain defeated Denmark in the final game of the football competition at the Olympic games at Stockholm, in July, 1908, the Danish side battled against difficulties throughout the second half owing to the retirement of one of their halfbacks through injury, sustained in an accidental collision with Capt. Vivian Woodward. During that period of stress there was one outstanding figure in the defence of the Danish goal, and he, Nils Middelboe, as full-back, who afterwards became associated with Woodward at Chelsea. He compelled attention in two respects, by his fine play and superb physique, for he stands 6 feet 2½ inches. Middelboe is engaged in a London bank. Accepting an invitation to play for Chelsea he was a class unto himself in the reserve team, but hardly up to the standard of the senior side. War football, however, has brought about a tremendous improvement in his play, and in the absence of Tom Logan in the army he has settled down as a sterling centre half back, his tackling being a feature.

COACH SEEKS KEY TO PITCHER'S BOX.

Before the first outdoor baseball practice for the Columbia team started the other day, Coach Andy Coakley was seen sleuthing around the university buildings. He went from the Athletic Association office to South Field, ferreted around the diamond turf and then reamed back to the A. A. office.

All through the morning, it is said, Coakley was busy inspecting the obscure corners of the libraries and classrooms. Late in the afternoon, a freshman candidate for baseball manager summoned up his courage and asked the coach why he had worn the look of a detective all through the day. Andy waved his hand in the direction of the damaged condition of the diamond, and replied:

"I've been trying to find the key to the pitcher's box."

DENIES KAISER SPECULATED.

Berlin, April 12.—American papers recently reported that Emperor William was one of the silent partners of Baron Constantine Von Alvensleben, who made millions in mining enterprises and real estate speculations in British Columbia and the state of Washington, but who has probably been ruined by the war. This rumour is branded as a pure invention. The Kaiser never speculated and never owned any stock in any industrial corporation His alleged interest in the Krupp works at Essen is a piece of fiction.

Keep tacks in glass jars or glasses. This saves opening boxes to find a particular kind.

German Tea and Coffee Taken Over By State

BERLIN, April 10.—The government has resorted to still another radical measure in connection with the food problem, for the coffee embargoes in Holland, Sweden, Norway and Denmark have practically checked importation and the stocks on hand are beginning to get short.

From the coffee census taken in January there are only about 350,000 sacks of coffee in Germany to-day and which at the present rate of consumption would last the German people just a month and a half, while the needs of the army and navy are covered for four months. The result is that all stocks of tea and unroasted coffee will be taken over by the Government and the entire trade monopolized through a newly organized "war committee for coffee." Tea and health drinks, such as malt, rye and wheat coffee will in time be almost exclusively served at the German breakfast table. The German papers are beginning to blossom out with articles by doctors and professors pointing but the deleteriousness of caffein poison in coffee and the healthfulness of grain substitutes. A specialist in the Berlin Gazette to-day advises confirmed coffee drinkers to wean themselves gradually so as not to suffer from shock if forced to do without it all of a sudden. Wise Berlin housewives who knew what was coming have been hoarding the raw coffee for weeks but the real rush for coffee came to-day.

The government is also working out far-reaching measures against a contingency, which seems almost a certainty that all imports of coffee, tea and cocoa will be cut off for the balance of the war. There is enough tea in Germany to last for a year at the present rate of consumption but with coffee eliminated the ten stocks are expected to be exhausted very much more steadily. The government's proposed measures aim at providing substitutes with chicory in the first line. Most of the last chicory crop was used for cattle feed but an Imperial ordinance will reserve coming crops exclusively for human consumption. Even tea and chicory together, however, will not make up for lack of coffee.

CAN'T PREVENT CENSORSHIP.

Washington Can't Interfere With Canadian Inspection of Mail.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Several protests have been made to the Post Office Department recently by postal authorities at offices along the Canadian border that American letters have been opened in the Dominion and passed upon by a censor. No action has been taken, and it was understood to-day to be the feeling of authorities here that mail in Canada is subject to such regulations as the Canadian Government may make.

THEIR QUEST FOR THE VICTORIA CROSS

(By A. Byers Fletcher.)

There was tumultous cheering in the ranks of the Irish Guards, somewhere in France. Sergeant O'Reilly V.C., had returned to the trenches. Two months before, Private O'Reilly had, with a scorching-hot machine gun, held, singe-handed, an important trench after all his comrades had fallen. Incidentally, he had also saved the life of an officer, who lay wounded and exposed on the parapet of the trench. His was but one of many such brave deeds which occurred almost daily along that terrible front, but O'Reilly's deed had the advantage of being conspicuous. Hence his two months' leave, his journey to London and his reception at Buckingham Palace, where the King himself pinned the little bronze cross to his khaki jacket. Hence his public reception in his native village of Tullameelan, where they hung garlands of flowers about his neck, and his old mother wept tears of joyful pride. Hence, too, his return with the sergeant's stripes. The story of the honours heaped upon him had been duly chronicled and illustrated in the press, and had preceded his return to the trenches. Hence his joyful reception by the regiment.

Private Finnessy and Private Moloney had been among the first to grasp the hero's hand, and had joined heartily in the vociferous cheering, but now that affairs had again resumed their normal round, these two companions sat at the bottom of the trench, smoking thoughtfully.

"O'Reilly's a brave man," said Finnessy, then added, after a pause, "the lucky divil!"

"I believe ye," replied Moloney.

"And he only five fet sivin," continued Finnessy.

"With one punsh," said Moloney, contemplating his hairy fist, "I could lift him into the inemy's trinches!"

"Do ye mind how all the girls in Tullameelan kissed him?" said Finnessy.

"I know one girl there that didn't!" said Moloney, hotly.

"And I know one girl there that didn't!" said Moloney, hotly.

"And I know another!" as hotly replied Finnessy.

"The papers are nothin' but lyin' rags," said Moloney.

"I believe ye," said Finnessy.

Viciously whistled the bullets across the top of the trench, and a shell or two whined overhead, unheeded by the comrades, long accustomed to the sound.

"But I'm not danyin'," said Finnessy, after a pause, "that the little brown eyes is a great timptation to anny girl."

"It is that!" agreed Moloney.

"At five o'clock!" the whisper ran along the trench. Since three o'clock the guns massed on the hills behind them had been sending a shrieking death storm into the enemy's trenches in front of the Irish Guards. At five, promptly, the storm of shell would cease. At a given signal the men would clamber out over the parapet, make their way through the openings in the wire entanglements, and rush the trenches before them.

There was no outward excitement. The aspect of the men remained unchanged, but one could feel the nervous tension. A young subaltern near Finnessy and Moloney, glanced occasionally at his wrist-watch, and smoked his cigarette more rapidly than usual.

"If he falls," whispered Finpessy to Moloney, "'tis meself that will bring him in."

"You will not," said Moloney, "I've had me eye on him f'r wakes!"

"Ye can have the Major," said Finnessy.

"I'll not!" said Moloney, "'twud take a horse to carry him in!"

The batteries ceased firing. A low whistle sounded. The men grasped their rifles with bayonets fixed. Cold steel alone must do the work now. Another whistle. With a hoarse cheer, the men climbed out over the front of the trench, and the charge was on.

Side by side raced Finpessy and Moloney, with eyes fixed on the young subaltern, who, carrying a rifle, was sprinting on before them. For a few moments it seemed that the batteries had effectually silenced the trenches of the enemy immediately in front. A hundred yards further and they would be reached. Now, however, from that line of piled earth and barbed wire came the crackling roar of machine-guns. For a moment the men wavered and many fell ,but, with a growl, the others rushed on. Fifty yards further, and then the ground seemed to heave up and hit Finnessy and Moloney. Side by side they lay, with their faces partly rested in the trampled ground. To their ears came dully the sound of the fierce hand-to-hand fighting beyond them. Slowly they scraped the dirt from their faces and looked at each other.

"Where did they get ye, Finnessy?" asked Moloney.

"In the leg," groaned Finnessy.

"The same f'r me," moaned Moloney.

The bullets of the machine-guns still sang over them, and both men began to dig into the soft earth and pile it into a mound in front of their heads.

Now back across the torn ground came the remnant of the charge, for the trenches had not been taken. Some ran, others walked or crawled or were carried, but always over them and among them whirred the leaden death. Soon Moloney and Finnessy were left alone in their little self-made trenches, for none of their retreating comrades had noticed them.

Twilight was fading, when a brilliant idea flashed across the mind of Finnessy. The intensity of the illumination almost dazed him for a moment.

"Moloney," said Finnessy, "'tis not very sthrong ye're feelin', I'm thinkin'."

"Ye're think-tank is overflowin'; shut it off!" growled Moloney.

"Sure, Moloney, ye'er voice is very wake! Ye'll be faintin' in a minute!" said Finnessy, soothingly.

"I'll not!" cried Moloney. "What's eatin' ye?"

"Poor old boy!" purred Finnessy, "ye're in a desperate state. Ye must be rescued. I'm goin' to take ye in."

"How?" asked Moloney.

"I'm goin' to take ye on me back and crawl in with ye. It's me duty to do it and England expicts every Irishman to do his duty! Me only reward will be ye'er gratitood!" said Finnessy.

Slowly the brilliant idea spread to the mind of Moloney.

"Sure, Finnessy," said Moloney "'tis brave and kind of ye, but I can't accipt ye'er sacrifice. 'This ye'er silf that must be saved. I can hear the trimble in ye'er speech. No one can say that a Moloney iver deserted a friend. I'll take ye in if I die f'r it!"

"Don't be a fool, Moloney; ye know ye're waker than I am!"

"I'm not!" cried Moloney. "I'm as sthrong as a horse, and I am goin' to save ye or perish in the attimpt!"

"Ye selfish baste!" howled Finnessy. "Ye'd spoil me chance for the V. C. would ye!"

"Silfish baste ye'rasilf!" roared Moloney. "'Tis me own chance! And in ye'll go on me back, dead or alive!"

Moloney and Finnessy reached for each other.

Back in the trenches of the Irish Guards the young subaltern, peering through a loophole, saw dimly through the growing dusk the struggles of Moloney and Finnessy.

"Poor devils," he muttered, 'must be in agony! Didn't know any were left alive out there.

Even as he spoke, a wiry figure beside him sprang to the top of the parapet and started towards the struggling men.

Now the enemy's trench awoke again, but presently, through the zone of death, the subaltern and all who could secure loopholes, saw that wiry figure slowly crawling crawling back to wards their trench, dragging behind him two reluctant but exhausted men.

As the limp bodies of Finnessy and Moloney slid down into the trench a cheer broke forth from the men, which drowned the noise of the firing. Slowly Finnessy and Moloney opened their eyes. The subaltern was speaking.

"Sergeant O'Reilly," he said, "if such a thing is possible, you deserve and should have another Victoria Cross!"

Again the cheers broke forth.

Finnessy looked at Moloney.

"For the love of Mike!" said Finnessy.

"I believe ye!" said Moloney. —From Life.

RECRUITING MEETING HELD

Mr. E. Burnham of Peterborough, was in town on Friday

A quiet but pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, April 5th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. Stinson of Percy, when his sister, Miss Annie, was united in marriage to Mr. F. Brown of Trenton. The ceremony was performed by Rev. I. Snell. The bride's costume was of pale blue satin, with trimmings of shadow lace and pearls. The many presents show the esteem in which the young couple are held by their many friends.

Mr. R. Faux of Westwood, gave us a call on Saturday.

Much sympathy is felt for Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Gilders and family in the loss by death of their little son Sydney. Interement took place on Friday afternoon to the Trent Valley cemetery.

OSTRICHES WALTZ ON SAND.

Indulge in Queer Antics on the Plains of South Africa.

One of the oddest sights of the sandy stretches of plain in southern Africa is a party of waltzing ostriches. A writer on the subject thus describes their queer antics:

"When there are a number of them they will start off, and, after running a few hundred yards, will stop, and with raised wings will whirl rapidly round till they are stupefied or perhaps break a leg. The males pose also before fighting. They kneel on their ankles, opening their wings and balancing themselves alternately forward and backward or to one side or the other, while the neck is stretched on a level with the back and the head strikes the sides, now on the right now on the left, while the feathers are bristling. The bird appears at this time so absorbed in its occupation as to forget all that is going on around him, and can be approached and caught. The male alone utters a cry, which sounds much like an effort to speak with the mouth shut tight."

The Toronto News says:

Toronto Sporting organizations are still setting an example for other clubs throughout the country to follow from a recruiting point of view. The Don Rowing Club, with an active membership numbering in the neighborhood of sixty, has thirty-seven men boys in khaki ,including Bob Dibble, the holder of the Canadian and American sculling titles, who is an officer in the Sportsmen's Battalion. This is a record to be proud of, but the Beaches Lacrosse Club, junior O. A. H. A. champions, have even improved upon the veteran rowing club's showing. Of the team which won the honors last season not one of the players is available for the season. Nine of the ten members of the champion team are in uniform, and the anager is contemplating donning the khaki at an early date. When it is considered that the age limit in the junior O.A.H.A. is twenty one it can be seen that the boys of Toronto are "doing their bit".

OTTAWA, April 11.—Although press despatches indicate severe fighting on the Flanders front where the Canadians are holding the line, the Militia Department is still without any information as to the extent of the fighting or losses. It is not expected that any information as to the troops engaged or their losses will be forthcoming until the present action has been concluded. Around St. Eloi, where the most severe fighting is in progress, are several Canadians brigades, and that they are in the thick of it is believed by the Militia authorities here.

Some prominent militia officers believe this is the beginning of the big British offensive so long awaited, others say that it is only a German demonstration in force to prevent further concentration of Allied troops to resist the advance on Verdun. The British have been steadily taking over more and more of the French lines to permit of reinforcements for the French front at Verdun, and a strong demonstration on the British front would delay any further extension of their line.

The Canadian forces in Flanders number about 75,000, and no doubt are holding many miles of the line. The militia authorities here anxiously await details as growing casualty lists are ominous of heavy fighting by our men.

UMPIRES GET THEIR JOBS.

CHICAGO, April 11.—Umpire assignments for the American League's opening games to-morrow were announced to-day by President B. B. Johnson. Hildebrand and O'Loughlin will officiate in Chicago; Evans and Chill at Cleveland; Connolly and Owens at New York, and Dineen and Nallin at Boston. President Johnson will attend the opening game here.

"ANZAC"

"Why don't they advance?" asked an observer on one of the ships, seeing great masses of troops halt on the hillside. "They have advanced," replied an officer grimly: and taking the glasses the observer beheld the spectacle—whole companies had been mowed down almost simultaneously, and lay still, as though awaiting a charge.

On these shores confronting Troy, bloody is an epic world,
Thunder drowning Homer's lyre, tens of thousands they were hurled,
Not as Agamemnon charged, armed against a bowman's skill,
But as valor and youth poured into a slaughter-mill.
Human flesh confronting steel from each unrelenting gun,
Shouting from the fort-rimmed hills of the heathen and the Hun.

From the deserts and the mines, England's stoutest pioneers,
Eager with adventure-blood of young twenty's glowing years,
"Let us forth!" again they cried as they leaped into the tide
Where the barb-mesh drew them down —and they struggled till they died
While their thousands still came on to be mingled with the dead,
Till the beach could hold no more and the corpse clogged waves were red.

Days of fever, nights of hell. And the death-stench filled the air
Till the browned New Zealand men drooped and sickened in the glare.
Till the lean Australian lads, used to deserts and to drouth,
Fell to babbling at the curse from the cannon's open mouth.
Rocks were shaken upon rocks while the Monsters of the Den,
Licking forth their magic fires, blasted out the lives of men.

Anzac! Harsh and bitter sound, like some blood-fed idol's fane!
Let them go. Be satisfied. You can fatten on the slain
That a frenzied War Lord drew—call him Odin, Moloch, Rast—
You have burnt a nation's flower. To what purpose? Did they fail?
Nay! For every man that died in that Strait's polluted breath
Shall a hundred Britons rise to do vengeance for his death.

KAISER WANTS PEACE

People Share Views, But Crown Prince and Generals Favour War.

LONDON, April 12.—The Weekly Despatch says:

"A well informed neutral just arrived in England from Berlin, in an interview with Frederic William Wile, says:

"'Everywhere in the German Empire there is an ardent longing for peace, and they make no bones about telling you so. There is a distinct, well known peace party. It is headed by the Kaiser, and includes the Chancellor, Ballin, Dernburg, Prof. Delbruck, Von Jagow, and interests represented by the Frankfurter Zeitung and the Berliner Tageblatt.

"'The go-on-with-the-war-at-any-cost party is headed by Von Tirpitz, Falkenhayn, Hindenburg, Mackensen, and its main prop and supporter is the Crown Prince.

"'The peace party realizes that it cannot get the sort of peace in its mind when the war began. The idea of indemnity from any quarter is no longer cherished. I think Germany would rejoice—at least, the Kaiser, the civil government and the industrial classes would—to stack arms on this basis: Autonomy for Poland; evacuation of Belgium, France, Serbia and Montenegro; restitution of Germany's conquered colonies; retention of Germany the fleet coaling stations in various parts of the world, and greater facilities for German shipping.'"

A. McDonald's Home, Edison Ave. Consumed By Fire Last Night

Husband Returning From Lodge Meeting Found Room Over Kitchen Burning and Family Sleeping in Front Part of the House---Was Insured for $1300---Nothing Saved --Beyond Reach of Fire Department.

The residence of Arthur McDonald, Edison Avenue, was totally destroyed by fire last night, about 11 o'clock. It was worth about $1,700 or $1,800, and was insured in the North West National Insurance Co. for $1,300.

Mr. McDonald had been attending a meeting at the L. O. L. Hall, near May's School and on returning home caught the smell of smoke as soon as he opened his door. He quickly made an examination of the house, and on opening the door of the room over the kitchen was met by a burst of flame that belched out at him. The pipe from the kitchen stove passed through this room and while the kitchen fire was smouldering the heat from it a short time before must have ignited the floor around the pipe.

Mrs. McDonald and one child were sleeping in other rooms and were hastily rescued in time. Mr. McDonald saved practically nothing from the house which was a frame building. The flames spread rapidly and in a very short time the house had become an immense torch, lighting up the surrounding fields to such an extent that even at a considerable distance from the fire one could read a newspaper. The sky was brightly illumined and the reflection suggested to those up town that one of the south end factories was ablaze. This opinion was encouraged by the alarm fro mBox 10. The Fire Department responded, but Edison Avenue is outside the city, is south of the G.T.R. and Lansdowne street, between Park Street and the Monaghan Road, and was beyond the radius of the firemen.

Practically nothing was saved from the building which this morning was little more than a heap of ashes.

A crowd representing every section of the city was attracted by the blaze Some of those who had spent but few moments in dressing were in various states of dishabille. One man wore an overcoat, a union suit and a pair of rubber boots.

This Morning's Police Court

Two Local Men Celebrate Their Return From the Prison Farm

"It's too bad to shut a man up this fine weather," remarked Donohue in this morning's police court. Donohue arrived in the city yesterday after a sojourn at the Guelph prison farm. He celebrated the occasion by getting drunk despite the fact that he is on the prohibited list. Donohue said that he got a supply of liquor in Port Hope en route to Peterborough.

"You were all right when you came to see me yesterday," observed Chief Thompson.

"I had a bottle with me," replied Donohue.

"You had your nerve with you. The idea of a blacklister coming to interview me with a bottle in his pocket," commented the Chief.

"You look as venerable as a clergyman," said Magistrate Dumble.

Donohue, whose hair is snow white, made a strong plea for liberty. He said it was a shame to be shut up this time of the year when men were needed so badly.

The Magistrate replied that he had never let a blacklister off so far and would have to assess Donohue the usual fine of ten dollars with the option of thirty days in jail.

One More Chance.

James Wilson, alias "Sunny Jim" looked none the worse for a winter spent at the Whitby gaol farm. Wilson expressed his willingness to go to work. "Give he one more chance for my life," pleaded Wilson. His request was granted.

Trench Day On Saturday Next To Buy Comforts For Soldiers

Canadian Kitchener League Has Done Extensive Work Already and Desires to Continue It---You Can Help Ladies By Any Contribution

The work of the Canadian Kitchener League is better known among the men at the front than it is right here where their activities are carried on. Practically since the war began the ladies of this organization have been devoting their time to the making of comforts and forwarding them to the various battalions and batteries in which Peterborough men are grouped. For these gifts the men have expressed their gratitude in numerous letters which have proved a source of encouragement to the Kitchener league members. Citizens who have assisted the League have heard but little of this satisfactory phase of the work. They have assisted the ladies in many respects, and in yesterday's Examiner they may have read the statement of the packages forwarded.

However, the Canadian Kitchener League is anxious to maintain their work and to that end are holding a TRENCH DAY on SATURDAY, APRIL 15. They are going into the highways of the city with their boxes and will be glad to receive any and every contribution from those who wish to assist in making the conditions of the soldiers at the front more comfortable.

The Kitchener League is doing its share by making socks, scarfs and other comforts, and they feel that there are many citizens who are willing and eager to assist them.

Hence, Saturday will be a collection day and to emphasize its object it has been called TRENCH DAY. You are requested to please remember it, and by your contribution to further encourage and make possible the continuance of the big supply of comforts the Kitchener League has been forwarding to the Peterborough boys in Flanders and France.

The following are a few excerpts from letters indicating gratitude of the men and the pleasures with which every package is received.

"I am writing you to acknowledge receipt of three packages of soldiers' comforts and to thank you for the same on behalf of the Peterborough boys under my command. I wish also to say that owing to changes in our organization here, I am not in touch with as many Peterborough boys as formerly and for that reason I will not need so great an amount of socks. The greater number of Peterborough men in the C.M.R. are with the 4th a. Toronto regiment.

I will divide up these comforts with the 4th fellows and will see if some one over there will be responsible for any more comforts which may come as it will be impossible for me to look after them once the offensive starts.

The formation of a salvage corps has made a great difference to the troops over here. At the present time a man gets no underclothes or shirt issued to him except when he goes to the baths.

There he gets a change of clean clothes, socks, towels in exchange for dirty ones. As the baths are monthly affairs, I think I use the word dirty advisedly.

And another one: Just a line to thank the Canadian Kitchener League through you for the splendid big scarf you so kindly sent me. I know what the cold nights on duty at the front are like and I assure you it will be greatly appreciated.

Lance. Corporal Lewmarck, 5th C. M. R. wrote:—"The ladies at home are certainly doing great work through the various clubs."

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Hughens Johnstone, painter and decorator, 330 College Street, will be answered—on Wednesdays—questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of stringency and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, stain-writing, paperhanging, furniture polishing and decorating, may be sent to The Examiner, and will receive attention in due course.

F.B.L., Peterborough, Ont.: What causes paint to gather in small rings and seems to sort of shrink when I paint it on, it just acts like water on a piece of glass or on a polished table top it does not lay on even. Is it because there is water in the paint, or is it an inferior paint? Also what can I do to prevent it acting like that? I have only done a very little and will wait for your explanation before proceeding further.

Ans.: That trouble is called "eissing" or "crawling" and is the result of many causes, a cold surface, an oily surface, painting over a high gloss, etc., will often cause paint to "crawl." Paint should be made especially for the particular conditions under which it is to be used. Besides the surface should be prepared to receive the paint. It is a mistaken idea some people have to suppose that a can of ready made paint, upon any sort or conditions of surface under all conditions. Your paint may be the best and act like that. Inferior or excess of oil may be the cause. I think some paints contain water not "aqua tap," but prepared water to prevent inferior pigment from precipitating. It holds it in suspension and would prevent rather than induce "eissing." The remedy is to paint in a moderate temperature, have your surface dulled by a slight sandpapering, or add a little vinegar, or sometimes the addition of turpentine will do.

Ignorant, Homewood Ave.: Please tell me in your "Arts and Crafts" column: (1) Exactly the meaning of self tone? (2) What is the name of the second range of shades of colours? (3) Is it true all shades can be had by mixing these?

Ans.: (1) Self tone is a pattern or design, composed of two or more tones or tints of a similar hue.

(2) They are called "secondary" colours, and are the outcome of mixing two of the primary colours as, red and yellow forming orange; blue and yellow forming green; red and blue forming purple.

(3) The theory of painting red, yellow and blue are the primary colours. (Black and white are not colours.) These with the secondarys are the sources from which all hues and tints are formed.

L. P. J., East City: Will you be kind enough to print in the Examiner if calsomine can be cleaned or can you hang paper on it?

Ans.: Some, in fact I think most kalsomines, may be cleaned very satisfactorily and at a very small cost. But the cheap substitute often used, composed of whiting and glue, I am afraid would not clean so readily, and when one considers the composition of glue and its natural decomposition on the walls or ceilings through decay, ugh! It would be better washed off from a health standpoint. As for papering over it and assuiting the decay and consequently creating vermin, banish the thought. If it is real kalsomine, some can be papered on with impunity, others must be sponged off.

Harry B., Toronto, Ont.: As a daily reader of The Examiner, perhaps you could tell me through your "Art" column of some solution or preparation to preserve a charcoal picture, something I mean to prevent the charcoal from rubbing off?

Ans.: There is a preparation sold in the Art material stores. (The Art Metropole on Yonge street sell it) called "Fixitall" or some similar name, and is applied through a sprayer.

Constant Reader, City: What is the reason for blisters in wall paper?

Ans.: Lack of knowledge usually! Unless I know the conditions, the kind of wall paper used, and saw the surface, I could not say, as there are so many causes. Paperhangers never have blisters because they study their paper and conditions. Write again with more details.

Doubtful One, Peterborough Ont.: Will be answered next Wednesday. Received too late for this issue.

Would Have Those Who Carry Whiskey Take Out License

LONDON, April 12.—A plan is being considered in England to-day to compel a man who wants to carry a bottle of whiskey in his pocket to take out a license. It isn't likely the scheme will be adopted but it illustrates the trouble the Government is having in its attempts to regulate the country's personal habits.

Present English saloon regulations were adopted as a war measure. The intention was to reach two particular classes of people—makers of munitions and other military necessaries, and the wives of soldiers at the front.

The authorities contended early in the war that excessive drinking by the munition workers was lowering their output. Then came the complaint that the soldiers' wives were drinking too much. These women received from the government what are known as 'separation allowances,' varying somewhat with circumstances, but amounting approximately to from $3 to $4 weekly.

The sum, though small, according to American standards, was liberal from the viewpoint of many English workingmen. They also received it paid into their own hands, instead of being dependent on what their husbands had previously seen fit to give them. It was charged that numbers of them spent far too large a proportion of it for alcoholic refreshments.

The upshot was a regulation restricting liquor-selling daily to two hours and a half, beginning with noon, and to three hours, beginning with 6.30 p.m.

Employers complained that unless they set the luncheon hour for their help later than 2.30 p.m. many workers returned fuddled for their afternoon's duties.

Housewives were bitterly dissatisfied at the epidemic of failures by their husbands to return from work until 2.30 or a little after, for dinner.

Indications are that there has been a falling off among those on whom the drinking habit had no very tight grip, but certainly no decrease, and perhaps the contrary, on the part of confirmed habitues.

Funeral of the Late W. J. Stubbs

Was Largely Attended — Many Floral Tokens—Clergy Pay Eloquent Tribute to Life of Deceased

The funeral of the late W. J. Stubbs took place yesterday afternoon from his father's residence, 691 Water Street, to the Little Lake cemetery. The popularity of the deceased and the high esteem in which he was held, was amply shown in the large number who turned out to pay their last respect to his memory, and also in the profusion of the floral tributes. These latter included many beautiful designs, among them being a pillow from the family, an anchor from Mr. and Mrs. Edgar and Miss Edgar, wreaths from Mr. A. T. Smith Toronto, the local Y.M.C.A., the officers and teachers of George Street Sunday School; a Star from the Bell Telephone Co., sprays from The Examiner Office and George Street Ladies' Aid; an anchor from the Ladies' 'Onward' Bible Class, and a basket from Mrs. Carlisle's Class.

The service was conducted by Rev. R. G. Peever, Rev. J. P. Wilson and Adjt. McElheney, and was very impressive. Both Mr. Peever and Mr. Wilson paid eloquent tribute to the exemplary life of the late Mr. Stubbs.

Many friends from out of town attended the funeral, among them being Mr. and Mrs. Merton Hall of Cobourg; Messrs. J. O. McCarthy, A. T. Smith, N. Quesnel, J. E. Short, Ivor Brock, W. Donnell, and Mrs. Chittick, all of Toronto; Mr. Fred Stubbs and little son, Galt, and Mrs. Bowen, and Mrs. D. Stinson, Omemee.

The pall-bearers were Dr. Middleton and Messrs. A. E. Dixon, Fred Skitch, Fred Stubbs, J. H. Northey and Garnet Galley.

Following is the resolution passed by the Peterborough Ministerial Association re the death of Mr. William Stubbs:

Resolved that this Association place on record its sincere sorrow on hearing of the death of the late William Stubbs of this city.

He was related to us as Ministers in an unusual way, in the capacity of "Paul Penman." His visits to our churches were always welcome. His reports of our services were always appreciative and charitable. We had learned to respect him as a brother, and to admire his faith and courage during his long illness.

Further, that we express our sympathy for his wife, his son, and other members of the family, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to them.

ments lost sixty per cent. of their strength before Vaux. The Thirteenth Company of the latter regiment was literally annihilated. The Eleventh Division in its attack of Avocourt Wood lost half its strength.

Eighty Battalions Withdrawn.

Owing to the heavy losses between February and April, eighty battalions are reported to have been withdrawn from reinforcements.

The main fighting before Verdun, which on the opening day of the latest and greatest offensive, Sunday, was initiated over a front of thirteen miles, has now developed into a terrific clash on two bloody miles. The object is the now famous Dead Man Hill, which bars the way of the Germans to a further advance west of the Meuse. The Germans hold trenches at the foot of the main hill in this region, apparently while the French are in possession of the slopes and summit.

COFFERDAM COLLAPSED AND WORK WILL BE ABANDONED

CLEVELAND, April 12.—A wireless message from Captain Cunning, wrecking master for the Great Lakes Towing Company, who has been working on the wrecked steamer Western Star all Winter, reports that after the pumps had lowered the water down the cofferdam collapsed abreast of her boiler-house, and that he would abandon the work for the present.

The Western Star owned by the Cadillac Steamship Company stranded at Robertson Rock, Georgian Bay, September 24, last year while bound to Little Current with coal. The steamer was insured for $800,000.

VIENNA BREAD IS ONE-FIFTH CORN

VIENNA, April 12.—A decree has been issued providing that hereafter all bread baked in Austria must contain at least twenty per cent. of Indian corn. The compulsory use of corn meal in bread began about a year ago the proportion at various times being set at fifty, seventy and even eighty per cent. Many people declared that the bread with this high proportion of maize was unedible, and it was hoped that it would be possible this spring to remove entirely the prohibition against full wheat bread.

PETERBORO' SOLDIER DIES AT WEYBURN

Death of Pte. Ernest Peters on Saturday Last—Funeral Here—To Be Military One

The death occurred on Saturday at Weyburn, Sask., of Pte. Ernest Peters, of the 152nd Overseas Battalion, and formerly of this city. The deceased, who was 28 years of age, was the son of Charles Peters of Otonabee. He went west last August and worked with farmers during the harvest. He afterwards enlisted in the above battalion. His illness was of short duration.

He leaves to mourn his loss a wife and three children, residing in this city. He is also survived by his parents, two brothers and two sisters. The brothers are Herbert at home and Norman with the Canadian Mounted Rifles at Shorncliffe. The sisters are Misses Annie and Edith at home.

The remains are being brought to Peterborough for burial. The funeral announcement of which will be made later, will be of a military nature.

SIX HORSES WERE BURNED

Special to The Examiner:

NORWOOD, April 11.—Six horses were destroyed as the result of a bad fire which broke out in the livery barns of Mr. L. E. Killoran, Peterborough Street, here, at 2 o'clock this morning. Five of the animals were burned to death and while the sixth was rescued from the burning building it was so badly injured that it had to be shot. The barns were totally destroyed and the loss will be a heavy one. At the same time as the blaze was raging in Mr. Killoran's property, a second fire broke out in the livery stable of Mr. John Weir, Coleman Street, but was extinguished with very little damage done. It is believed the fires were of incendiary origin.

CENSUS OF BELGIANS.

Men Between 25 and 35 Are Asked to Register.

HAVRE, April 11. — The Belgian Council Ministers to-day decided to take a census of all Belgian civilians between the ages of 25 and 35 years.

Men residing in parts of France not occupied by Germans, in Britain, Holland and other neutral countries will be asked to register locally. At the moment there is only the question of calling to the colours bachelors between the ages given.

STARVATION IN TRIESTE KILLS MANY BABIES

PARIS, April 11.—A neutral, who has just returned from Trieste says the population there has been reduced to 80,000. The lack of food has caused huge swarms of rats and cats to invade the streets. The cats are driven to attack human beings. Some days 800 cats have been killed.

Many children have died of hunger. The bread ration is reduced to 210 grammes perperson. Fishing is prohibited.

On Mondays and Fridays only there are sales of meat and butter. Such sale sare prohibited on the other days. Rations are divided according to the supply.

The scarcity of coal has prevented the heating of dwellings and the winter was intensely cold. There was no gas and many persons have been drowned in the canal owing to the darkness.

Everywhere long lines of people await their turn to obtain catables. Grass grows in the streets. The authorities fear an outbreak of cholera this year of greater intensity than that experienced last year.

The informant, who traversed Austria from end to end, says misery and discontent are rampant and if Great Britain tightens her blockade it will be impossible for Austria to resist for another winter. The scarcity of flour constitutes the chief anxiety of the Austrian authorities.

A New Republic In Southern China

Special to The Examiner.

SHANGHAI, China, April 12. — The formation of a new republic of Southern China, with a population of about a hundred millions, may be announced within a few weeks.

Following the lead of the Province of Kwang Tung, the important maritime Province of Che Kiang, on the Eastern Sea, to-day seceded from the Republic. In an effort to save the Republic from disolution President Yuan Shi Kai has summoned revolutionary leaders to meet him in conference at Peking. The southern rebels have not yet accepted the invitation.

Outbreak of Blackleg in Peterboro' County

District Representative McRae Has Been Besieged With Applications for Blackleg Vaccine—Eight Hundred Doses Sent Out Last Month

PREVENTION

"Blackleg has been very prevalent in the Norwood district, Peterboro county, this spring. Quite a number of animals have died of the disease, and the result is," says District Representative McRae, "that we have been besieged with applications for the blackleg vaccine. During the month of March we have sent out about 800 doses,, and expect there will be a great number of applications before the cattle are turned out to pasture. This indicates that the farmers of this section are waking up to the fact that it is necessary to vaccinate their cattle in order to get rid of the disease."

Blackleg is a rapidly fatal disease among young cattle, and like smallpox in the human race, one attack from which recovery is made is sufficient to give immunity from further attacks. Also, cattle are seldom affected after they reach the age of four years.

The disease is especially common in low lands, or in seasons that are warm and moist, and when it once develops among cattle grazing in a pasture, it is apt to again develop in following years if the season is favorable one.

When the disease is contracted the fever is high, there is a loss of appetite, the animal becomes stupid and exhaustion rapidly follows. Swelling may develop on different parts of the body. Their outline is very distinct, and the swelling seldom goes below the knee or hock. The animal goes lame in the affected quarter. At first these swellings are very sensitive, but become cold, insensitive, and gangrenous toward their centres, and when cut into are dark colored and contain gas. The blood is black, tarry and slow to clot.

Medicinal treatment is of little benefit. Prevention is the only satisfactory treatment. In localities where the disease is common, the blackleg vaccine should be used on all the younger animals each year. When this is practised the loss is insignificant. Dead animals should be burned or buried so deeply, with unslaked lime that there will be no chance of infection from the carcass.

Hungry Man of Montana Had His Revolver Ready

NEW YORK, April 12.—Michael Connolly, who has stopped for a great part of his 42 years of life at Colton, Mont., was held in $2500 bail yesterday by Magistrate Cobb in the Washington Heights Court, where he was arraigned accused of placing firearms against the brow of a delicatessen dealer. The complaint was made by Samuel Fine, of No. 3530 Broadway, and it was a long complaint and a loud one.

Mr. Connolly, who is something more than six feet tall, explained that he had arrived in New York about noon on Wednesday and that he had lost all track of his pocketbook before 1 o'clock. He was hungry and told several strangers so, after which, he said, they became stranger and stranger. Finally he determined to eat, and unfortunately for Mr. Fine, the decision was made directly in front of the delicatessen store.

Mr. Fine explained that a large man aiming what appeared to be a length of the Hudson tunnels, entered the store on Wednesday evening and stated that he would like something like a hundred sandwiches right off the griddle. Mr. Fine got under his counter and began getting distress, abandonment, and the need of police, fire and health protection. A large crowd gathered.

The hungry man from the west walked out twirling his revolver to see what the crowd desired. It was apparent that they desired to reach their homes in the smallest possible item of time.

Presently a policeman arrived and Connelly, surrendering his revolver butt first, allowed that he was hungry and that New York was the coldest and most cowardly town he had ever seen. Even in court he could not understand carrying a revolver was against the law. He said that he had been carrying one all his life and had never hurt anyone yet.

Starving Peons Mexico Tragedy; Boy Soldiers Fighting Only To Live

BY GEORGE SCARBOROUGH
The Noted Playwright Who Has Been Spending Some Time on the Rio Grande.

EL PASO, Texas, April 11.—I came down here to witness the great melodrama now being staged along the border.

The stage is hundreds of miles across. The curtain is the sky. Campfires serve as footlights and armed sentries take the place of promoters.

The difficulty is in deciding which side of a winding river and an imaginary line across dusty plains is back stage and which is front and on which side of the line and river is the audience, and which the players.

Anyhow, it's a good show—melodrama in the land of melodrama—red blood, brave men, and the proverbially beautiful women, distressed and otherwise, pistols, swords and uniforms and uncertainty. We who write for the footlights know uncertainty as suspense, and strive to create it. Down here it is self-created and everybody is trying to get away from it.

From the time I crossed the international bridge until I recrossed and heard an American soldier laugh at some jokes of his comrade guard, I heard no laugh. The sound of an outburst of heavy laughter on the Juarez plaza would probably cause more consternation than a volley of rifle shots. Shots there are frequent and laughs are fewer than few.

MERE BOYS AS SOLDIERS

As we rode about I saw many squads of soldiers, oddly uniformed—long on ammunition for the Mausers, but apparently short on ammunition for their stomachs. Many of these soldiers were boys not yet into their teens—hardly strong enough to lift their rifles, much less to level them at an enemy. They ought to issue two boys to one rifle.

I saw hundreds of sullen-faced, shifty-eyed men standing around in little groups. Their faces spoke eloquently of hunger.

I saw hundreds of women whose faces also told of hunger. There were expressions about their eyes which made me think they were hungrier than the men. Maybe that is because in Mexico the men eat first and the women get what is left. If nothing happens to be left, the women don't get much.

I saw also hundreds of children who looked hungrier than the women. The expression of a hungry child waiting to be fed is keen enough, but the expression of a hungry child who knows he probably will not be fed, is pathetic. I closed my eyes and I did some thinking and opened them when we arrived at the jail. I saw there, peering through the bars and windows and stretched on the floors many prisoners men and women.

These prisoners seemed to lack the hunted look of the outsiders and seemed contented. I was told many of them were soon to be executed. I wondered if that had anything to do with their content.

Mentally I passed up melodrama and comedy. I had seen something of the tragedy of Mexico and wanted to see more. I wanted to take a look into one of those tiny abode and thatch homes and have a little talk with its occupants.

My interpreter, ably assisted by an American silver dollar, gained entrance for me into a squalid abode but less than two hundred yards across the river. It was occupied by a woman, four children, two dogs and various smaller animate things.

The roof of the house was thatched, and the only fresh air came in through a small window, and without pausing immediately rushed out through the small door. A few rags and some straw in the corner were identified as the family bed, and a little corn and beans on a platter, eyed longingly by the two elder children, was identified as the family dinner. It had been well cooked over a little fire on the floor and was waiting for the return of the head of the house. Presently he came, and it took many Spanish words from the interpreter and another silver dollar from me to convince him that our mission was innocent. Whereupon, the head of the house squatted on the floor and ate the corn and beans.

The children sat in the corner and watched him eat, with eyes still longing. The woman rolled a cigarette and passed it to her husband where there were no more corn and beans. He lighted it, rubbed his stomach, commenced to hum a Mexican tune and dosed off to sleep.

The woman spoke a few words to the children, which the interpreter said was a promise to them that on the morrow she and they would have some corn and beans purchased with a part of the silver dollar.

TEMPTED TO INTERRUPT

The head of the house dosed on. I was tempted to interrupt his slumbers, but recalled what I had been advised about bad breaks in Juarez and went out to find the soldier. He was seated on the curb, if there had been a sidewalk. His rifle was on the ground by his side. He was crying.

While off duty, he said, he had been hunting around in the rear of stores for bottles to sell and stepped on a jagged piece of glass. He didn't have any shoes.

The lad had lived down in some interior town. Everything had been taken away by the raisers of different generals and he was hungry, and when one particular general came along and promised him fame and loot and food he became a soldier. He was not fighting for his country; he was only fighting to live.

But the promises of fame and the fat of the land had not been kept. He was hungrier than ever.

The lad said he had not been able to find a bottle to sell, and tried to sell us some of his rifle cartridges. He said he wanted to buy some corn and beans.

Poor little soldier boy! Poor mother and children! Poor Mexico! What you need is corn and beans, not powder and shot! Peace and something to eat!

No, I think I won't write a melodrama about the border. I would like to write the tragedy of the little soldier boy and the children with the longing eyes who were to get the corn and beans on the morrow.

KING WELCOMES FRENCH PARTY

LONDON, April 12.—The party of French Senators and Deputies, members of the Franco-British Parliamentary committee, who are now in England were received at Buckingham Palace yesterday.

King George in a speech of welcome, said the visit was a neutral expression of the friendship binding the two nations and that it gave concrete and practical form to the unity of their aims.

"When you meet the inhabitants of our cities," said the King, "you will learn how deep is the sympathy they feel for the sufferings inflicted by the ferocious invader upon the innocent population of your northern districts, how warm is our admiration for the splendid valor and constancy of the whole French people. Never has that undaunted spirit of unquenchable hopefulness of which French history furnishes so glorious examples shone with more brilliant lustre."

HANDS OFF THE HYDRO

Special to The Examiner:

"Extracts from an editorial in the Toronto World (Con.), April 11th, 1916.

"If the Ontario Government really means to take the responsibility of the Hydro-Electric Commission into their own hands, and make a political machine of it then there is going to be an evil time ahead for the whole scheme.

"It is stated that in taking over the management of the Hydro Electric Commission, the Government has in mind the switching of profits from the funds of the Commission into the Provincial Treasury. We say it is difficult to believe that such a course can be seriously contemplated. It would be a moral outrage.

"To suggest at the present time that the municipalities which have been pioneers in the movement should now be milked of profits for the benefit of the province at large, is about the most outrageous proposition ever put forward in Canada.

"The meeting of representatives of the municipalities which is to convene to-day for the purpose of protesting against the alleged intention of the Government is one that should receive the hearty support of all who are interested in the question of cheap electric power and light throughout the province."

Six Postoffices All in a Heap Proves a Puzzle

People Have to Call at All to Them To Be Sure of Getting Mail.

OTTAWA, April 12.—A puzzled member brought a post office situation to the fore in Parliament, and asked for light and guidance.

This was Dr. Chisholm of Inverness. He said that in his constituency there had been postoffices opened for political purposes, and that six of them were so close together that the people there had to call upon all of the six to be certain that they were getting their mail.

He said that this was not a comfortable state of affairs for either war time or peace time. He wanted fewer post offices and better mail service.

There was no answer.

Declares Daily Reports Are True

BERLIN, via Amsterdam to London, April 12.—The German War Minister, General Adolf Wild von Hohenborn, has made the following statement in the Reichstag:—

"I refrain from making any extended statement to you on the military situation as the daily reports from headquarters enable the nation to follow the satisfactory development of military affairs on all the fronts. Our army reports are phrased with military brevity, but, in contrast with those of our enemies, they are always true.

"A victorious country has no need to make excuses. That we have been victorious a glance at the map shows. This our enemies also know, though they do not admit it. That we shall be victorious throughout until the glorious end is guaranteed by the heroism of the army, the united will of the people, the moral strength of the national and an abundance of all things necessary to carry on the war."

BELGIUM'S QUEEN ABSENT 4-DAYS IN LAST 18 MONTHS

BY PAUL ERIC.
Correspondent with the Staff of the King of the Belgians.

By International News Service.

PARIS, April 9.—King Albert spent his birthday anniversary Saturday with his troops at the front.

The other day the Duke of Verdome said to him: "Everybody thinks you are at Havre with the Queen." The fact that King Albert has not left the remaining unoccupied Belgian soil during the past eighteen months, except when he accompanied President Poincare on brief trips to the French front.

The Queen has been absent from the King's side only four days. Then she took the royal children to England. The King's entourage consists solely of four officers, and the Queen has dispensed with her ladies in waiting and has only a woman companion.

When military, diplomatic and political business has been dispatched King Albert's principal recreation is to join his troops in the trenches, where, dressed in khaki and a steel helmet, he spends the long hours of the day and night.

The Queen's whole day is devoted to tending the wounded and taking care of refugee children. She spends three hours every morning dressed in a white uniform nursing the soldiers.

Safety First Produces Splendid Results On Grand Trunk Lines

MONTREAL, April 12. — Vice-President Howard G. Kelley, of the Grand Trunk Railway System, in a message issued here to-day to the employees in the operating, maintenance and construction departments of the road, says:

"There has been a gratifying reduction in the number of employees injured.

"This improvement, it is believed, is due largely to the exercise of care and diligence which is exported, as a matter of course, from railroad men.

"The management, however, takes this opportunity to express grateful appreciation to officers and employees whose fidelity to duty has made this announcement possible.

"We would like, if we could, to meet every employee on the Grand Trunk face to face. If it were possible to do so and if, at such meeting, we had time ot ask you one and only one question, that question would be: "Are you doing your work in the safest practicable manner?"

Woman Officer Dives Into River After Prisoner

NEW YORK, April 12.—Miss Constance Kopp, New Jersey's only woman under sheriff and who has distinguished herself in detective work, dived into the Hackensack River at Hackensack yesterday morning, before daylight, and rescued an insane prisoner.

"She certainly gets a new dress for that," said Sheriff Robert N. Heath, of Bergen county. "Miss Kopp is the best police officer and detective in the State of New Jersey. She does not know the meaning of fear and with her bravery she uses brains."

Tony Hojnacka, of Wallington, who had tried to cut his throat, was declared insane and Miss Kopp was directed to remove him from Hackensack to the State asylum at Morris Plains. On the way she stopped at Rutherford to get a woman patient, but there she was delayed so long that she decided to return Hojnacka to Haskensack. In the automobile with her were Sheriff Heath and the chauffeur, but the man was her prisoner.

As they approached the county jail Hojnacka leaped from the automobile and ran for the river. Miss Kopp was after him before the Sheriff knew he was gone. She pursued him the three long blocks to the river and saw him plunge in. She stopped at the edge only long enough to remove her hat, a coat and an outer skirt, and then she dived in.

She soon reached her prisoner, and after the hardest kind of work got him to the pier. There Sheriff Heath and the chauffeur had arrived. They pulled the brave under sheriff and her prisoner out. Hojnacka was unconscious and remained so for three hours, until revived with a pulmotor. Miss Kopp was put to bed, and after a long sleep she was all right yesterday afternoon. Keeping his word about the new dress, Sheriff Heath sent Miss Koop and Mrs. Heath to New York to make the purchase.

Miss Kopp first came into public notice through the number of threatening letters she and her sister received. She shot at a man prowling about her home several times, and finally arrested Harry Kaufman, a Paterson silk mill owner, and caused him to be fined $1,000 for sending threatening letters to her.

Last week her detective work resulted in the conviction of Anthony Leo on a Mann Act charge.

EGGS AS MISSILES TOO MUCH FOR HER

NEW YORK, April 12.—An element of rudeness which Mrs. Mae F. Howard thought she discerned in her husband might have been forgiven had he not exhibited an abject lack of economy in throwing a package of strictly fresh eggs at her, she said in a complaint filed yesterday in the Supreme Court.

John Joseph Howard, defendant in the separation action, is a member of the wholesale produce firm of Howard & Connolly and is believed by his wife to have lost respect for the price of eggs.

His habit of throwing things grew to such an alarming extent, Mrs. Howard says, that he eventually threw her out of bed and she left him. Mr. Howard denies that he threw either his wife or the eggs. He says a border in their home, who was neither a woman or yet a gentleman, is responsible for his trouble. Mrs. Howard denies that. Justice Bijur allowed $13 a week pending trial.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements, must to secure insertion, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

Dear Editor,— Having noticed in last evening's paper the piece "Imprisonment in the Lift Lock," I would like to say it was no gentlemanly act for some of the boys of the 93rd Battalion band to look a number of people, including a number of young girls and then leave them there without giving word to the lock master to open the gate to let them out. If the lockmaster had not been notified they would all have had to risk their lives by crossing the lee. Was that the act of a hero? Should they have been German spies no doubt they would not have stopped to lock the gate, for as it was you could not see their heels for dust in going over the hill, being afraid of a number of girls.

Hoping they will become braver soldiers before it is time for them to face the Germans, and thanking you, Mr. Editor for this space, I remain,

A Witness of the Act.

Germans Think They See Signs of Peace

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, April 12. — The following remarkable cable from Berlin bears striking evidence of the Germans to seize upon any pretext for peace talk. It is based upon a speech by Asquith in which Britain's Premier did not back down one iota from his previous unpromising attitude towards Prussian militarism. By seizing upon and distorting this speech, Berlin gets an excuse to outline peace terms at a time when the crushing defeat around Verdun makes such a discussion very acceptable to the German people.

Berlin, April 11.—The end of the war has been brought appreciably nearer by the significant developments of the last forty eight hours.

The press reports of Premier Asquith's Monday night reply to Von Bethmanne Holweg's speech reached Berlin to-day. They created a mild sensation. Disregarding certain belligerent phrases well informed Germans interpreted Asquith's speech as a faint hint that the time is drawing near when England will be willing to enter peace discussions. For the first time since the beginning of the war the English Premier, as the Germans interpreted his speech, modified.

His demand that Prussian militarism must be crushed, when he substituted for this statement the German "military caste," must not in future guide Germany's international policies, Germans believe that he executed a complete back down. Germans assert that the so-called "military caste" was not in the diplomatic saddle before the war and that the Chancellor's recent victory over the Von Tirpitz faction is evidenced that the element Asquith professed to fear has not gained control of Germany's foreign policies. The Holweg and Asquith statements, together with recent official and unofficial utterances indicate that peace prospects are taking shape along certain lines.

Selfish Husband Is Rapped By Col. Roosevelt

Theodore Roosevelt lets up on Mexico, Germany and Wilson in his contribution to the current Metropolitan Magazine and substitutes a certain class of husbands as the object of his attack. He says, in par;:

"Of all species of silliness the silliest is the assertion sometimes made that the woman whose primary life-work is taking care of her home and children is somehow a 'parasite woman.' It is acted upon by a large number of selfish, brutal or thoughtless men, and it is screamed about by a number of foolish women.

"The primary work of the man is to earn his own livelihood and the livelihood of those dependent upon him. In other words, the man must do his business and do it well in order to support himself and his wife and children and in order that the nation may continue to exist.

"But exactly as it is true that no nation will prosper unless the average man is a home maker—that is, unless at some business or trade or profession he earns enough to make a home for himself and his wife and children and is a good husband and father—so no nation can exist at all unless the average woman is the home keeper, the good wife, and unless she is the mother of a sufficient number of healthy children to insure the race going forward and not backward.

The indispensable work for the community is the work of the wife and the mother. It is the most honorable work. It is literally and exactly the vital work which of course must be done by the average woman or the whole nation goes down with a crash.

"The one way to honour this indispensable woman, the wife and mother, is to insist that she be treated as the full equal of her husband. Marriage should be a real partnership—a partnership of the soul, the spirit and the mind, no less than of the body.

"Earning money is not one whit more indispensable than keeping the home. Indeed, I am inclined to put it in the second place. The husband who does not give his wife, as a matter of right, her share in the disposal of the common funds is false to his duty.

"It is not his money that he gives to her as a gift. It is hers as a matter of right. He may earn it, but he earns it because she keeps the house; and she has just as much right to it as he has.

"He is a poor creature if he grudges it; and she in her turn is a poor creature if she does not insist upon her rights, just exactly as she is worse than a poor creature if she does not do her duty."

A soldier's wife (alluding to black eye) a present from the lodger when asked for the rent—It ain't my good looks I cares about, but see the awkward position it puts me in. No on'll believe as my 'usband ain't back from the front.—London Bystander.

THE BEGINNING OF THE END OF THE WORLD WAR

Periodically, every few months since the war began we have had rumours of the near approach of the "big drive," which we all look forward to as sweeping this war into recent history. Various reasons are given as to why the great offensive is surely about to start. However, seldom do these reasons include the great underlying aim of the allied powers—that of completely enclosing the Teutonic forces and then gradually and sternly tightening the ring until they are thoroughly and completely crushed.

Until Turkey joined Germany, the Teutonic forces might have been more easily enclosed and within a very much smaller space. Even after that, had the Allies forced the Dardanelles, the enclosing operations would have been much simpler, and on a far less extensive scale. As it has been, practically the whole of Mesopotamia, to the Persian Gulf, has formed a mighty important outlet for the Teutonic forces to obtain supplies. Only when they have been swept from this vast region and driven into the upper end of Asiatic Turkey, will the actual enclosing operations be really substantially complete. Grand Duke Nicholas is doing wonders in this very task and it is probable that within a few weeks there will be terific and extremely important battles between very large armies, as the Russian forces deliver their heaviest blows in driving the Turk from Asia, across the Dardanelles, and finally put the Stopper into that bottle neck. Germany will not permit this if she can help it, and when she sees it is unavoidable she will make her last frantic efforts to break through. It is possible that the Verdun failure is one such effort.

With the stopper finally driven in and the ring complete, the grand offensive will certainly start. It may start somewhat in advance to prevent German asistance to the Turks but, at any rate it does not seem that it can be many months off now.

MOVIE PICTURE OF BABYLON MUSSED UP

Special Building to be Burned Received Call From Fire Dept. and Zip Went the "Fillum."

LOS ANGELES, April 8:—While the fate of Babylon, fiercely besieged by more than 2,000 doughty warriors, trembled in the balance, and a huge wooden tower used in the attack had been successfully fired by the Babylonians as a prelude to the routing of the enemy, some unidentified person turned in a fire alarm and the filming of the most spectacular event in the greatest production of filmdom was rudely interrupted by the charge of a fire truck into the picturesque scenes of battle.

For five minutes the firemen occupied the foreground of the picture, while twenty-eight directors and more than 3,000 other frantic individuals commanded, beseeched and implored them to get out so that the burning tower could be recorded on film in its otherwise historically correct environment. As a result of the incident, several hundred feet of film will have to be cut out, and it is possible that the costly scene must be re-enacted.

To save your stockings, sew a piece of chamois leather on the inside of the heel of your shoes and by so doing delay the appearance of those dreadful holes.

SLANG FROM SHAKESPEARE

That more than one of our slang expressions can be traced to Shakespeare is not a new discovery, but it is gratifying to find a college student making it for himself and a college press bureau deeming the fact worthy of a place in its news bulletin. What motive prompted this student to look into the first part of "Henry IV" does not appear—we can only conjecture that it was to be played in the town or at the college—but he came across this passage:

Positive Proof That Sussex Was Torpedoed Is Seen In Germany's Admission

That an Unidentified Steamer Was Attacked By a Submarine in the Same Place and at Practically the Same Time the Channel Liner Was Damaged.

LONDON, April 13.—Positive proof that the Sussex was torpedoed, was seen by British officials to-day in the German admission that an unidentified steamer was attacked by a submarine in the same place and at practically the same time the Channel liner was damaged. It is officially stated that no other vessel was torpedoed in the Channel at the time mentioned in the German note transmitted to Washington.

The Sussex was damaged at 3:50 p.m. on March 24th. The German note states that the vessel attacked by the submarine was torpedoed at 3:55 p.m.

Only in the description of the vessel attacked does the German note fail to tally in nearly every particular with the facts as collected by the British and French governments. It was held here that the U-boat commander sketching his victim hastily by a view obtained through his periscope might easily have made an error in the details of outline. The discrepancy between the description of the steamer mentional in the German note, and the published pictures of the Sussex, is not so great as to offset other evidence, it was held here.

TABLES CLEAR FOR A "SHOW DOWN."

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Tables are now clear for a "Show down" between the United States and Germany on the submarine question. President Wilson and Secretary Lansing are now at work completing the evidence in the hands of this Government tending to prove Germany guilty of repeated violation of her assurances. The issue is clear cut in the midst of officials, and the words of one, close to the President, "This Government will act now in such a manner as to entirely satisfy the people of this country."

Germany holds therefore, as reports show, she is not liable to criticism for a breach of faith in the recent Channel attacks.

So far as the reports, now in the hands of the State Department show, she is liable. The fact that Germany admits attacking a vessel, in the vicinity of the point where the Sussex was wrecked, is held to materially strengthen this Government's position even though Germany says the vessel does not appear to have been the Sussex. The question of Germany's assertion of the right to sink freighters, also looms large as a factor in determining this country's position.

CALCULATIONS OF GERMAN STAFF UPSET BY THE RUSSIAN ATTACK

PETROGRAD, via London, April 13.—The fighting north and south of Dvinsk is being waged fiercely, but still without decisive advantage to either side. Military opinion here is inclined to view the situation with the greatest complacency, since the main object of Russia's surprise attack on Field Marshal von Hindenburg's Dvinsk position—to create a diversion while the German attack on Verdun was in progress—is regarded as having been fulfilled.

The necessity of defending their Dvinsk positions is said to have upset the calculations of the German General Staff, who had counted on a period of quiet along the Russian front to enable them to transfer troops to engage in the campaign against the French. The unexpected pressure by the Russians, which made considerable headway against the German armies at Jacobstadt, Postavy and Lake Narocz, according to the prevailing view here, not only forced von Hinedgburg to use all his available forces, including the reserves, on this front, but necessitated the bringing up of fresh troops destined for Verdun to prevent the possibility of being compelled to abandon the whole Deinsk line.

The operations of the Russian Caucasian armies, which are fighting their way to Trebisond, Erzinjan and Mesopotamia, have entered upon a new phase, in which Turkish resistance is no longer a negligible factor By a careful regrouping of their forces the Turks are now opposing the three main lines of the Russian advance with a solid organized resistance which gives way only after most stubborn fighting.

According to estimates by Russian officers, the Turkish force has at least been doubled by reinforcements from European Turkey, the greater part of which are concentrated near Erzinjan, which, despite the importance of Trebizond and the Persian operations, is a region of the greatest value to the Turks, since it stands in the way of the main Caucasian armies, whose ultimate aim is to sweep westward toward Constantinople.

Canada Now Has 37,582 Miles of Rails

OTTAWA, April 13.—During the past four years Canada has spent in cash for railway subsidies and on the construction of the Government railways more than $100,000,000. The railway subsidies which have gone into private enterprises have totalled a little more than $80,000,000, and of this amount the Canadian Northern got over $60,000,000, to say nothing of further assistance by way of Provincial subsidies, land grants, bond guarantees, etc.

Canada now possesses and operates 36,582 miles of railway. The operating mileage of Canadian railways during the statistical year ended June 30 last increased by 4,797 miles, although eleven months of the year were included in the war period.

Railway capitalization increased by $95,990,127, bringing the total up to $1,975,810,000, including stocks, $997,-091,101; consolidated debenture stock (C.P.R.), $176,284,982; bonds, $651,-734,905. There are also outstanding against lines under construction, stocks amounting to $20,257,500, and bonds of $62,224,004. Stock dividends in 1915 were $62,241,867, an increase of nineteen millions.

Lines owned and operated by the Government, and which are not capitalized, are covered in the report under a statement of cost amounting to $206,542,201.

Just Try This When Hairy Growths Appear

(Modes of To-day)

A smooth, hairless skin always follows the use of a paste made by mixing some water with plain powdered delatone. This paste is applied to the hairy surface 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain or discomfort attends the use of the delatone paste, but caution should be exercised to be sure that you get real delatone.

ALMANAC MADE HIM ILL.

After Reading It Felt He Had Symptoms of Many Diseases and Quit Work.

HAMMOND, Ind., April 11. — Henry Anderson, in the Circuit Court on trial for failure to support his two children, said he had read in a patent medicine almanac prescriptions of so many disease symptoms he noticed in himself that he realized he was a physical wreck and unable to work. He is separated from his wife, who, it was said, is supporting the children.

Judge Vandeveer ordered that two physicians make a careful examination of Anderson. The Court indicated that he would send Anderson to prison on for from one to seven years if he is found to be in good health.

HARDING A POSSIBILITY.

May Prove Compromise Candidate for the Presidency.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—United States Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio loomed large to-day as a potential "dark horse" candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination. Having been chosen as temporary chairman of the convention, he can count on the support of the middle western combination. If it shall be demonstrated early that either of its aspirants cannot win Harding is very influential in Republican circles, has a wonderful platform presence, and much personal magnetism. Chosen to sound the "keynote" of the Republican campaign, he will have an opportunity to impress his personality on the delegates.

Don't Let Soap Spoil Your Hair

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt, and dandruff.

It is a far pleasanter neighborhood to live in, while property values have increased amazingly. Let's each of us get busy and begin improving our neighborhood like this."

Why They're Sold

Wawanesa, May 19th, 1911.

"In the autumn of 1911, I suffered with a continual pain in the back. As a druggist, I tried various remedies without any apparent results. MY TERRIBLE HACKING AND SPLITTING COUGH

WAS ENTIRELY CURED BY

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

Mrs. Clara Jackson, Huntsville, Ont., writes us under date of January 12th, 1915. "I take great pleasure in writing you concerning Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Last winter I contracted a very bad cough which troubled me all through the summer. This winter I started to take Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after taking three bottles I can truthfully say that I fell like another woman. The terrible hacking and splitting cough, and the dry sensation in my throat is entirely cured. I would certainly recommend it to anyone troubled with bronchitis or lung trouble. I have not words too grateful to give you."

All obstinate coughs and colds yield quickly to the action of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, combining as it does all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, and the soothing, healing and expectorant properties of other excellent herbs, roots and barks.

"Dr. Wood's" has been on the market for the past twenty-five years, and we claim that it is the best cure for a cough or cold that you can possibly procure. The thousands of testimonials we have received prove that our claim is right.

All we ask you is to see that you get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it, and don't accept some no-account substitute.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

JUST GOOD ENOUGH TO BE DANGEROUS?

If Poor Advertising Mediums were ENTIRELY worthless, they would not be Dangerous. For they would not, then, make any appeal whatever to sensible advertisers.

But an ADVERTISING MEDIUM which has a LITTLE MERIT is like "a little knowledge," "a dangerous thing." Some Business Men there are, always, who—for considerations of "cheapness" etc.—will either rely upon such mediums wholly, or give them an absurdly large part in their Advertising Campaigns.

Scored Both of Them.

When Justice Maule was on the bench a bullying counsel was one day browbeating an elderly female witness in a case before him. Having bullyragged her into a state of utter speechlessness, the lawyer appealed to the judge to make her answer his questions. "Why do you not answer, madam?" asked the judge. "Because, my lord, he scares me so," replied the trembling woman. "So does he me, ma'am," said the judge.—Law Notes.

Like the Mythical Dragon.

In the Malay archipelago is a reptile much like the mythical dragon. It has loose ribs that extend the loose skin and form its wings. There is also a frog with spreading feet that makes a parachute which enables it to flit from tree to tree, and a flying lemur that can spread out its whole body like an umbrella and leap and fly a hundred feet at a time, from the top of one tree to another.

Preaching and Practice.

"Isn't it horrid," remarked Miss Rwyftly to her friend—"don't it horrid that men will put those nasty old pipes into their mouths?"

"Yes," said her friend emphatically as she stooped and tenderly kissed the black face of her pet pug—"yes, indeed it is."—Pearson's.

A Suggestion.

"John," said Mrs. Withers, "where can I get a set of resolutions passed by our Civic Sorority, yesterday engrossed?"

"I really don't know, my dear," said Withers. "Why don't you have them embroidered?"—Judge.

Accuracy is the twin brother of honesty.—Rosmuna.

Nature's Methods.

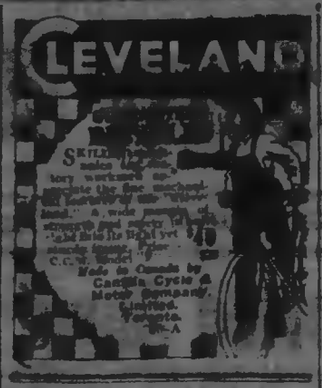
Nature is no spendthrift, but takes the shortest way to her ends. As the general says to his soldiers, "If you want a fort, build a fort," so nature makes every creature do its own work and get its living, be it planet, animal or tree.—Emerson.

Both Clubs.

Crawfield—To do a thing well, you know, you must do it yourself. Crabshaw—But you miss the fun of seeing the other fellow work.—Judge.

Sympathy.

A helping word to one in trouble is often like a switch on a railway track—but one inch between wreck and smooth rolling prosperity.



CENSURED THE CULPRIT.

But the Judge Took Him Into His Private Office to Do It.

"You allege cruelty, madam," says the court. "What particular form of cruelty?"

"Your honor," says the complainant, "my husband got mad and threw things at me because I tried to please him with the meals I cook for him."

"What have you to say?" asks the judge of the defendant.

"I'll tell you, judge. Maybe I was a little too fussy, but it's this way: She is always trying new salads that she finds in the recipe columns of the papers, and after I had tried to eat nasturtium salad and hickory nut salad and carrot salad and cauliflower salad and dried beef salad and spaghetti salad I did lose my temper when she handed a dish of shredded chrysanthemums with olive oil on them."

"I will not grant a divorce, but I will censure the defendant in my private office," says the judge, leading the way. Once the door is closed on him and the wondering defendant the judge says:

"Shake, old chap. I did the best I could for you. I have to put up this bluff about censuring you because my own wife will read of the case, and she is now making delicious dessert from cold mush and left over breakfast foods."

Clasping each other's hand, the two men wept silently.—Life.

FUNERAL EFFIGIES.

A Queer Custom That Was Followed in Bygone Days.

At the funerals of great personages the old chroniclers tell us, "this lively effigy," dressed to imitate life, was carried in a chariot before the corpse to the grave, then there set up under a "hearse" as a temporary monument in the church. Such effigies were generally in a glass case standing over the tomb where the interment had taken place. Some statues were of wood, with heads of plaster, but the third modern sort were of wax.

In the olden days laudatory poems or epitaphs were stuck with pins or wax to these "hearses" and were even thrown into graves on the coffins in a similar manner to our modern custom of flowers at a burial.

When Skelton, poet laureate to Henry VIII., "took sanctuary at Westminster to escape the displeasure of the then all powerful Cardinal Wolsey it is said that he subsisted on what he earned by writing epitaphs for use at funerals in the abbey.

Ben Jonson's well known epitaph to the Countess of Pembroke—was evidently then attached to the "hearse."—Westminster Gazette.

She Didn't Want Tickets.

There was a number of ticket buyers in the theater lobby. Following the unwritten law, they had formed in line and were being waited upon according to precedence. Suddenly an overdressed woman, ignoring the line, rushed up to the window and tried to engage the attention of the box office man.

The box office man shook his head at her. "Madam," he said, with some emphasis, "you must take your place at the foot of the line."

"Foot of the line?" she repeated. "Nonsense!"

"You will not get any tickets," declared the man, "until all those people in the line have been served."

"Tickets!" replied the woman. "I don't want any tickets. All I want is change for a dime. Two nickels will do. Thanks."

And she hastily rushed out.—Chris-tian Plain Dealer.

Conscience.

It was De Quincey who likened conscience to the whispering gallery in St. Paul's, London. A word spoken over an aperture on one side of the vast dome is loudly re-echoed on the other. In youth's confidence could still be sublime whispers; in old age, at the other end of his life's gallery, the same conscience spoke to him in peals of thunder. The still small voice which the boy would not hear returned to the old man like the crack of doom in terrible self reproach. Even Nero, the imbecile, tried to fly from the spot where he had caused his mother to be murdered. He fancied he was haunted by her angry ghost; that he heard the blowing of a bloody trumpet and wailings over her tomb. What a terrible discovery of the conscience is!—Christian Herald.

Economy and Confidence.

Her discovery in its way was not less than opulent.

"It is so easy to save when you know how!" she exclaimed. "Oh, so easy! Do I wish to save $25? Very well. I go down town and buy something I would like that costs $25; and then I don't buy it. Nothing could be simpler."

She did not deny, however, that her method involved a sacrifice.

"But if the sacrifice is too painful," she went on to explain, "I go and find something my husband would like that costs $25 and don't buy that!"—Puck.

EASY TO GUESS IT.

What Do You Think is the Answer to "This Puzzle Problem?"

With the rent due weeks in arrears Scribbler was thinking that the landlady should hear the beating of his heart and call for a reckoning. Presently there reached his ears the sound of some words, as of two striving together in deadly argument. Scribbler became aware that Mr. and Mrs. Slumpkins were engaged in suggesting one of their domestic tangles.

At length there came a fight tap on the door.

Scribbler looked behind the window as a possible avenue of escape. However, before he could make up his mind to try the rainspout route the door opened cautiously, and first Slumpkins' bald head appeared and then the rest of him crept slowly in.

In a whisper he advised Scribbler not to pay Mrs. Slumpkins, inasmuch as she was not the head of the house.

Scribbler acquiesced and Slumpkins disappeared.

A little later another rap on the door, this time more insistent, caused Scribbler to look up. It was Mrs. Slumpkins.

"Say, don't pay my old man any money, Mr. Scribbler. He won't do nothing but drink it up. Take anything I owe to let him know who runs this house. We ain't speaking to each other now."

Again Scribbler complied.

That was six months ago. They haven't spoken to each other yet, and Scribbler goes on his way rejoicing.

Puzzle question: What will be the first question they ask when they start speaking again?—Satire.

TINY ELECTRIC IONS.

Scientist Says They Are the Smallest Units in the World.

We used to think that about the smallest thing in the world was an atom of hydrogen. In fact, it was taken as the unit by which the atomic weight of all metals was expressed. For instance, the smallest possible division of the metal lead was found to be 206 times that of hydrogen, gold 196 times, etc.

Hand in hand, however, with the modern conception of the nature of the electric current, has come a new conception of infinitude in small things. Now, they say, the smallest thing in the world divisable by the hand of man is the electric ion. This is the individual unit of electricity, the moving part of a current when it passes through a wire. It is so small that it can run through a copper bar at a speed of 186,000 miles a second without turning corners. Electric ions trickle through a copper wire in much the same way as grains of sand through a sieve.

Scientists, armed with instruments considerably finer than grocery store scales, have isolated and measured them and found that their relation to that lightest of all gases, hydrogen, is as one to the seventeenth power of ten, or, by other words, the fraction representing their relation to an atom of hydrogen is expressed by a million-million-millionth.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Generous Soul.

"Now, Jim," said the old lady to her son, who was about to leave the countryside to try his luck in London, "there's plenty of money in that big city, for the streets are said to be even paved with gold."

Jim "had his doots," but these were quickly removed, for he had barely got out of Euston station when, to his surprise, he espied slyly reposing on the kerb a bright, glittering sovereign. Eagerly he picked it up and walked a little farther on, when he came across a blind man who was begging.

At once his sympathetic heart went out to the unfortunate man, and as he put the sovereign into his hand he said:

"Take this, my friend. I can see 'em tha' earn't!"—London Globe.

CONTROL OF LIQUOR TRADE

British Government likely to Assume It—New Non-alcoholic Beverage.

LONDON, April 11.—Government control of the liquor trade is foreshadowed by the present heavy taxation, and a limitation of the hours of opening seems likely soon to become a fact. It is understood the liquor control board has purchased some saloons, and purposes to acquire all licensed houses in Cumberland.

The liquor control board has discovered a new non-alcoholic beer, the sale of which will be pushed as far as possible in the English public houses. "It smells like beer, it looks like beer, it tastes like beer—the only difference is in the headache," says the statement issued by the board.

In a test case a workman drank the contents of twenty pint bottles without becoming intoxicated. The new drink will be placed at the disposal of Parliament, in the House of Commons bar.

"Ah," said Mr. James, "then London is the Texas of Europe."—Manchester Guardian.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A HERO INDEED

A Happening at Quince Harbor

By CLARISSA MACKIE

In Quince Harbor village every man is a fisherman. We, the inhabitants, have been brought up as one people, and when anything happens here we all have to hear about it. Perhaps if there were newspapers published every day for us to read about what is going on in the big world we would be less interested in each other's affairs.

Captain Barnabas Fish—every man who owns a boat, be it motorboat or tug, is called captain—has the principal sense of humor among us, and when there is nothing to do and the fishermen, their wives and daughters get together, dependent on one another for amusement, we usually rely on the captain to help us out.

One evening just before supper a lot of us were at Captain Fish's when some one said that nothing had been going on in the village lately and it would be a relief even if there'd be a fire or something to wake us up.

Captain Barnabas Fish slowly filled his pipe and packed the tobacco tightly in the bowl with one huge thumb.

His weather beaten countenance was always a barometer of his mental condition, and now, as I watched his blue eyes twinkling merrily, while his generous mouth endeavored to keep itself straight and in proper order, I scented interesting happenings in Quince Harbor village.

Mrs. Fish was sewing rags for a carpet which she said was much needed in the spare bedroom, which I'as paying guest was occupying after my custom, and I was sitting idly enjoying the lovely panorama of the village snuggling among the hills that ran down to the harbor, which was half embraced by lines of sandy bluffs.

Captain Barnabas emitted a throaty chuckle. Maria Fish glanced at him sharply, and I inclined my best ear in his direction.

"For the land sake, Barnabas Fish, what's the matter?" ejaculated Maria at last. "You've been actin' all mornin' as if you was chuck full of somethin' funny and was dyin' to tell it out. Did anything happen at the engine company's meetin' last night?"

Captain Barnabas scratched a match, lighted his pipe and puffed slowly for several moments.

"It was something I heard at the meeting," he admitted; "something that happened to Ananias Sline."

"Why is it," I asked, with interest, "that wherever Ananias Sline is things begin to happen right away?"

"Because he's so deceitful and catfooted that he's always making trouble for somebody," was Maria's prompt answer.

"Likewise amusement," added Captain Barnabas. "It seems this happened last week while we was over to camp meeting at Rockybrook, so we missed it. I was in the bank the very next morning, and as I came out Ananias was polishing the front windows.

I thought he looked mighty sour, and, says I in kind of a joking way, 'What you been up to now, Ananias?' And he turned on me like a spiteful little cat, and says he, 'None of your goldarned business!' So I shifted my helm and steered clear of him, but I knew something had happened to upset him. That night he came to me for help, but he was close mouthed about his trouble.

"Last night at the engine house when the meeting was over some of 'em got to telling stories about fires, and all to once they fell to talking fit to kill over the fire that started in the widder Rowell's house the night we was over to Rockybrook camp meeting. So me, not being there and not knowing about it, the chief told me the story, and it explains why Ananias is so glum just now and why he looks on all the world as his enemy.

"To begin, it seems that the widder has staying with her a woman canvasser from Little River, her name being Phoebe Pringle, and for looks she's quite a trim sailing little craft—not so tubby as the widder—with a tongue as sharp as her shoulder blades and little black eyes that snap you up sharp."

"She came here," interrupted Maria, threading her needle. "Miss Telham, you remember that impudent little gossip that tried to sell me a cookery book—me who can cook all around anybody who ever wrote a cookery book!"

I remembered the episode of the canvasser, and I had enjoyed her battle of wits with Maria Fish, who justly prided herself on her culinary triumphs.

"Well, it seems Ananias met this Miss Pringle three times a day at the widder's hospitable board, as they say in story books," went on the genial captain, "and, her being kind of fascinating as well as some younger than the widder, who considers herself engaged to Ananias, I s'pose you know, ma'am, and the Pringle woman being fascinating"—

"Humph!" sniffed Maria scornfully. "Yellow as saffron!"

"Well, yellow was becoming with her black eyes," said the captain solemnly, "and her being fascinating to Ananias, he got to paying her teeny little attentions, like passing the butter without her asking for it and helping her to pudding sauce three times and forgetting all about the widder Rowell, who didn't get any.

"Then, the widder watching them like cat and mouse, it seems Ananias took to writing poetry to Miss Phoebe and leaving it around where she'd be likely to find it. One day he made a poem and dropped it in one of her rubber overshoes in the hall rack, and Miss Phoebe wore that poem underfoot all the rainy day before she found it, all damp and muddy. Another time he dropped a poem in her umbrella, that being handy, too, in the front hall, and when she opened it in front of the postoffice some silly girls got hold of it when it dropped out, and Miss Phoebe had to pretend she didn't know where it came from.

"I guess Miss Phoebe as well as Ananias was having a hard time, both of 'em being under the widder's eagle eye. But it was worse for Ananias, for he had to keep two jealous females apart and"—

"I told you he was double dealing and cat footed," interrupted Maria.

"Well, to make my story short, it seems that the night of the fire the widder Rowell had been burning some rubbish in her kitchen stove and when she went to bed there were some rags smouldering there. In some way the flue was stopped up—swallers' nests in the chimney, I guess—and along about midnight the house was filled full of smoke.

"The widder screeched 'Fire!' and ran out into the road in a blue flannel nightgown, and Miss Phoebe screamed herself hoarse as she stood beside her, she wearing a pink flannel—ahem!" said the captain hurriedly, in response to a warning glance from his wife's eye.

"I don't see why them details are necessary," chided Maria severely.

The captain scratched his chin thoughtfully.

"Seems funnier to think of the two of 'em, one in blue and t'other in pink—well, Maria, I'm going on with the story.

"Seems Ananias had been out to a lodge meeting and he was just getting home when it happened, and he found them hollering fire. Cap'n Charlie Willis had already telephoned to the engine house, and there was nothing for Ananias to do but try to save some of the valuables.

"It was an exciting scene, Cap'n Charlie says. The widder was hollering for Ananias to go in and save her pocketbook and her gold watch from under her pillow, and Miss Phoebe was screeching at him if he loved her to go and do the same kindness for her.

"So Ananias, being brave in some ways, tied a handkerchief over his mouth and sailed into the house. He had to grope his way around upstairs to find their pillows with the treasures under them and not trying to save anything of his own he staggered downstairs again and gave the widder a bundle tied in a handkerchief and another one just like it to Miss Phoebe. Then, being a little man and not much stamina to him, he just fainted away from swallowing too much smoke. Just then the fire company arrived, towing the engine, and by the time they'd flooded the widder's dining room and kitchen they discovered that the fire was in the stove and nowhere else, but the smoke was all over the house.

"Cap'n Charlie says that them three was the maddest people he ever saw. Both the wimmen being caught dishabilly, as Miss Pringle said, was bad enough, but it seems that Ananias had mixed up the bundles under their pillows, and while the widder had Miss Phoebe's watch and pocketbook and a small cargo of Ananias' poems to her (one of them was called, 'To my Phoebe Bird,') why Miss Phoebe had the widder's watch and money and a package of Ananias' love letters tied with a blue ribbon—Maria, do you sleep with my love letters tied with a blue ribbon under your pillow?' demanded the captain, turning to his good wife.

"Do go on, Barnabas. We're dying to hear the rest of it," urged Maria.

"Well, the rest of it was a terrible wrangle between the widder and Miss Phoebe Pringle when the two ladies exchanged private and personal property and private and personal opinions of each other, and their opinions wasn't flattering, neither. As for Ananias, when he found out what had happened he give himself up for lost, and naturally he come to me to weather the gale. Miss Phoebe went hot foot back to Little River, while the widder's been busy cleaning up her house."

"And where's Ananias been keeping himself all this time?" asked Maria suspiciously.

Captain Barnabas removed his pipe from his lips and pointed out to the bay where his ship, the Indus, lay at anchor, enjoying an idle old age in her home port.

"Ananias shipped aboard the Indus the very next day, and if you look you will see his little dory bobbing out toward her now. I reckon he's got his victuals in a basket, and he cooks for himself, and he'll have a quiet, peaceful time until the widder Rowell forgives him and sends for him to come back again."

"How about Miss Phoebe Pringle and her blighted affections?" I asked curiously.

"Homely as a scrag fence!" interpolated Maria.

"Miss Phoebe—why, she took her blighted affections back to Little River, and she's having the poems that Ananias wrote to her all printed in the Little River Echo with her own name signed to 'em, and Ananias is bitter against her, but he don't dare say a word."

"That's the punishment of the deceitful and the cat-footed," said Maria as she arose to prepare supper.

AUSTRIANS TIRED OF WAR.

Neutral Says They Hate Germans Almost as Much as Foes.

GENEVA, April 12.—A neutral who lived many years in Austria relates the following impressions gained during a series of wartime journeys in Austria:

"The terrible effects of the war are at once visible on arrival in Vienna. The large restaurants brilliantly lighted at night and resounding with music of Tzigane orchestras were almost empty. Occasionally a few boulevardiers strolled in to take places at tables, but rarely to dine there. At Vienna on a day when the fall of the krone was particularly accentuated I was able to hear the lamentations of the public at the pay desks of various banks and the phrase constantly recurred: 'Germany has deceived us. Germany has lied to us.'

"The constant news of victories spread by the Wolff Agency have no longer the desired effect upon the Austrian people. I heard the following remarks made by a high court official: 'If our armies were not so inextricably tied to the German armies we should have made separate peace long ago.'

"Austria has in store for the Kaiser more than one surprise. For the moment, however, the Germans dominate the country and nothing astonishes the 'Germanizers' in Austria than to find that their allies detest them almost as much as their enemies."

ODD WAR-TIME MARRIAGES

Women of Enemy Countries Married to Become Citizens of France

In French law, a foreign woman marrying a Frenchman becomes French. But war time demands different measures, and a bill was laid before Parliament allowing marriages between foreign women and Frenchmen only after leave has been obtained from the French Minister of Justice, and revoking certain marriages of the kind previously contracted. Last year a German woman of considerable means married a shoeblack living in a Paris slum, and in exchange for the privilege of bearing his name made him an allowance for life. The woman has since come to live in Paris as a French subject. Another female enemy subject, a rich Hungarian woman of thirty-five, married a stonemason of seventy-four, a laborer, who cannot even read or write.

The Best Cooks

CRISCO is liked best by the good cooks—by those who take real pride in their meals.

It was produced for the woman who wants to improve her cooking and at the same time keep down her expenses.

When you use Crisco, you can make cakes that are as rich and as tasty as if they had been made with the best of creamery butter. Yet Crisco costs no more than ordinarily good lard.

CAREER OF COCHIN

Philosopher and Friend of Greece Is Famous Frenchman

M. Denys Cochin, France's Minister of State, has just finished a visit to Greece as France's Official Representative. He is an extremely popular man in Greece, for M. Cochin has always shown himself to be on the side of Greece whenever the Great Powers have brought pressure to bear on the Balkans. That was one of the reasons why he was chosen to visit Athens, and it was in recognition of his warm sympathy for King Constantine's country that Athens gave him the Freedom of her City. Only the most distinguished foreigners ever receive that Freedom, which is even more jealously guarded than that of the City of London. Moreover, he was cheered in the streets of Athens as only one other foreigner—Lord Kitchener—ever has been cheered.

Curiously enough, however, M. Cochin, who was born in the early fifties, has never been a very strong Greek scholar, and an interesting story is told in that connection. He went through the Franco-Prussian War as a sergeant in the 8th Lancers, and won the coveted Military Medal. Afterwards he went up for his degree at the University of Paris. The professor who examined him said, "Your Greek is pretty poor; but I see you wear the Military Medal, so you may have your degree."

But M. Cochin is an intensely clever man. He is one of the greatest philosophers and thinkers France has produced in the last twenty years, ranking with the famous Herbert Spencer. Like most clever men he is very simple in his way of living, but unlike them he is also very simple in his speaking. He has the reputation of being one of the clearest of all speakers in the French Parliament, always using the right word in the right place. Even King Constantine could not have misunderstood what M. Cochin said to him.

I am convinced that after the war the people of this country will not be prepared to resume trading relations with the Germans on the conditions which existed before the war.—Sir J. Walton, M.P.

A Double Sell.

A double hoax in a single sentence was perpetrated by the late John Hollingshead, an Englishman. He wrote, "When Lord Morton was killed he was living in Macclesfield house, Carrara street, Soho, at the back of Lansdowne house, a site now occupied by the Regent Palace club."

Bombay's Water.

Bombay gets its water supply from three artificial lakes that depend upon the rainfall in the monsoon season for their replenishment.

The Crisis.

The crisis has a fondness for bright colors, and yet prudence leads the little creature to choosing its nest to select the least conspicuous hues. It also shows considerable skill in attaching a string to its hanging nest and fastening it securely by a number of twigs and a light to, a branch above in order to prevent the weight of the young brood from breaking the branch from which the nest is suspended.

Had Palpitation
OF THE HEART
ALSO WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

When the heart begins to palpitate it will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over your whole system, accompanied by weak, fainting and dizzy spells, and if you should happen to wake up in the night with your heart palpitating, and that "all gone" sinking sensation, you feel as if you were surely going to die.

When you feel this way, you may be sure that both your heart and nerves are out of order, and what you require is a real good heart and nerve tonic; one that will build up and strengthen both the heart and nerve system.

For this purpose nothing can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to take your Heart and Nerve Pills, so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better in a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble, ever since childhood, and finds great relief by using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Forced To Leave School, Had St. Vitus' Dance

Astonishing Cure of This Nervous Trouble Effected by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Here is a case where life-long gratitude will be felt for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. As a school girl and in later life Dr. Chase's Nerve Food came to the rescue when the nerves gave out. Now a healthy, robust woman happily gives the credit to this great food cure for restoring her to health and strength.

Miss Sadie M. White, 86 Waterloo street, Fredericton, N.B. writes:—

"When ten years of age a friend of mine had St. Vitus' Dance and she had to leave school and go under a doctor's care. Instead of benefiting by the treatment she appeared to get worse. Her tonsils and tongue became so swollen that she could scarcely take any nourishment. For two weeks she was this way and then took convulsions and nearly choked to death. She was ordered to the hospital, but soon got worse again. I recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to her and she used nine boxes, steadily growing better. Three years later a severe fright brought on the nervous trouble again, and she suffered everything a human being could endure. Her mother bought a dozen boxes of Nerve Food, and with this treatment she was fully restored. I wish you could see her now, a strong, healthy, robust woman with two lovely babies. She still uses the Nerve Food when she feels out of sorts, but has had no return of the old nervous trouble."

For weak, puny, nervous children there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to enrich the blood, restores the starved nerves and start them on the way to health. When they fail to get proper nourishment from the food they eat, this food cure presents the necessary ingredients in condensed and easily assimilated form, and strength and vigor is restored. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

GREAT PEACE CONGRESS FEARED BY GERMANS

Government Urged to Make Separate Treaties With Small Belligerents Without Delay.

ZURICH, April 11.—How peace will be made, in a great congress or by separate treaties, is a question attracting more and more attention among international jurists in both groups of belligerents, though perhaps more especially in Germany. There England's determination to prevent the conclusion of separate peace treaties meets with the bitterest opposition. A congress on the lines of the famous gathering in Vienna, just over a century ago, would, it is argued, be fatal to the interests of Germany. For the Central Powers separate peace treaties are held to be absolutely necessary.

One of the most famous German authorities on international law, Privy Councillor Professor Karl Binding, who has devoted much attention to what he calls the "Technique of Peace," and who is a firm opponent of all ideas of peace congress, says Germany and her allies would be hopelessly outvoted in such deliberations, and what the soldiers have won the diplomatists would lose.

9 YEARS

I suffered with an abscess on my face," writes Mrs. Herbert Cox, of Port McNichol, Ont. "I tried everything and received medical treatment for some time, but in vain. Finally the doctor advised an operation, which was performed, but instead of improving the sore became worse. I had despaired of ever finding a cure, when a friend recommended Zam-Buk. I tried it, with the result that before long the poison was drawn out and the sore began to heal. Perseverance effected a complete cure, and now not even a scar remains."

Zam-Buk is equally good for eczema, blood-poisoning, ulcers, boils, piles, burns, cuts, and all skin injuries. All druggists, 50c. box, 2 for $1.25, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

"WHIRLPOOL BATHS"

Latest Medical Invention for Wounded and Suffering Soldiers.

The "whirlpool bath" is the latest medical invention. It is described in a London medical periodical as follows:

"The wounded soldier whose wound has become stiff furnishes one of the great problems of the present day. The problem has been approached from various directions, but so far the most successful work of alleviation seems to be that carried on at the Grand Palais, which consists in the use of the so-called 'whirlpool bath.' The bath is designed for the arm and the leg. By means of it a whirl of water at very high temperature—120 degrees Fahrenheit—and pressure is applied to the limb for about twenty minutes. The relief to pain is remarkable. After the bath the limb can usually be manipulated with freedom."

BABY IDENTIFIED BY DOG

Nobody Knew Lost Child, but Kennel Club President Knew Pet Puppy.

Little Jimmy Clark of Allentown, Pa., 2 years old and able to walk but unable to talk, wandered from his home, and rambling to the main street, a mile away, got lost.

The family fox terrier, Pete, was with him. After a while the child got lonely and hungry and began to cry, but people who attempted to get near were chased off by the dog. Nobody knew the little boy, and he couldn't tell.

Finally Dan Ritter, president of the Kennel Club, came along. Mr. Ritter is said to know every dog in town, and after identifying Pete Clark, little Jimmy was soon restored to his alarmed mother.

Sugar is retailing at $7.25 for the finest quality of granulated. This is the regular price, although it is stated that some sugar is selling for less. However, the market is decidedly firm, and if it continues to maintain the present situation will likely go higher when the months of peak demand arrive with the preserving season.

Maple syrup is selling at 40 and 50 cents a quart. Considerable quantities are coming in from the Eastern townships of Quebec and from various sections of Ontario. The quality has been reported very good, doubtless due, in a measure, to the recent Government restrictions.

Ladder Slipped--Omemee Man Fell Against Window

OMEMEE, April 13.— Mr. Arthur Williamson met with a painful accident. He had gone with a long extension ladder to remove the storm windows from Mr. Mulligan's store, and had taken off some and had gone back to remove one. He ascended to the top and the ladder slipped and he fell to the ground. In falling the ladder broke through a window, and Mr. Williamson cut his hand on the broken glass and parts of three fingers on his left hand were removed. He also got a severe gash over the eye, requiring three stitches. The injury was reduced by Dr. Earle, and he is doing as well as could be expected, though suffering from shock.

Mr. Joseph Jamieson, a respected citizen of Emily township, was buried in the Presbyterian cemetery today. He had an ulcer on his thumb and blood-poisoning set in, and he passed away. His bereaved wife and family have the sincerest sympathy of the community in their sad bereavement.

Mrs. R. J. Mulligan has returned from Toronto, after a month's visit with friends there.

The Omemee soldiers marched from here to Reaboro and back. They went up in one hour and fifteen minutes, and returned in one hour and ten minutes. Pretty good, considering the state of the roads.

Col. Anderson, Major McCrea and Lieut. Mulligan, of the 109th Batt., Lindsay, spent the week-end in Omemee.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

7685

Just now sport style dresses are considered very chic, even when one on this order supplies as a practical garment for the woman who has not enough time for sports to invest in a dress for this wear alone. A very good example of a dress for practical wear that is not necessarily plain and that in its detail suggests "sport" is shown in the illustration. No. 7,685. In this we have a lady's dress with a four gored skirt, built upon the high or regulation waist line. The yoke front and back, and the new and stylish collar for an overlay, are in excellent taste on the waist, having two plaits in the centre of each front. Below the bust line they lose themselves in adding to the fulness that is the mode in waists to-day. The closing is in the front. The four gored skirt has a graceful sweep, and a patch pocket having a buttoned lap adds to its beauty. Contrasting goods form the cuffs on the short sleeves, collar and outside belt that conceals the joining of waist to skirt. Just three buttons and a tie ornament the garment, with the patch pockets essential details.

Pattern comes in sizes 36 to 44 bust measure. To make in size 38 will require 5 yards 36 inches goods and ¼ yard contrasting goods.

To obtain the pattern send 2 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

GERMAN ATTACK COMPLETELY CHECKED

CANADIANS PRAISED FOR GALLANT FIGHTING

GERMAN ATTACK ON HILL NO. 304 IS COMPLETELY CHECKED BY FRENCH GUNS

Direct Attack on Keystone Position Stopped by Curtain of Fire From French Artillery---Only a Few Detachments Succeeded in Leaving Their Own Trenches---Heavy Artillery Preparations Resumed.

FOE BRINGS UP FRESH FORCES

PARIS, April 13.—(French Official)—The Germans launched their first direct infantry assault on Hill 304, one of the keystones to the French defence, northwest of Verdun late yesterday afternoon. The War Office announced to-day that the assault was stopped by a curtain of fire from French guns. The Germans emerged from the Malancourt Woods, east of the strongly fortified height. They immediately came under the hot fire of French guns from the neighbouring sector, and but a few German detachments succeeded in leaving their own trenches. The attack was completely stopped.

The night was calm on the whole Verdun front, and this (Thursday) morning, heavy artillery operations were resumed at daybreak. The Germans for the past twenty-four hours have been bringing up fresh forces to the Verdun front, concentrating apparently for another heavy smash, west of the Meuse. Some of the fresh divisions are reported to be coming from the Russian front. The German front in France and Flanders has been so thoroughly stripped of all reserves that no more large forces can be withdrawn for action at Verdun. To protect the thin German line west of Verdun the Germans have established a briatling array of machine guns.

French Government Has Fragments of Torpedo and Names of Crew

PARIS, April 13.—The French Government has in its possession not only thirteen fragments of the torpedo shot against the Sussex, but also the names of the captain and members of the crew of the attacking submarine, it was officially announced to-day. This information, the Press Bureau stated, was obtained from the officers and crew of a German submarine captured April 5.

98 Per Cent. of The People of New England States Believe Allies Will Win

TORONTO, Ont., April 13.—Carleton E. Hoadley, of New Haven, Conn., decalred at the Royal Arcanum banquet last night that ninety-eight per cent. of the people of the New England States believed that the Allies would win this war, and never at any time thought anything else. Mr. Hoadley said that if the British had treated all their colonies years ago, as she has treated them since, one flag would, in all probability be flying to-day over the whole North American Continent.

BERLIN, April 13.—Weather conditions prevented the renewal last night of German infantry attacks around Verdun, the War Office announced this afternoon. Only artillery duels occurred on both banks of the Meuse, and in the Woevre region.

Southeast of Albert, German troops raided English trenches taking seventeen prisoners. Northeast of Compiegne, French gas attack failed.

GENEVA, April 13.—The Agensia Libera says that the Kaiser has returned to Potsdam and is ill, due to worry over the failure of the Verdun offensive and the heavy sacrifices of life.

LONDON, April 13.—The British steamers Robert Adamson, 2,938 tons, and the Angus, 3,619 tons, have been torpedoed. The crew of the Robert Adamson has been landed. The Press Bureau stated that the Angus, which was sunk in the Mediterranean, was unarmed.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, April 13.—Prepared for any eventuality the American forces will continue the hunt for Villa until orders to discontinue the chase are received or Villa is killed or captured, Major-General Funston stated to-day. Carranza soldiers and citizens fired on American troops in Parral, but nobody was hit.

Officer Takes Life in Hands on Chance Of Drawing Germans From Trenches

Special to The Examiner:

With Marshal von Hindenburg's Army in Lake Narocz Region, Russia, April 12, by courier to Berlin, April 13.—Russian patrol work in this region often is remarkable, and distinguished for audacity and courage.

In a forest near the town of Lyntupi a patrol of 13 Russian spies hid in an abandoned German dugout in the course of a night march southward to destroy a big bridge on the River Willija with high explosives.

Desperate for food, they finally entrusted their safety to a Polish forester, ordering him to bring food. The forester promptly gave the Germans information. The Germans surrounded the dugout, throwing in three hand grenades. On entering the dugout they discovered ten Russians killed by grenades and three by bullets. The Russian lieutenant had shot two comrades, not killed by grenades, and then himself in order to escape execution as spies, for the patrol was not in uniform.

Another audacity was performed during a Russian attack on the German trenches. From the darkness came a voice calling in perfect German: "What is the matter with you? Are you soldiers or are you Germans, are you men? Why don't you go forward and attack the Russians? Are you afraid?"

Bewildered by these words coming up to them direct from the nearest wire entanglements, the Germans turned a searchlight in the direction, discovering the speaker to be a Russian officer who had taken his hands on the chance of drawing the Germans from the trenches. His audacity cost his life, for instantly he fell before a volley.

This Appointment Passport To Beck?

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, April 13.—The redrafted McGarry Bill regarding the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario contains sweeping reforms. It will be presented to the Legislature probably this week. Among other things it provides for the appointment of a comptroller appointed by the Cabinet to countersign checks and supervise the form of accounting used. Otherwise powers are given. Leading Conservatives here, however, express the opinion that Sir Adam Beck will still head the Commission's activities.

TORONTO, April 13.—Special cables received here to-day say the Canadians by gallant fighting on Sunday recovered the craters and trenches lost to the Germans last week.

New Yorker Admits He Was Superintendent of a Factory in Hoboken Where Bombs Were Manufactured

TO BLOW UP SHIPS

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, April 13.—A full confession of the details of the plot to blow up ships carrying munitions to the Allies has been made by Capt. Charles Von Kleist, a retired sea captain, and one of the four men arrested last night, the police announced to-day. "Sweated" until daybreak, Von Kleist broke down and admitted that he was superintendent of a factory in Hoboken where bombs were made. The police stated certain portions of his confession are being withheld. At various times the factory received sums of money through a man named Hansen. This man, according to the police, was the agent of Von Papen, Boy-Ed and other German officials.

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 13.—A large delegation of prominent men from Toronto, Hamilton, Peterborough, and other points in Ontario reached the Capital this morning to urge the Government to adopt national registration of men of military age, and possibly putting into force the Militia Act, which would mean calling up for service, class by class, all men of military age in Canada. To-morrow they will be joined by influential men from Western Canada until fifty or more of Canada's largest towns and cities will be represented. Delegations have appointments with Premier Borden and the Cabinet for to-morrow.

SUPERVISED PLAYGROUNDS

Committee on Playgrounds Will Make a Collection of Rags

The Playgrounds Committee would again call the attention of the ladies of Peterborough to the collection of rags during May. The Committee is most anxious to have the cooperation and practical assistance of the public through this means to raise funds for a Supervised Playground at the King Edward School. The Committee is well aware that vast quantities of white linen and cotton rags are constantly being collected by the different patriotic societies for Red Cross purposes. This collection is of first importance and should have first consideration by every housekeeper; but besides this old linen there must be a large collection in every home of coloured print and gingham rags, worn out underwear, heavy cottons, such as pique, old stockings, and especially old linen collars and cuffs, breasts of shirts etc., etc. Please help us in this matter; save your old rubbers and carefully put every rag, new and old, into the rag bag, to be called for. Tell your neighbours about this collection, if they have not read about it for themselves, and ask for their cooperation.

U. S. IS ORDERED OUT OF MEXICO

WASHINGTON, April 13.—What is practically a "notice to quit" and get out of Mexican territory, was served by Mexico on Uncle Sam to-day. The situation is regarded as the most serious yet, in reference to Mexican affairs. The communication came to Secretary Lansing from the Mexican Secretary of State ni Carranas's Provisional Government. It says that the American entry to Mexico was never formally agreed to by the Mexican Government, Carransa's army can attend to Villa itself. In some quarters here it is stated that this action on the part of Mexico is inspired by German agents.
